For the second time within a month burglars entered the grocery store of Cayde Bros. at Plymouth. They got some change, three coats, two vests and a lot of cigars. This place has been overrun with hoboes of late.

Mrs. George J. Shaeffer and Mrs. James O. Best, wives of section laborers on the D. & M. road at Prescott, and sisters have been left about $100,000 by their father, Wm. G. Farnsworth of Cincinnati, and their husbands will probably quit railroading.

Eastern capitalists have incorporated the Western Traction Co., capital $1,000,000, to construct an electric line from Benton Harbor to Kalamazoo, touching at Dowagiac, Cassopolis, Paw Paw, Decatur and Allegan. The line will be 90 miles long.

Mrs. E. B. Linsley of Three Rivers, wife of the treasurer of the Sheffield Car Co., was thrown from a carriage by the team of horses becoming frightened at an Air Line car and running away. She was picked up unconscious. She is badly hurt.

The C. O. D. Game.

Albany, N. Y., July 30.—Requisition papers were issued by Gov. Odell for the extradition of "Tom" Sailor, who is wanted at Pittsburg, Pa., for working the "C. O. D." game. Sailor called upon several Pittsburg merchants and ordered goods sent to an address C. O. D. Upon a pretext of going inside for the money, Sailor would leave by a rear door, leaving the messenger who had delivered the goods waiting. Sailor is at present serving a 15 days' sentence at Buffalo, and will be taken to Pittsburg on his release therefrom.

The Collection.

While lecturing his congregation rather strongly on a recent Sunday about slack attendance and small collections a minister of a church in an English city used the following eloquent and forcible sentence: "Yes, brethren, our collection of a little over £3 last Sunday included no fewer than 500 halfpennies. We all know about the widow's mite, and I am sure we are very glad to receive it; but I don't think there are 500 widows in this congregation!"

Witness My Hand.

In the early days only a few scholars, priests and clerks knew how to write. It was then customary to sign a document by smearing the hand with ink and impressing it upon the paper, accompanied by the words, "Witness my hand." Afterward the seal was introduced as a substitute for the hand mark and was used with the words above quoted, the two forming the signature. This is the origin of the expression as used in modern documents.

Just as Bad.

Educated Egyptian—You have no wonderful hieroglyphics in your country, sir; no mysterious inscriptions, no undecipherable relics of an ancient literature whose secrets the wise men of the world have tried for ages to discover.

Tourist—No, we haven't any of those things, but (brightening up) we've got our "railway guides."—London Fun.

Novel Ammunition.

During the sieges of mediæval times it was very common for the beleaguers to throw from their catapults and other military engines dead bodies of dogs, swine, together with pieces of horseflesh and similar carrion into the city or castle besieged in order that the defenders might by the stench of this putridity be forced to a surrender.

Well Concealed.

"What was the matter with Proudfoot that he made such a fool of himself last night?"

"Oh, somebody had offended him unwittingly, and he was standing on his dignity."

"Oh, was he? I wondered what had become of it."—New York Commercial Advertiser.

RECONCENTRADO CAMPS.

Chicago, July 30.—"The horror of the situation in the Boer reconcentrado camps of South Africa is appalling. Men, women and children are dying at a rate that would mean the extermination of the Boer race in nine years. The people are cooped up in unsanitary quarters where they are unable to secure sufficient food or clothing, with disease making terrible ravages among them."

Thus was the situation in the Transvaal and Orange Free State depicted last night at the Christian Reformed church by Rev. Herman D. Van Brockhuizen, late pastor of the leading Dutch Reformed church at Pretoria. He has come to the United States to raise money to alleviate the sufferings of his countrymen who are huddled together in refugee camps.

It is the intention of Rev. Brockhuizen to travel through the country, speaking in churches of various denominations and describing the real situation throughout South Africa. The funds he is able to secure will be sent direct to Pretoria.

DESPERATE STREET FIGHT.

Two Men Killed and Another Fatally Wounded.

Knoxville, Tenn., July 30.—A special from Crossville tells of the killing of Policeman Pink Pass and W. E. Knox, and the fatal wounding of Shirley Pass, son of the policeman, in a street fight at Isoline, Tenn., a mining town eight miles north of Crossville. Policeman Pass went into a section of the place known as Negro town to quell a disturbance and became engaged in a row with Knox, who pulled an ugly-looking knife. The policeman then shot him dead. Chief of Police Hill P. Lowery and E. E. Swofford started for the scene of the disturbance to arrest Policeman Pass, but were met by Shirley Pass and were told not to go. Hot words passed and the officers were ordered back by Pass, who flourished a pistol. Swofford then shot Shirley Pass through the left lung, fatally injuring him. The officers went on and found Policeman Pass quarreling with a crowd of negroes, but soon left. As soon as he heard of his son's shooting, Pass looked up Lowery and Swofford and opened fire on Swofford. Swofford emptied his pisol and ran when Pass turned toward Lowery, the latter shot him dead. Both Lowery and Swofford surrendered.

Major Taylor Won.

New York, July 30.—"Major" Taylor, the colored cycle rider of Worcester, Mass., duplicated his victory of Saturday when he beat Frank Kramer at Manhattan Beach in the half-mile circuit championship, in a similar event on the indoor ten-lap track at the Madison Square Garden last night. Kramer was defeated in the semi-final heat by W. S. Fenn, who met Taylor in the final heat. Taylor won by three-quarters of a wheel's length.

Artificial Stone.

Quarrymen and stone dressers will probably be gradually crowded out of their occupation by the use of artificial stone. In the manufacture of this stone the sand is heated and the cement added to the amount of 12 per cent of the mixture. The steel molds are filled with the dry material and moved into an immense cylinder, which is closed and bolted. Boiling water is then turned in under pressure sufficient to force it all through the sand in the molds. The cement slacks, but the steel molds do not permit any expansion to occur, and the stone is formed and dried under an immense pressure. The result is a very hard stone, which can be supplied in shapes desired and much cheaper than the natural stone.

Noncooking Restaurants.

Odd as it may appear to dwellers in small cities, some of the down town restaurants of New York are in buildings in which no cooking is allowed. Some of the busiest of the midday restaurants purchase all their meats and stews already cooked and merely heat them through again before serving them to patrons. This branch of the restaurant business has reached such proportions that the mere operation of cooking for such places has become an established business, and owners of ovens thrive at it.—New York Sun.

If young ladies think sores, pimples and red noses look well with a bridal veil and orange blossoms, it's all right. Yet Rocky Mountain Tea would drive them away. 35c. John J. Orr.

Soapsuds Dessert.

The tribes on the coast of British Columbia hold a festival in the autumn, the crowning item of which is the partaking of a few spoonfuls of a bowl of soapsuds.

They gather in the dingy huts, which are hung with the staple food—dried salmon. For light they stick into the ground, head downward, a silvery fish about five inches long, set fire to the tail, and they have a torch, for the fish burns steadily.

After eating of various unsavory foods there comes the great treat. This is a bowl of a frothy, soapy mixture, obtained by crushing in a not overclean manner the sapoliti, or soap berries, and squeezing out the juice. This is as much like soapsuds as it is possible to conceive. The natives sip it from spoons of black wood, neatly carved, of which they think a great deal.

The Chinaman's Dress.

Those who understand the subject have to admit that when it comes to the question of rational dress the Chinaman has very much the best of it. American clothes are not made for the performance of much stooping or domestic gymnastics, but the Chinaman, in his loose, easy fitting clothes, is as free to stoop, jump, run or turn handsprings as a small boy in bathing. In a Chinese suit of clothes you can lie down and sleep with the same amount of comfort that you can stand up and walk.

One Way of Looking at It.

It Dazzles the World.

No discovery in medicine has ever created one quarter of the excitement that has been caused by Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. It's severest tests have been on hopeless victims of consumption, pneumonia, hemorrhage, pleurisy and bronchitis, thousands of whom it has restored to perfect health. For coughs, colds, asthma, croup, hay fever, hoarseness and whooping cough it is the quickest, surest cure in the world. It is sold by C. A. Wright who guarantees satisfaction or refunds money. Large bottles 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free.

MYSTERIOUS CASE.

Disappearance and Supposed Suicide of Chris Harm.

Omaha, Neb., July 30.—The disappearance and supposed suicidal drowning of Chris Harm, a Ute, Iowa, merchant, a few weeks ago, promises to reveal an interesting story. It is intimated that Harm did not drown himself and that back of it all is an effort to realize on an insurance policy for $4,000 and to avoid pending suits for $40,000.

The suicide theory is supported by finding in Soldier creek a badly decomposed body supposed to be that of Harm, of which positive identification could not be made. The theory is advanced that a body had been dressed in Harm's clothing and thrown into the creek.

Although all efforts to locate the missing man in this vicinity have been futile, two persons claim positively to have seen him, one in Omaha, and the other near Mapleton, Ia.

DIDN'T HEED WARNING.

Little Rock, Ark., July 30.—A special from Camden, Ark., says news has reached here from Leake township, Nevada county, that a party of white men sent word to Lige Seigler, a negro, that they would attempt to whip him last night and received work back that some of them would get killed if they came.

The party went out and the report is that Siegler and his son shot into the party, killing Lewis Haynie, brother of State Senator Haynie, and Hop Halton, a brother of John Halton, a prominent merchant at Stephens. There are 400 negroes and 30 white people in this township, and it is said racial troubles have been brewing for some time. At last reports, parties of white people had left for the scene of the trouble from Waldo and Stephens, and the negro's house was still surrounded.

PRICE OF LIVING.

Unknown Persons Demand $2,000 on Pain of Death.

Mattoon, Ill., July 30.—Two thousand dollars is the price demanded by unknown persons from Richard Hearn, a wealthy retired farmer of this city, for the safety of himself and only daughter Maude, aged 13 years. A week ago Hearn received a letter in which the writer demanded that the money be placed in a tin can at the southeast corner of the Episcopal church. Hearn treated it as a joke, but a second missive stated that failure to comply would result in the girl's abduction and his own death. When both letters failed to bring the money a third letter was sent, which so alarmed the father that he revealed the affair to the police.

The last letter said that this was Hearn's final apportunity, for he and the girl would be captured and the former would witness the horrifying spectacle of his daughter with her eyes burned out and heart cut from her body. Then he would also be killed.

Hearn is worth $75,000, but thinks best not to accede to the extortioners' demands. His daughter is not allowed to leave his side, and while the police are trying to capture the would-be kidnaper the residence will be closely guarded. Several persons are suspected by the police.

Lives to Tell the Tale.

Seattle, Wash., July 30.—The first authoritative account of the recent killing of three prospectors on Unimak island, Alaska, by Indians, has reached Seattle by letter from the survivor of the attack, D. Jackson of Idaho. It is that P. J. Rooney of Seattle, C. S. Sullivan and F. Sullivan, brothers, from Butte, Mont., and himself landed at Cape Lipin, Unimak island, May 12 to prospect the country. On June 7, while they were prospecting, Indians stole their guns and ammunition and killed three of them on their return to camp. Jackson escaped and finally reached False Pass, where he was rescued.

Made an Explanation.

New York, July 30.—Surveyor Croft explained that the baggage of passengers on the steamship Ponce, which arrived on Sunday from Porto Rico, was examined in spite of the recent free trade declaration to make sure that no contraband, such as cigars, tobaccos, wines or liquors, all of them subject to an internal revenue tax were smuggled through.

Columbia Beats Constitution.

Newport, R. I., July 30.—The Columbia defeated the Constitution, boat for boat, in a splendid race by two minutes and 54 seconds and won the $1,000 cup presented by Col. John Jacob Astor. Her victory was decisive and convincing. The behavior of the Constitution on the other hand was disappointing in the extreme, and last evening Mr. Duncan announced that his boat would not take part in further races until her rigging had been altered. He declared that the Constitution is not doing herself justice; that she is not going well and that there is no use in racing her further until she is put in proper shape.

Glenn Jury Still Out.

Parkersburg, W. Va., July 30.—The jury in the Ellis Glenn case is still out. The 12 men were brought into court Monday morning after spending Sunday in custody of the jailer and immediately resumed their deliberations. At noon they asked for instructions, and at 3 o'clock notified the court of their failure to reach an agreement. The court gave them additional instructions and sent them back to the jury room, and at 4:30 o'clock they again said that they could not agree. They were then excused till today.

Old Militia Elections and New.

From the American Revolution to the year 1823 the officers of the militia of the state of New York had been appointed by the council of appointment upon the recommendation of commanding officers of divisions, brigades and regiments, and the promotions were generally made according to rank and seniority. Under the new constitution and the militia law of 1823, and in accordance with the democratic spirit of the period, the election of military officers became the established usage and has continued until the present day. The election of officers in 1823 and following year was attended with considerable ceremony—officers attending them in full uniform, and noncommissioned officers and privates in undress uniform.—Clark's History.

Unselfish.

"So you proposed to Miss Chillers?"

"Yes," answered Willie Washington.

"You must have known she would reject you."

"Of course. But it is an old saying that women can't keep a secret, and I was afraid she would get to comparing notes. I had proposed to all the other girls, and I didn't want her to feel slighted."—Washington Star.

An Outrage.

Mrs. Jones—Are you aware, Mrs. Skinbone, that your dog has just bitten my little Willie?

Mrs. Skinbone—What, your Willie, who has only just got over scarlet fever? Oh, Mrs. Jones, if anything should happen to Fido I'd never forgive you.

Softening the Parting.

Twelve was on the point of striking.

"To think," cried the fair girl in anguish, "we will never see each other again till tomorrow night!"

"Bear up, sweet one!" was his encouraging remark. "Time will pass. Besides, I'll write to you when I get home and in the morning."—Philadelphia Times.

TWO MEN KILLED

Meet Untimely Deaths Under Distressing Circumstances

CHARGED UP TO INTOXICATION

Sad Ending of a Young Man Who Lived With His Mother—The Other Left a Widow and Three Young Children to Mourn His Loss.

Alpena, Mich., Aug. 2.—Neil Campbell, aged 20, a well known Alpena young man, was killed on the railroad at Bolton, 12 miles north of here. He had been with his mother and brother on a farm near that station for the past few months. He went to a dance Wednesday night, and, it is said, he was intoxicated when the train struck him. The engine and one car passed over the body, crushing the chest, head and cutting off both legs.

Owosso, Mich., Aug. 2.—Fred Jenkins, a farmer residing near Easton, was instantly killed at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. He fell off a load of lumber just after he had started for home and the rear wheel passed over his neck, breaking it. Jenkins was intoxicated, as the result of an all-day celebration at the harvest festival. He came near being arrested for reckless driving a few minutes before the accident. The body is at Knapp & Smith's undertaking rooms, and neighbors broke the sad news to his wife, who, with three children, the oldest but 5 years of age, is awaiting his return. Jenkins was 35 years old.

More Trouble in Sight.

Niles, Mich., Aug. 2.—There is more trouble in sight for stockholders of the defunct First National bank. Depositors declare that in case Johnson, the defaulting cashier, is able to show at his trial that the bank was insolvent when he became cashier 15 years ago, they will sue the stockholders for the amount of the dividends the latter have received during all these years. It is taken for granted that Johnson will claim that he speculated with the funds of the bank in an endeavor to float the institution. The dividends paid by the First National, while assisting in maintaining the apparent solvency of the bank, were such as to give the concern the reputation of being the best paying banking institution in Berrien county. However, the 100 per cent assessment has practically broke many of the stockholders, and these latter will have little to fear from a law suit.

MARYLAND DEMOCRATS

Nominate a Ticket and Adopt an Anti-Colored Vote Platform.

Baltimore, Aug. 2.—The democratic state convention, which met here yesterday, declared that the purpose of the party, if successful in the coming election, is to eliminate the negro from politics in Maryland, if such a thing be possible under the constitution of the state. Upon this, the paramount issue of the campaign, will stand the candidates nominated for state offices and those chosen in the various county and district conventions as candidates for places in the legislature of 1902, which body will elect a United States senator to succeed George L. Wellington. That his successor, in the event of democratic victory, will be Arthur Pue Gorman is settled beyond question, although no formal announcement of his candidacy has as yet been made. The nominal purpose for which the convention met was to select candidates for the offices of controller and clerk of the court of appeals, and it fulfilled this task by unanimously naming Dr. Joshua W. Hering of Carroll and J. Frank Turner of Talbot to succeed themselves in the places mentioned.

BEAUTIFY WASHINGTON.

Will Go Back to the Plan of a Century and a Half Ago.

New York, Aug. 2.—Frederick Law Olmstead of Boston, D. H. Burnham of Chicago and Charles F. McKim of New York, who were appointed a committee to devise means for beautifying Washington, D. C., returned yesterday on the Deutschland. They visited the principal European cities in search of suggestions for their work. Charles Moore, clerk of the senate committee on District of Columbia, accompanied the commission. Mr. Olmstead says:

"We spent two months in Washington before we started, working out the general plan of improvement. Our purpose in going abroad was to study the solution of similar problems in Europe.

"Broadly speaking, we intend to go back to the plan made a century and a half ago by Charles Peter l'Enfant, under the direction of George Washington. It is an extraordinary good plan, and we shall attempt to bring about a realization of it in a general way, so far as is practicable."

TAKEN BY SURPRISE.

Two Bank Looters Arrested and $16,000 Recovered.

Goshen, Ind., Aug. 2.—Pricate detectives employed by an Akron, O., banking institution have made an important arrest in a local gambling den, which resulted in recovering nearly $16,000 in currency and gold coin. The two men who were captured had rifled a vault in the Akron bank ten days ago and since then had been shadowed.

The men, who are said to be residents of Elkhart county, were taken completely by surprise and were hurried to Elkhart, where the booty was believed to have been secreted. At Elkhart the robbers led the wty to the outskirts of the city, where they had buried their plunder, and every dollar was recovered. The detectives and robbers later left for Akron. The bank directors, fearing a panic, have kept the facts secret.

HANGED BY A MOB

Infuriated Citizens Lynch Two Women and a Man

FOR MURDER OF MAN AND WIFE

Daughter Confessed to a Knowledge of the Crime and Said That Her Mother and Brother Were Both Implicated in the Murder.

Carrollton, Miss., Aug. 2.—The murder of Mr. and Mrs. Taliaferro culminated last night in the lynching of Betsie McCray, her son, Belfield McCray, and daughter, Ida McCray, all colored.

The mob, composed of about 500 white citizens of Carroll county, who marched to the jail in order, demanded the keys from Jailer Duke, proceeded to the cells of the unfortunate negroes, bound them by the necks and hands and carried them to the corporate limits of the town, where they hung them to a tree by the public roadside and riddled their bodies with bullets.

The mob resisted the first appeals of Judge W. F. Stephens and Hon. W. S. Hill, who stood on the steps of the jail and appealed to the mob in the name of law and order. They even followed the mob to the cell doors with their arms around the necks of the leaders, pleading to let the law take its course, but with no effect.

Ida McCray confessed to knowledge of the crime and stated that her mother, Betsie and brother Belfield, helped commit the murder. She further implicated others, who will probably be dealt with. Mrs. McCray refused to make any statement.

Gov. Longino arrived on the scene by special train from Jackson a few minutes after the hanging.

Carried Out a Threat.

Concession to Superstition.

"Thirteen dollars and a half seems a high price for such a comparatively short trip," said the man with the traveling bag in his hand.

"We thought people would rather pay that than $13," replied the agent of the steamer line with an explanatory and apologetic cough.—Chicago Tribune.

CADILLAC

Chicago, Aug. 2.—In the first of the additional trial races for the Canada cup, sailed yesterday between the Cadillac and the Milwaukee, the former boat scored a victory, defeating its rival by about nine minutes.

An excellent start was secured, the boats going over the line very close together, the Cadillac having the better of the start by about two seconds. She went well to windward of the Milwaukee and maintained that position throughout the run for the first buoy. During the first hour the Milwaukee did the faster work, and when the boats came about on their first tack, in making the first buoy, she had a lead of about half a mile. She went around the buoy well in the lead, but from that time to the finish the Cadillac gained steadily. Three miles from the finishing line she caught up with the Milwaukee, and the racewas ended there and then. The Cadillac increased her lead all the way to the line and had a substantial lead as she went over the mark.

The additional races are to be best two in three, and the second race will be sailed today.

PRESS GAGGING DID'T GO.

London Daily Mail Gains a Victory Over the War Office.

London, Aug. 2.—The contest between the war office and the Daily Mail has terminated in a victory for the paper. The war office had not only cut off the Daily Mail's South African casualty lists and other official news, but had also ordered the various news agencies not to supply the Daily Mail with any official information distributed from the war office. Thereupon the Daily Mail sued the news agencies under its contracts to compel them to deliver the news. The war office then held back bulletins until near the hour for morning papers to go to press. This raised a storm of protest from the provincial papers, and the war office finally capitulated and called off the boycott.

The press gagging aroused bitter criticism among all classes of papers at a time when the government was not too popular and could ill-afford to aggravate popular discontent. Mr. Broderick's personal bereavement in the death of his wife precludes a journalistic celebration of his defeat, but there is much quiet satisfaction over the result in Fleet street.

The weight of all the air on the globe would be eleven and two-thirds trillion pounds if no deduction had to be made for space filled by mountains and land above sea level.

STILL IN SUSPENSE

Steelworkers Still Discussing the Magnates' Proposals

DECIDEDLY OMINOUS OUTLOOK

Discouraging Dispatch Said to Have Been Received From Morgan—Men Say if True, There Will Be One of the Greatest Strikes Ever Known.

Pittsburg, Pa., Aug. 2.—Another day of suspense and the end not yet. The third all-day session of the Amalgamated association executive board has passed without action being taken on the New York conference peace proposals, and another session will be held today. Official confirmation of the status of the steel workers' strike as it was outlined by the Associated Press, was given in the currrent issue of the Amalgamated Joruanl, which is the organ of the association. The executive board of the association is in fact waiting for a word from J. P. Morgan.

After the board had heard from President Shaffer concerning his trip to New York last week it was decided to request a change in the propositions of Mr. Morgan, and sent a message to Mr. Morgan in New York on Tuesday night announcing their decision on this matter. In explanation of this message the Journal says:

"The executive board desires another conference with the representatives of the constituent companies and will remain in the city until an answer is received. Upon the result of that answer will depend whether the strike will be prolonged indefinitely."

The message sent to Mr. Morgan while not so stated, is believed to be an ultimatum to the head of the United States steel corporation. It is viewed as such by the labor leaders about Pittsburg. If the steel workers do not get their demand for this conference the strike will go on indefinitely. None of the officials of the organization would discuss this point They still maintained silence and said they had nothing to give out. At noon after the executive board had been in session all morning and in a formal manner waited for a reply from Mr Morgan, the members decided to make an official denial of the report that there was a lack of harmony in their ranks. To the reporters present they gave out the following:

"We, the members of the general executive board of the Amalgamated association, desire to deny emphatically the reports published expressive of disagreement among us. We are disposing of the work before the committee as fast as its importance will permit.

"No member has expressed any opinion or given any statement of the business, or of the attitude of other members. Nothing has been made public, neither will any report issue from us until a definite conclusion is reached. We are simply trying to reach a settlement which shall be honorable and satisfactory to all concerned."

The secretiveness of the meeting of the Amalgamated men, which has characterized the preceding meetings, was continued yesterday. The members of the executive board gathered early in the morning and remained confined in the conference room of the headquarters all day with the exception of a brief lunch hour. There were the same guards placed outside of the offices and newspaper men were kept back from all approaches. At 4 o'clock in the afternoon President Shaffer, acting on behalf of the board, sent word to the newspaper men that there would be no statement given out for publication and that there would be a meeting of the board today at 10 o'clock to consider matters before it. The meeting did not adjourn at this hour, however, but remained in session until nearly 6 o'clock. During the afternoon Joseph Bishop of the board of arbitration of Ohio was present for some time. Ex-President M. M. Garland of the association was also in the offices for a time, but both of these men left early. They declined to discuss the situation in any form, except to say that they did not know what the probabilities were for a settlement.

Ominous if True.

Pittsburg, Pa., Aug. 2.—The Commercial Gazette today says: "The Amalgamated executive board last night received by telegram a flat refusal from J. Pierpont Morgan to reopen the wage conference where it was broken off at the Hotel Lincoln nearly three weeks ago. The powers of the steel combine insist in this communication that the only basis of settlement will be on the terms which the financial backer of the combine, President C. M. Schwab, and Chairman Gary laid down at the meeting with the amalgamated executive in New York last Saturday."

This morning the answer of Mr. Morgan is expected by mail. There is scarcely a fragment of a hope that the Amalgamated association will back down from its well-known position. The leaders of the workers will, in reply, outline their plans to the steel corporation for a continuation of the great struggle. They will include the stopping of every wheel possible in the works of the combine and the extension of the strike in all possible directions by the Amalgamated association. The day may develop much, but if the combine cannot be made to waver through the influences that will be brought to bear, the great conflict will probably be fought to the bitter end.

A Slight Increase.

Trenton, N. J., Aug. 2.—The Southern Cotton Oil Co. has filed papers increasing its capital stock from $200,000 to $11,000,000. The papers were signed by Samuel T. Morgan, president, and Alan H. Harris, secretary.

Ten Years' Trial

The Story of a Soldier's Struggle

By Brigadier General Charles King

Copyright, 1901, by Charles King

Silently the other bowed and, still standing at the edge of the little patch of firs that crowned the height, took from his pocket a small binocular, carefully studied the groups across the gulch to the west and then swept the line of the Seattle across the Red Water. Those on level with himself were in black silhouette against the pallid western sky; those down across the Red Water were but dimly visible, for the sun was now behind a bank of cloud at the horizon, and it was nearly 5 o'clock. Voices and jeers rising from the foot of the bluff where ran the line of the Big Horn told that many men were still there, but they could not be distinguished. Observant of his duty, Melville had notified the sheriff of the new complication, and together they had driven out of Brentwood by a northeastern road until well away from town and then, taking the first turn to the east, had swept round over the hard, smooth prairie highways and had finally come down along the east bank of the brook well out of sight of the strikers at the bridge, reaching their lookout in good time and without detection. Further tidings had come before their start to the effect that Mr. Channing, the energetic manager, was aboard the train bearing the militia boys. This could only mean that the situation to the east of the Missouri was now so far improved that the keenest officials were giving their main effort to the west. Even before the major had completed his calm, methodical survey of the situation he was rejoined by the sheriff. It was then so near darkness that the stars were peeping in the eastward sky, and over across the rushing Red Water the glow of a little fire started by some of the Seattle crowd lighted the rocky face of the railway cut and threw a gleam upon the waters.

And still no sign of the expected train. "Feelin her way," said the sheriff. "Dasn't take any chances." A spike or two withdrawn, a fishplate removed on any one of the half dozen sharp curves along the gorge, would shoot the engine over the bank and into the boiling waters, with car after car pitching atop of it. "Reckon 'twill be another hour before it gets here," concluded he.

Melville made no reply. He was watching a little light swinging like the lantern of a trainhand over on the southern shore and high up on a projecting point half a mile to the southeast. A moment earlier no light was there. Now it was swinging like a pendulum firefly swiftly to and fro. There was instant excitement among the strikers across the Red Water and over against them where the Big Horn leaders seemed to have gathered. "Comin sure as death!" whispered the sheriff, and together he and the major strode swiftly to the edge of the cliff overlooking the single track at its base.

Away down the Red Water a faint rumble and the pant of a laboring engine could just be heard above the rush of the stream, and presently the edge of a glowing disk came steadily into view; then the full glare of a headlight, which pointed an instant or two toward the opposite shore, swung across the seething rapids, dived into and under the bluff on the north side and disappeared from view. Behind it, snakelike, trailed the dim line of glowworm lights of the troop cars, and then they, too, were swallowed up in darkness.

"Runnin keerful," muttered the sheriff. "They know 'nuff not to come head on and full speed. She'll pull up somewhere down here and send forward to smell the bridge."

In silence and suspense they waited. All voices were hushed along the rocky banks. For a few minutes even the panting of the engine could not be heard as the train burrowed through a deep cutting. Then, louder, clearer, nearer than before, it sounded on the night, and a confused murmur of voices rose along the steeps. Angered and desperate as they were, few of the ra[illegible] men could bear the thought of that train, freighted with human life, rushing on to destruction. A light as of a lantern shot suddenly into view on the opposite bank. Somebody at the same instant, lantern swinging, darted down the bluff on the Big Horn side. A howl of rebuke and menace rose from the gang of tramps, a volley of stones and coal chunks shattered the glass and stunned the bearer, and then, almost as though in relief and rejoicing, a shout went up across the stream from which side the train was now in plain view. Above the mingled roar of waters and voices, sharp and clear, could be heard the hiss of escaping steam. The engineer had shut off. The long train was slowing down, and presently, 400 yards away from the bridge, it settled to a crawl and soon came to a full stop. Bending over the brink, Melville and the sheriff could see some half a dozen lanterns dancing briskly up the curving track and presently clustered about a single spot, They had come upon the east end of the obstructing cars. Then the sheriff's voice was heard on the gathering night.

"Below there! Can you hear me distinctly?"

"Aye, aye!" was the answer after a moment's delay.

"Then don't attempt to send men across yet. There's a mob waiting there. Major Melville wants to see the gentleman in charge."

Silence one moment, and then uprose a voice from below, at sound of which Melville perceptibly started and bent more eagerly forward. It rang out on the night deep and resonant, in marked contrast to the "whang" of the westerner's official tone.

"Who are you?"

"Hawkins, sheriff of Brentwood county," piped the answer.

A moment's pause; then "All right—Mr. Channing will be up there presently."

Ten minutes later the manager and Major Melville had clasped hands on the bluff, and four men were gathered in consultation.

"You've got Langdon with you," were almost the first words Melville spoke. "I knew the voice at once."

"Yes, and he's a trump; helped us more'n I can tell you in the week he's been with me. Hang those lunatics! They're firing rocks at the bridge now. D'you hear 'em? And I've got to get on to Brentwood and save the rest of that stock."

Ten minutes of counsel followed. The veteran major was for leading his men straight across on top of the iron cars. They could not step from girder to girder in the darkness. There were other reasons besides this that caused Melville gravely to shake his head. In the glare of bonfires started by the tramps up the track and well back on the westward bluffs dark groups of the strikers could be seen in excited conference. Others still were clustered a few yards west of the bridge, and the gleam of pick and shovel could be faintly seen. "Cutting out under the track!" said Channing between his set teeth. "I expected that. But we'll show 'em!"

Another quarter of an hour of silent preparation; then, panting a little from the exertion of the climb, two of the four companies were lined up along the bluff facing the position of the strikers across the gulch. The other two, under command of the major, knelt in the darkness on both sides of the track and close to the bridge. The engine, detached from the passenger car, ran quickly forward and amid shouts of excitement not unmingled with warning coupled on to the train of flats. Then arose yells of glee, defiance and delight from the dense groups of tramps and strikers on the northern shore. There was a rush away from the track and yells of "Look out!" "Stand from under!" "She's coming!" followed almost instantly by cries of chagrin and baffled hate. Slowly at first the massive train began to move, but instead of the sound of bang and bump that told of a powerful shove there rose a quick series of ringing, metallic jerks, at sound of which the leaders gazed an instant at each other in dismay, then led a rush for the bridge. Too late! Channing had outwitted them and instead of shoving the train into the trap was drawing it into safety on the eastern side. Follow they dare not. There were two minutes of pandemonium, gradually dying away to silence, and then from across the deep ravine a voice they never forgot spoke out, clear, deep and powerful:

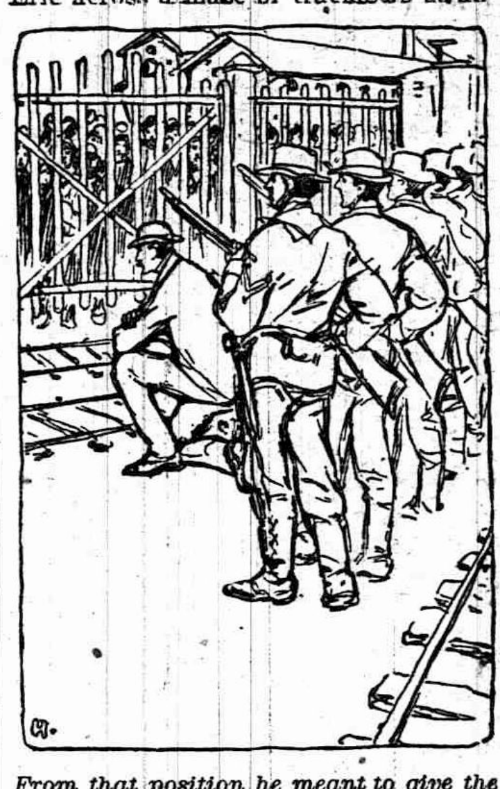
"Stand clear across there! We cover you with 300 ball cartridges. Our workmen must cross the bridge and repair that track. If you give them as much as a shot or a stone, I order 'Fire!'"

CHAPTER VII.

Late that wintry night there steamed into Brentwood a train laden with 300 state soldiery, who in silent array left the cars somewhere in the suburbs, thereby disappointing a big throng awaiting them at the station, marched rapidly under experienced guides to the armory of the local company, gave the mob guardians thereof the alternative of surrendering at once or being blown into flinders in less than five minutes, whereupon, as described in the local press, "there was a squealing and a scattering." Thence they bore the recaptured arms to the Big Horn roundhouse and dispatched an engine with a strong guard up the Seattle road to run back the exiles still "living on the country" 40 miles away, and before long Melville had seven companies of militia ready to do anything under such cool headed, accomplished leadership. The strikers for a time seemed bewildered by the coming of the troop train and the return of certain weary stragglers of the band that set forth so boastfully the previous day, all with tales of treachery on the part of their fellows and tremendous odds on the part of the despised militia—"militia with regulars to officer them"—and there was ground for the statement, for Melville had hailed with keen though repressed delight the coming of the peppery little major, a veteran of the civil war, and of Langdon, who, though in civilian dress, had been "spotted for a soldier" even before they got to Gunnison. Ball cartridges had been issued to Captain Linkenfelder's men as they stood in the depot at Missouri Junction awaiting the coming of a train bearing two companies from the south, and then came a funny thing. Linkenfelder could have shown them all about "loading in nine times," as they did in the war days, but this was a new company. He was an old officer, and the manual, minus the loadings and firings, was all he had yet taught them of the new breechloader when came the call to arms. Mr. Channing, impatiently pacing the platform and reading dispatch after dispatch and occasionally dictating an answer to his new and silent secretary, presently saw that Langdon's attention was wandering and looked at him inquiringly.

"Those men have never been taught to load and fire," said Langdon, "and their captain doesn't know how. There will be trouble if they get into a snarl with rioters."

"Then, for God's sake, you show them! Here, Captain Linkenfelder," he continued impetuously, "my friend is a West Point officer. Let him help you there." Linkenfelder knew Channing well, as who along the line did not? He wiped his brow and tried to look pleased as he explained that they hadn't been drilling long. But in five minutes Langdon had the eight noncommissioned officers present in a squad, the rest of the company eagerly surrounding and looking on. In 20 minutes they had "got the hang" of the most important parts. In an hour, when the other train came sweeping in, he had the whole company in line practicing "fire by company," "fire by rank," "fire by file," and never in a dozen drills had the Junction Light guard learned as much as they had that day. "That fellow's a dandy drillmaster," was the verdict, and the fame of the exploit and the praise of this unknown soldier had gone through the train before ever it reached the bridge. Next morning when Company G was told off for a possibly hazardous piece of duty and its captain was found to be still in arrest and "sulking in his tent" a committee went to the peppery little major with the gray mustache and blinking eyes, not, as might have been expected, to ask "cap's release," but to say that "the boys wanted a man who was way up in the 'biz' if there was any fighting to be done and could not that West Point fellow take command?" "Will you do it?" asked the little major of Langdon. "Will you do it?" echoed Channing, and away went Eric across a maze of tracks, 70 stranping young fellows striding confidently after him, rejoicing in the ring and power of his word of command. An hour later they stood confronting a furious mob ten times their number, hurling bricks and billingsgate and foul abuse. At the point of the bayonet they had cleared the Big Horn shops of strikers, driven them into the open yards and the street beyond and opened a passage for a train of cattle cars.



From that position he meant to give the word.

But by this time, noting that most of Melville's forces were afar up the tracks rescuing cattle trains, from every direction tramps, toughs and the desperadoes among the strikers dropped the devilment they happened to be engaged in and came howling to re-enforce the expelled gang. Only 20 yards away, just outside and along the picket fence, they crowded, clamoring, cursing, brandishing weapons and hurling missiles, but these latter, having to be hurled high, generally fell short. Many among Langdon's new command were lads whose "nerve" would long since have fled but for their leader's placid unconcern. He had backed them, as it were, up against the brown wooden walls of the freighthouse and then stood coolly forth ten feet in front of them, facing the raging throng without, sometimes quietly smiling as though he enjoyed the situation, sometimes slowly pacing up and down. At last as the clamor increased it became evident that the mob was bent on a dash at the office building to their right, standing alone opposite the great wooden gates—gates which gave directly on the buildings containing the most valuable local properties of the Big Horn road, excepting possibly the locomotives in the roundhouse. It was a moment of excitement. No man in the little band of defenders could estimate the extent of damage that would unquestionably result if that maddened throng broke through. It seemed as though by this time all the devilment of the disaffected was concentrated here at one spot, for the mob was vastly increased in size, and the jeers, howls and curses were now continuous. Small wonder that many a young state "guardsman" in the little command felt a nervous thrill as he gazed at the host of semisavage faces peering in between the brown slats and listened to the hideous threats of the leaders. "We'll have your hearts' blood, you liveried dogs!" "We'll l'arn you tin soldiers a lesson!" "Burn down the fence!" "Kill the murdering hounds!" "Cut their throats!" were expurgated samples of the yells. But still the company stood at ordered arms and "at ease," for Langdon continued his cool promenade along the front, calmly eying the howling mob, keeping wary watch upon the fence and gate, but ever and anon glancing up the yards in search of support or re-enforcement, for, to all outward appearance the coolest, most unconcerned person on the ground, his heart was filled with grave anxiety. His was by long odds the most critical position of any man, soldier or civilian, that day in all Nebraska.

For, now that he had time to face the facts and consider the position in all its bearings, he realized that he had no authority whatever in law or fact to enable him to discharge the grave duties of his position—not so much as a commission in the state troops, not even a warrant as a deputy sheriff. If the mob charged and to defend the lives of these men he was compelled to order them to fire, an indictment for murder would doubtless lie at his door. It is one thing to do a man's whole duty with the law behind him; it is another to stand and face a thousand voters and realize that every drop of blood that might be shed on either side would, in the event of success or failure, be charged up to him. And still he never seemed disturbed.

But Langdon's heart beat quick when, just as it seemed probable that, neck or nothing, he should have to face the situation and fight, he caught sight of Channing with the sheriff and a brace of deputies coming toward him on the run. The crowd having concentrated here, it was possible for the officials now to leave other threatened points. He strolled, as it were, with almost exaggerated quiet to the right flank of his men to meet them. The mob redoubled its screams of defiance.

"Major Melville wants to know how you're getting along," panted Channing as he hastened up, red faced, anxious, but plucky.

"Well, you see for yourself," said Eric, with a nod of his head toward the fence. "Those fellows mean to burst through in a minute or two."

"Can't you scare 'em? Fire a volley over their heads?" puffed the sheriff, eager and willing, but utterly inexperienced.

GIVES SCHLEY CREDIT.

Bryan Says He Is An Honorable and Modest Sea Fighter.

Lincoln, Neb., Aug. 2.—In his comment on the naval controversy, W. J. Bryan takes the side of Rear Admiral Schley, giving him credit for the victory at Santiago and declaring it a "pity that there should be any controversy that seeks to discredit a brave, honorable and modest sea fighter, who successfully led the American forces in one of the greatest, if not the greatest, naval battle in the history of the world."

Mr. Bryan denounces the Maclay history of the struggle and thinks it strange that a historian finds it necessary "to resort to the lowest form of abuse in dealing with a historical character," adding, "as a clerk in the navy yards he should be displaced because of his outrageous assaults upon a man who has been the patient victim of the most remarkable series of attacks recorded in American history."

IT WILL NOT SEE.

A Short-Sighted Corporation Which Closes its Eyes to Coming Disaster.

The Detroit Journal on Monday had the following editorial upon the telephone service in Detroit:

The Michigan Telephone Company seems to have sat just long enough at the Belshazzar's feast of big dividend's and no competition to be blind to the warnings. Another company is actively engaged in the preliminary work of laying wires for a new and, as it promises, efficient service. Their operations have inaugurated an era of hope among the citizens of Detroit who have long submitted to an unsatisfactory telephone service.

It is the experience both of citizens and strangers that telephone connection is harder to make in Detroit than in any other city of the United States. This is due not only to the cumbrous system of numbering but to the deficiencies in the staff at central. The girls seem to have more than they can attend to.

The difficulty in making connections doesn't end the indictment against the Michigan Telephone Company. When, after from five to fifteen minutes of ringing and helloing, the other end is on the string, easy talk is still precluded by defects in the medium of communication. It rarely happens that the wire is free from buzzing, cutting in, and other accoustic troubles. In fact telephoning in Detroit under present conditions is a thing that demands meekness, forbearance, patience, perseverance and long suffering.

And the most remarkable thing about this condition of affairs is the short-sightedness of the corporation, which trifles with its customers in the face of an active competition which is almost upon it. The managers of the old company do not seem to understand that $1 spent to improve the service now would be more effective than $100 later, when their subscribers have gone to the rival company. The People's Telephone Company could ask no greater favor than the present attitude of the Michigan company toward the public.

Want to Know, You Know.

Tacoma, Wash., Aug. 2.—The Tacoma machinists' union sent the following telegram to President McKinley:

"Moran Brothers of Seattle, with a strike on, involving all iron workers, have been awarded a government contract, while men on the government work at Bremerton have been laid off on account of lack of work. A member of the Metal Trades' association here made a statement before witnesses that the association has influence with the administration and that influence has brought about a change in plans."

The fact that the contract for the repair of the Seward has been awarded to the Morans, while the force of men at the Bremerton naval station has been reduced, led to the report quoted, and the machinists accordingly forwarded the telegram.

Took a Tumble.

Lorain, O., Aug. 2.—One hundred colored picnickers from churches at Cleveland, Lorain, Oberlin and Elyria, were precipitated a distance of ten feet because of the collapse of a trestle bridge from the railroad to the grove at Oak Point yesterday. The sudden fall of so many people caused a panic. No one was killed and the injuries were mostly sprained limbs and bruised bodies. Physicians from nearby were called to attend the injured. The greater number of the 20 persons hurt are from Cleveland.

An Island Disappears.

Duluth, Minn., Aug. 2.—Steamboat island, one of the Apostle group, off Chequamegon bay, Lake Superior, has disappeared. Before the last storm and for time immemorial it was a small island of sand and rock overgrown with trees. Now it is gone and a rocky reef several feet under water marks its place. It is now a danger to navigation and a lighthouse would be required on the ledge if it were in the path of ships.

Escaped With His Prisoners.

Jackson, Miss., Aug. 2.—After an exciting chase and escape from a mob, bent on lynching the prisoners, Sheriff Magee of Simpson county arrived in Jackson, having in custody Sterling Johnson and Reuben Teselle, negroes who murdered a young white man named Mangum near Magree, Miss., Tuesday night. A mob surrounded the jail and endeavored to break down the gate. The sheriff escaped through the back way with the prisoners.

Kipp—Moses.

We clipp the following from the Coldwater Courier of July 30: A very pretty wedding occured at five o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Starr Akenhead, 142 South Jefferson street, when Mr. Wm. Kipp of Tecumseh, and Vanchie Moses, of this city, were married by Rev. H. P. Collins. in the presence of about sixty guests.

The rooms were beautifully decorated for the occasion, and a fine display of presents testified to the high esteem in which both are held by their numerous friends. After a delightful wedding supper Mr. and Mrs. Kipp departed on No. 14 for Tecumseh, where o furnished house awaits them.

Mrs. Kipp is a graduate of the Coldwater high school and also of the State Normal of Ypsilanti, and during the past year taught in the schools of this city. She is not only a highly successful teacher but also a most popular and highly esteemed lady, who will be a decided acquisition to the society of our neighboring city. Mr. Kipp is a molder by trade and a most worthy young gentleman.

Mr. Kips has been employed here for sometime by Heesen Bros. & Co. and is very popular among the young people. They have rented part of the Tiffany house and will go to hovse keeping immediately. Mr. Kipp's many friends here wish he and his bride much happiness in their journey through life.

BASE BALL.

Clinton vs. Tecumseh at Clinton Saturday afternoon.

⁂

The Tecumseh News claimed that the Bloomer girls defeated Clinton 14 to 13. The News was in error.—Adrian Press.

⁂

The final game between Tecumseh and Clinton occurs at the latter village Saturday afternoon. This will be the rubber game.

⁂

The tradesmen, of Manchester, play the clerks of that village this afternoon.

⁂

⁂

The clerks, of Adrian, won a game of ball against Raisin Valley, Wednesday, on the Y. M. C. A. athletic grounds, the score standing 19 to 18. The Times reports it as an exhibition, called a ball game, featureless and slow and remarkable only for its many umpires and kicks.

⁂

Managers Smith and Garlinghouse have arranged, for two games of ball with Auburn, Indiana, Aug. 6 and 7, Tuesday and Wednesday. The Auburn's are the champion semi-professionals, of northern Indiana, are touring southern Michigan. Tecumseh has secured several new players and may be expected to play a first class ball game called at 3 o'clock.

⁂

Someone connected with the Tecumseh Herald must have had a bad case of indigestion, judging from their report of the ball game at that place last Saturday. The facts in the case are that not a Clinton man put up any money on that game, consequently no Clinton money was left in that town on account of any bets. They probably feel sore that several of their sports left a good wad in Clinton at the first game.—Clinton Local.

Ah, Bro. Blanchard, we wondered why the Clinton Local of last week did not have more news in it, we understand it all now. It took all the brains of the force to compose this one short item. If necessary we can state two or three cases where some of your ball cranks left their weeks wages and would have left more had they had it.

FRED SHOEMAKER

Fred Shoemaker, the man credited with many of the horse stealings, which have been going on in Washtenaw and Lenawee counties, for years, had his hearing in Justice Gibson's court at Ann Arbor Tuesday. He was positively identified by Dr. Nolan and his hostler as the man who hired a horse and buggy December 19 last from the former's livery stable in Ann Arbor, both horse and buggy not having been seen from that day to this. Shoemaker denied this and said the witness was a liar and was trying to swear him into states prison for a crime he had never committed.

He denied ever having seen either of the men who swore against him, and said he had not been in Washtenaw county for six years and then only for an hour on his way to visit a brother, Wm. Shoemaker, of Livingston county. At the time the Nolan horse was stolen, the prisoner claimed to have been at home in Cleveland making brooms, and was confident many people there, particularly the man who had been working for him, could prove that he had been at home.

He remembered having been in Ann Arbor about thirty years ago and spending two or three months studying in the high school, but could remember none of the teachers or where the school building was located. He pleaded for time in which to bring witnesses to the alibi, and said that although he understood many of his late neighbors in Cleveland had since his arrest helped themselves liberally to portions of his property, he believed some of them would come to his help.

Watch Inspector.

Adamson Bros., Tecumseh, are official time inspectors of the Detroit Southern road. This means that every one must be on time, for their Waterbury must be compared weekly and inspected every three months to see that they are free from coupling pins, coal cinders, and Onsted lunches. No employe is allowed to drink from the hair spring. This is a new road, and thus far the watches used are all second hand time pieces. Tom Adamson is noted as a palmist. Bring him a watch and he first looks it squarely in the face, then examines the hands. He looks at the second hand first. Then he looks at your hand and hour hand, pulls the hairs off the balance wheels, picks the chestnut coal off the bezel, gives the regulator a twist toward the north pole, blows the cake crumbs out of the case, wipes the crystal, snaps tne case, and hands back the watch in less time than it takes to tell it. There is no use of talking, Tom is a regular stem winder. —Adrian Press.

Tom says he can go you one more, Bro. Stearns, and that is to remove the young lady's picture from the case and wipe off the dust.

JUDGE WHIPPLE DEAD.

Eminent Jurist and Soldier Passes Away at Port Huron.

Port Huron, Mich., Aug. 2.—Judge Frank Whipple died yesterday morning. He never regained consciousness. He had been kept alive for the past few days by his remarkable vitality. His sorrowing family were at the bedside when the end came, and there was no perceptible pain at the dissolution.

Every effort of medical science which could be used had been called into play, but the patient was too weak to rally. The saline process of injection salt was tried, but it weakened instead of strengthening the patient and had to be discontinued.

Port Huron sorrows for a man who, by his sterling qualities, commanded not only the respect of the bench and bar of Michigan, but of every citizen with whom he came in contact. As a jurist and a lawyer he had built up a reputation, but aside from this qualification his memory will be dear to Port Huron as a soldier and exemplary citizen.

DECIDEDLY QUEER

Were the Actions of a Detroit Butcher at Pontiac.

Pontiac, Mich., Aug. 2.—A stranger giving his name as Stanley Laski, said to be a Detroit butcher, is in jail here and has been pronounced demented by physicians. It appears that Laski went to Royal Oak from Detroit on Wednesday and got into difficulty with three or four of the natives, who used him roughly and robbed him of $17.

Laski came to Pontiac and lodged a complaint with the officers, who investigated, and partly verified his story. There was a scrap, but the identity of the participants is still unknown. Laski had a revolver on his person and was arrested, charged with carrying concealed weapons. He was locked up and an examination to ascertain whether he was sane or not was made. His actions were decidedly queer.

KNOWING HOW PAYS.

The Moral of This Old Old Anecdote Will Save a Heap of Trouble And a Pile of Money.

Something had gone wrong with some simple part of a stationary engine and the stoker could not fix it. After spending a day or two on it, he was forced to ask the aid of a more competent workman. He failed also, and some one suggested the employment of a local celebrity, a sort of tinker at any mechanical job. There is generally one in every locality. He gave two or three raps with his hammer and touched up a rod or two, when the pounding or whatever ailed the machine, ceased. When asked to make out his bill, it read as follows:

Fixing engine	.50
Knowing how	10.00

This anecdote clearly demonstrates that it pays to know how. Engineer J. J. Jeffries of the Royal Cycle Works, at Marshall, Mich., of his experience with the little conqueror, it will pay you to know how to get rid of a troublesome companion, he says:—

"My kidneys troubled me more or less for years and finally became so bad that I was compelled to give up locomotive engineering on account of the jarring of the train and seek employment as a stationary engineer. When the attacks of kidney complaint occurred, I could not rest or lie comfortably in any position and often in the mornings after a restless night I was more tired and worn out than when I went to bed. When the attacks were at their height I was unable to stoop or lift anything and despite the use of every remedy that came to my notice, preparations recommended to me by my acquaintances, numerous plasters of all kinds worn day and night, I was unsuccessful in procuring anything to help me until I tried Doan's Kidney Pills. The first box helped me. I steadily improved while taking the second and I stopped the treatment when I had finished the third, as I considered there was no more necessity for continuing the remedy."

Apples the Diet For the Sedentary.

Apples are very wholesome and digestible. They contain considerable potassium and sodium salts, magnesium, a little iron and about 85 per cent of water. Apples, being rich in pectin, form readily into jelly. They also contain free organic acids as well as salts, such a malates, citrates and tartrates. They are quite laxative, more so if taken late at night or early in the morning with a glass of water. Their nutritive value is not much, as they are largely composed of water. For invalids apples are best when baked and eaten either plain or served with cream. —Ledger Monthly.

A VERY CURIOUS BIRD.

The One Young Mark Twain Sprung Upon the Scientists.

Mark Twain's father was an ornithologist. He had several friends who were also enthusiasts on the subject of birds. Whenever any one of them discovered a rara avis it was the custom to have a consultation. Mark had been a witness of several of these bird inquests and had noted the delight the old men took in discussing a new found specimen. One day it occurred to him to provide the Hannibal ornithologists with a real circus in the form of a bird. He killed a crow and also a barnyard rooster. Plucking out the tail feathers of both the crow and the rooster, he substituted the rooster's tail feathers for those of the crow, producing a unique effect. When he had the specimen nicely prepared, he went to his father and, handing it to him, said:

"Here, father, is a very curious bird I shot. I thought you would be interested in it."

The old gentleman gazed upon the specimen with astonishment. That evening the ornithologists of Hannibal were assembled in Mr. Clemens' parlor. The rare specimen was put before them. The discussion was long and learned. The opinions expressed were various. One thought the bird was an offshoot of the bird of paradise family; others had equally ridiculous notions as to its ancestry. But there was one who refused to be swerved by the peculiarity of the bird's tail from the judgment that it was of the crow family.

"Why, just look here," he said, lifting the bird by its tail feathers. He got no further. The feathers came out. There was a quick closing of a door. Mr. Clemens started to leave the room.

"Gentlemen," he said, "please excuse me a few moments. I will see Samuel first and explain later."

EATING FISH.

A bit of lemon is served with broiled and baked fish, and it is in correct form to use the fingers in expressing the juice.

Sliced cucumbers, with plain French dressing, are also served.

With a boiled fish the potatoes are also usually boiled, cut into bits or scooped out and garnished with a little melted butter and chopped parsley.

Never use the fingers to separate the bones from the eatable portion of fish. The bones must be evaded with such dexterity as one can command without other aid than such as a bit of bread held in the left hand may furnish.

Gambling.

The writer once spent a Saturday afternoon in the study of a dignitary of the church while the ecclesiastic struggled in vain to frame an argument against gambling to be presented to the congregation on the morrow. He abandoned the attempt. Far be it from a literary journal to assert powers the possession of which the professionally religious are fain to disclaim, yet with submission we even venture to believe that at least one cogent and effective argument lies against all forms of gambling—one, namely, based on the truth that wealth, great or small, is a trust and therefore may not be put in risk.

The moralist may declare that the gambler gets, or at least wants to get, something for nothing. Men will laugh. They know better. The winner gave his chance to lose for his winnings. For his losses the winner got his chance to win. But ask the speculator whether he would gamble with trust funds held by him for orphans and then suggest to him the one great truth that is seizing hold of men's conscience, the most hopeful sign in these perplexed days of social unrest, that men are trustees of all that they call their own.

FOILED BY HIS OWN TRICK.

Scheme For Selling a Farm and Its Dramatic Climax.

"Some years ago," said the narrator, "an oil boom hit Litchfield, Ills., and everybody for miles around was seen sniffing for oil and every stranger suspected of being an expert looking for a good thing. An old farmer named Loomis had a big place three miles out of town, which would have been a fortune for him had he not been possessed of a mania for swapping, manifest in a perennial attempt to trade off his land for twice its value.

"When the boom was at the top notch, Loomis received a visitor who took so much interest in the farm, so liked its appearance, location, etc., that the old farmer scented a petroleum man and saw visions of incalculable wealth; but, being a shrewd man, Loomis did not care to take any unnecessary chances with Providence, and on the quiet he sent the hired man out the back way with orders to dump the kerosene can into the well. The visitor liked the entire place, inspected the barn, the chicken yard and then, as if by chance, asked for a drink of water.

"Loomis was waiting for that and hauled up a brimming bucket before the man's own eyes and poured him out a gourdful of liquid with a fine, opalescent scum upon it. The visitor smelled the stuff, tasted it, made a wry face and asked if the water was always like that. 'Oh, yes,' said Loomis, 'but you soon get accustomed to the taste, and our doctor says this is the finest water on earth for the stomach.' 'Well, I am ding danged if I'll ever get used to it,' was the unexpected response. 'I am looking for a farm, not an oil well, and if I have got to haul my drinking water three miles from Litchfield I guess I'd rather buy nearer town.'

"It took Loomis six months to get the taste of oil out of his well, and by that time the boom was over, and nothing was left of the oil craze but rotting derricks and abandoned shafts."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

BOOK MAXIMS.

It is better to give a book than to lend it.

Do not bite a paper knife until it has the edge of a saw.

Books are neither card racks, crumb baskets nor receptacles for dead leaves.

Never write upon a title page or half title. The blank fly leaf is the right place.

Do not turn the leaves of books down. Particularly do not turn the leaves of books printed on plate paper.

If you are in the habit of lending books, do not mark them. These two acts together constitute an act of indiscretion.

Books were not meant as cushions, nor were they meant to be toasted before a fire.—Arthur L. Humphreys in Private Library.

Where He Forgot Himself.

"We are seven," laughingly quoted the man who was an applicant for life insurance when asked to give the number of children in his father's family.

"And their names?" asked the examining surgeon.

"Well, there's Albert, Addie, Henry, Laura, William and Dora and—and"—

The surgeon looked surprised, and the applicant looked foolish.

Then he began again. "There's Albert and Addie, and Henry and Laura, and William and Dora, and—and"—

The surgeon announced that these were only six. The applicant acknowledged the corn and went over the list again and again, invariably balking after the sixth name. Then a bright office boy looked up from his work, with a grin, and said:

"Say, haven't you left yourself out of the count?"

The surgeon seemed relieved, the applicant seemed more foolish than ever, and the office boy grinned on at his work.

"That certainly was one time," finally commented the applicant, "that I completely forgot myself."—New York Times.

The Irishman's Request.

In the days when flogging was in vogue as a punishment in the British navy a Scotchman and an Irishman, on the arrival of their ship in harbor, obtained leave to go ashore for a couple days, and they overstaid the period of leave granted them. When they did put in an appearance they were ordered 50 lashes each. On the day of the punishment a parade was ordered to witness the infliction of the flogging.

When all was ready, the Scotchman asked as a favor to be allowed a piece of canvas on his back while he received his flogging. The captain granted his request and, turning to the Irishman, asked him if he required anything on his back while he was being flogged, to which he replied, "If ye plaze, yer honor, I'd loike to have the Scotchman on my back, if ye wouldn't mind."

Barometric Bees.

Whoever observes these interesting insects finds it easy enough to foretell exactly the kind of weather to be expected. At least this is the opinion of many raisers of bees.

Generally the bee stays at home when rain is in the air. When the sky is simply dark and cloudy, these busy workers do not leave their dwelling all at once. A few go out first, as though the queen had sent out messengers to study the state of the atmosphere. The greater number remain on observation until the clouds begin to dissipate, and it is only then that the battalions entire rush out in search of their nectar. A bee never goes out in a fog, because it is well aware that dampness and cold are two fearsome, redoubtable enemies. We do not mean, however, that the bee is a meteorologist in the absolute sense of the word. Its cleverness consists in never being taken unawares, for it possesses untiring vigilance. Often one may observe the sudden entrance of bees into the hive when a dense cloud hides the sun and even though the rain is not in evidence. —St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Changed Times.

Times have changed indeed from the time when Sydney Smith complacently observed that the United States had so much wilderness clearing to do that it might well take its literature, learning and luxury in the bulk from English factories.

"Why," he had asked, "should the Americans write books when a six weeks' passage brings them, in their own tongue, our sense, science and genius in bales and hogsheads? Prairies, steamboats, gristmills, are their natural objects for centuries to come."

We might almost reverse this and ask, "Why should the English feel ill at ease when a six days' passage brings them our sense, science and genius?"

For the time at least the Rev. Sydney Smith's chief notoriety seems to be that he was the author of certain observations whose truthfulness has proved as brief as it was bitter.—Harper's Weekly.

SAPOLIO

A Wife Says:

"We have four children. With the first three I suffered almost unbearable pains from 12 to 14 hours, and had to be placed under the influence of chloroform. I used three bottles of Mother's Friend before our last child came, which is a strong, fat and healthy boy, doing my housework up to within two hours of birth, and suffered but a few hard pains. This liniment is the grandest remedy ever made."

Mother's Friend

will do for every woman what it did for the Minnesota mother who writes the above letter. Not to use it during pregnancy is a mistake to be paid for in pain and suffering. Mother's Friend equips the patient with a strong body and clear intellect, which in turn are imparted to the child. It relaxes the muscles and allows them to expand. It relieves morning sickness and nervousness. It puts all the organs concerned in perfect condition for the final hour, so that the actual labor is short and practically painless. Danger of rising or hard breasts is altogether avoided, and recovery is merely a matter of a few days.

WANTS BAIL.

Bliss, the Fratricide, Appeals to the Supreme Court.

Mt. Clemens, Mich., Aug. 6.—Homer Bliss, charged with the murder of his father, and bound over to the circuit court for trial in September without bail, by his attorneys, S. B. Spier and W. S. Hosner, has made application to Judge Moore of the supreme court for an order admitting the prisoner to bail. When the justice refused to grant bail application was made to Circuit Court Commissioner McKay of Romeo, who heard the evidence and arguments and refused to grant the order. For some reason they jumped over the head of the circuit judge here and are now endeavoring to get the supreme court to look favorably on their application.

SERIOUS CHARGE.

Lansing Barber Will Have to Await Investigation.

Lansing, Mich., Aug. 6.—Judge Wiest announced from the bench that certain matters have come to his attention in the case against Marcus Pine, the barber arrested in Detroit charged with bastardy on complaint of George Gorham of this city, to show that the matter should be investigated with a view to Pine being held to trial on the more serious charge of rape. Pine's attorney had requested that the case against him be dismissed on condition that he marry Blanche Gorham.

Judge Wiest appointed Judge Person and L. B. Gardner to make an investigation and report to the court. They set about the work immediately and have summoned the father and mother of the girl to appear before them.

Will Care for His Children.

Lapeer, Mich., Aug. 6.—Joseph Jewett, who whipped his daughters, Alice and Julia, aged 9 and 7 years respectively, with a knotted rope the last week in June, gave a $1,000 bond for the support of the children and good behavior. It was shown to the court that in case Jewett went to prison the care of the girls would be a burden upon the grandparents, who had charge of them during their father's incarceration.

On a Serious Charge.

Lapeer, Mich., Aug. 6.—"Dr." Howard Wing, the traveling dentist, who, it is alleged, is the father of Pearl Vasbinder's six-weeks-old baby at Almont, was brought into court yesterday afternoon. Judge Smith fixed his bail on two charges, seduction and illegitimate parentage, at $1,000 and $500 respectively. His case will come up in September. In default of bail he was taken back to jail.

Scandal in Battle Creek's Local Legislature

VERY QUEER MEASUREMENTS

A Resolution Asking An Alderman to Make An Explanation or Reparation Within Ten Days or Tender His Resignation Was Passed.

Battle Creek, Mich., Aug. 6.—A bombshell was exploded in the council meeting last night by the report of the committee appointed to examine into the alleged overcharges on lumber used for sidewalks and bridges. The committee explained item by item the number of wrong charges that had come under its notice. The favorite way seemed to be to charge a certain amount to a bridge needing repairs, and to deliver a much smaller amount of lumber. For instance, a 359 plank was charged on one bridge and a 134 plank was actually used. A few cases were found where the wrong price per thousand had been named in bills and others where wrong extensions had been made.

The committee did not report on the actual amount of stealings in dollars, but gave detailed figures of the number of feet of lumber the city should have received. A committeeman stated that the total shortage would figure up to between $1,500 and $2,000. Ald. Haak is charged with being concerned. He is chairman of the bridge committee and also owner of an extensive lumber yard, and approved his own bills. A resolution asking him to make an explanation or reparation within 10 days or tender his resignation was adopted.

Crimes and Accidents in Michigan.

At Crystal Falls, Capt. Bennett of the Oliver Mining Co. shot and killed Joe Lennen, the poundmaster.

Wm. F. Mawrey of Houghton, well known in the upper peninsula, walked off an open drawbridge and was killed.

A. C. Rinck and four other men were caught in the ruins of a four-story building, which collapsed at Holland. One named Lee Smith may die.

Taffy for Michigan.

Washington, Aug. 6.—The navy department has received the report on the annual drill of the Ohio and Michigan naval brigades. Lieut.-Commander Winder, who inspected the brigades in behalf of the navy department, states that, in his opinion, the Michigan naval militia, as it stands today, is capable of manning and officering a war vessel in time of emergency. The Ohio brigade did not have the advantage of drill on shipboard in previous years, but their work this year shows commendable progress.

Violently Insane.

St. Joseph, Mich., Aug. 6.—Charles Gidney, aged 45, was taken violently insane yesterday and placed in the county jail here to await transportation to the Kalamazoo asylum. During the last year Gidney's father killed himself while mentally deranged. His mother and two sisters died in an insane asylum. It was from worrying for fear that he himself might lose his mind that finally drove him insane.

Burned by Gasoline.

Adrian, Mich., Aug. 6.—Mrs. Warren Van Orden, wife of a Lake Shore brakeman who lives in Toledo, was probably fatally burned by a gasoline explosion yesterday afternoon. She was terribly burned about the back and legs. Mrs. E. W. Long, who lived in the other half of the double house, tore the clothes off her, burning her hands severely. The fire department extinguished the flames. Mrs. Van Orden may die.

Old Citizen Dead.

Ludington, Mich., Aug. 6.—Joseph Roussin, one of Ludington's oldest and most respected French citizens and one of the most striking and unique characters in this part of the state, is dead at the age of 78 years. He leaves seven sons and three daughters, all grown up. One of the daughters, Mrs. Andrews, resides in Detroit.

MICHIGAN BRIEFS.

Dennis A. Barnum, a prominent Owosso man, has drawn 160 acres in the government drawing at Oklahoma. He expects to sell it for $40,000

The saw mills and salt blocks at Manistee, which has been closed on account of a strike, have started up again. The patent salt lifters have been adopted by the salt manufacturers, which will do away with laborers entirely in lifting salt.

Ed Pinner was given a bumping by John Wood, who found him walking with his daughter at Owosso. When the young man got a chance to explain he told the irate parent that he was his son-in-law, and after a time he got his bride back.

Wm. Leyerer of Benton Harbor saved his wife's life and incidental to the rescue he must answer to a charge of assault on her. He says she was about to swallow a dose of poison when he struck the bottle from her hand. In doing so the back of his hand struck her nose. Hence the arrest.

Clarence Mosher is a tramp. He is also working as a farm hand, strange as it may seem, near Battle Creek. But he has his own definition of the word "work," and when he thought his boss, Elmer Austin, was pushing him too hard, he sailed into him with a pitchfork. Austin is nursing two severe wounds and Mosher is in jail on a charge of assault and battery.

Strike Declared Off.

Buffalo, Aug. 6.—At a late hour last night the Anchor line strike, which has been in force at Erie for some time, was declared off and President Keefe of the International Longshoremen's union will order the men to return to work. President Joyce of the Buffalo local will convey President Keefe's instructions to the members of his organization and the work of unloading the fleet of Anchor line boats will be resumed. Negotiations were conducted at Erie by the chief of the longshoremen, President Joyce, the Anchor line and the contractors, Coyle and Kane. It is understood that Coyle has purchased Kane's interest in the firm, thus paving the way for the settlement.

MARYLAND REPUBLICANS

Will Meet Today to Nominate State Officers.

Baltimore, Md., Aug. 6.—Republican leaders from all parts of the state are in Baltimore getting ready for their state convention, which will be held here today. The work before them is the nomination of candidates for state comptroller and clerk of the court of appeals and the formation of a platform. But little time will be taken up in carrying out the programs already mapped out. Either Dr Isaac N. Barber of Talbot county of Herman S. Platt of Baltimore city will be selected to head the ticket, with the chances in favor of the latter, although it is understood that Dr. Barber, who has served his party in congress, could have it if he wanted to make a fight for it. Mr. Platt is a prominent oyster packer, is wealthy and is regarded as good timber. The court of appeals clerkship will, in all probability, go to Col. Thomas S. Paran of Calvert. Messrs. John E. Belt of Prince Georges and John E. Waddell of Dorchester will also be put in nomination before the convention, but Col. Parran is much the favorite in the running.

HOLDING HIM UP.

Government Looking After O. M. Carter's Investments

Savannah, Ga., Aug. 6.—District Attorney Erwin has filed in the United States court for the southern district of Georgia a suit of attachment against all of the property of Oberlin M. Carter, formerly a captain of engineers in the army, within the jurisdiction of the court. Carter's former attorneys here are made parties to the suit for purposes of holding certain funds supposed to be in their hands, paid on notes in Carter's favor. The papers have been served on all of the defendants.

The purpose of the bill is to restrain Beirne Gordon, the Propeller Towboat Co., W. W. Mackall, and Anderson, the Savannah Lighterage & Transfer Co., M. A. Connelly, the Savannah Brewing Co. and the Brush Electric Light & Power Co. from disposing of any securities they may hold in the name of O. M. Carter or of his brothers, Lorenzo D. and J. Stanton Carter.

It is claimed that Carter made investments in the southern district of Georgia with funds intrusted to him as a disbursing officer of the government at this point and that the property accruing from these purchases belongs to the government.

Arrested a Judge.

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 6.—The Teller News of July 18, received yesterday, says: Judge E. G. Rognon, judge of the United States commerce court at Teller City, has been indicted by the federal grand jury and arrested for alleged misuse of government money. It is charged that the judge used government money for the purchase of supplies and a building, which he claimed was for government use. He claims to have made arrangements whereby the government is amply protected from loss and that the matter should have been and would have been settled by a civil suit had it not been for the activity of his enemies.

Of Interest to Cigarmakers.

Washington, Aug. 6.—Commissioner Yerkes of the internal revenue has decided that all tobacco material, including scraps, cuttings and clippings, must be accounted for by a manufacturer of cigars in the condition in which it was purchased. If a manufacturer, it is held, sells or inventories as an hand tobacco scraps or cuttings which he produced himself from unstemmed leaf, the collector will reduce such materials to their equivalents in unstemmed leaf, 15 pounds of stemmed tobacco scraps, cuttings or clippings being equivalent to 25 pounds of unstemmed leaf.

Exposition Building Burned.

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 6.—Exposition building, erected during the boom of 1887 at a cost of over $200,000, has been destroyed by fire. A boy, among a crowd which had gathered to watch a large circus that had pitched its tents across the street, set fire in the spirit of mischief to some loose rubbish on the floor. In a moment the flames had leaped beyond control, spreading almost instantly throughout the whole building, which occupied half a block square. No one was injured. The efforts of the firemen were directed to saving the surrounding residence property.

"Teddy" After Coyotes.

Colorado Springs, Colo., Aug. 6.—Vice-President Theodore Roosevelt left here for a three days' coyote chase in the vicinity of Fountain, 18 miles south of this city. He was accompanied by R. B. Stewart of this city, Alfred Cowles of New York, a brother-in-law of Mr. Stewart; Lieut H. K. Devereaux, the trooper of Roosevelt's old regiment; John Goff, who piloted the vice-president during his hunting expedition in Colorado last winter, and Joe Kenyon, who will act as guide during this trip.

The American steamer Eureka has put in at Valparaiso with her machinery out of order. The vessel is bound to San Francisco from Norfolk, whence she sailed May 7.

David B. Henderson, speaker of the United States house of representatives, and Representative Frederick H. Gillett of Massachusetts are in Berlin.

Ex-Congressman Blount is not critically ill. He received a slight touch of paresis some days ago, affecting the muscles of his face and lambs, but he is steadily improving at Macon, Ga.

Col. F. W. Bergmier of the St. Paul Volks Zeitung, who was one of those who received the Boer peace delegates in the United States, has arrived in The Hague. It is said that his presence there is connected with South African affairs.

Became Demented.

Flint, Mich., Aug. 6.—Walter Waters, a telegraph operator on the Pere Marquette railroad at Midland, went insane on Saturday and was yesterday brought to the jail in this city for safe keeping. The young man is a son of Rev. Waters, Baptist minister at Mt. Morris.

A. H. Davis, Mt. Sterling, Ia., writes: "I was troubled with kidney complaint for about two years, but two one dollar bottles of Foley's Kidney Cure effected a permanent cure." J. J. Orr.

No man was ever so much deceived by another, as by himself.—Greville.

AWFUL EXPLOSION

Six Buildings Destroyed in Philadelphia Last Night

A NUMBER OF LIVES LOST

From Forty to Fifty Persons Are Lying in the Several Hospitals Suffering From More or Less Severe Injuries, Several of Whom May Die.

Philadelphia, Aug. 6.—A terrific explosion in a block of six buildings on Locust street above Tenth, last night completely wrecked five of the structures and caused the death of from 10 to 20 or more persons. Over two score of others were more or less seriously injured. Some of those taken to the hospital will die. It is estimated that at least 35 persons were in the five buildings when the explosion occurred, and the exact number of dead will probably not be known for 24 hours.

The explosion occurred about 9:30 o'clock. What exploded and how it happened is not known at this time, but it is believed to have been a barrel of gasoline in one of three grocery stores. With the exception of No. 1008, the front walls of the buildings were blown outward into the street, while the floors and the roofs were blown upward and fell straight to the ground. Almost every building in a radius of two blocks about the scene of the explosion had window panes shattered and were otherwise damaged. Every building on the opposite side of Locust street was more or less wrecked, but none of them fell.

At 1:30 a. m. the only known deaths are those at the hospitals, that of an unknown colored woman and a two-year-old colored child.

At the Pennsylvania hospital five of the patients, it is thought, will die. These are two colored women, one colored man and two colored children. These unfortunates are so badly injured and undergoing such severe suffering that their names could not be obtained. Others at the various hospitals will also die. Among these are Samuel Gale, aged 40 (white), and his daughter, Florence Gale, aged 20. Both are badly burned in addition to other injuries. Minnie Rosenthal, aged 12, was taken from the ruins seriously injured and will die. The father is also badly injured but may recover. The other members of the family escaped uninjured. Up to 1:30 a. m. the police or fire officials could not add to the list of dead, but are positive that a number of bodies are still buried under the ruins. Large forces of firemen and policemen are at work removing the vast amount of wreckage, but at this writing have found no bodies. There are many persons missing, according to the statements of neighbors or of those who were familiar with the movements of those occupying the buildings. It is supposed that a number of bodies will be found in the ruins of the restaurant of colored patronage. Quite a number were seen in the place immediately preceding the explosion. It will require several hours' hard work to remove the piles of roofing, flooring and walls which fell into the cellars of the wrecked buildings which cover the unfortunate victims of the disaster.

From 40 to 45 persons are lying in the several hospitals suffering more or less severe injuries.

BLOWN TO ATOMS.

One Man Killed and a Number of Others Injured.

Bowling Green, O., Aug. 6.—A terrific explosion of nitro glycerine occurred near this city yesterday afternoon in which Wm. Radabaugh, aged 22, was blown to atoms and many other persons had narrow escapes from serious injury. Radabaugh was driving a wagon loaded with 800 quarts of the explosive, and when nearing the tracks of the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton road, whipped up his horses to cross the tracks ahead of an approaching passenger train. The jolting exploded the stuff on the tracks and the train was stopped within a few feet of the gaping hole made by the explosion. Pieces of debris were hurled with great force against the train, but none of the 50 passengers was struck. A house occupied by Mrs. Abraham Teall and two sons was wrecked and Mrs. Teall was seriously injured.

The Dock Is All Right.

Washington, Aug. 6.—A letter from Naval Constructor Gilmore, who was sent recently to take charge of the big floating dock at Havana, was received at the navy department today. He states that the dock is in excellent condition. He has tested it to some extent by docking a large merchant ship. The dock was employed inside of 40 minutes, which is an exceptionally good performance. The naval constructor regards the dock as a valuable adjunct to the navy.

Murder and Suicide.

Chicago, Aug. 6.—Insanely jealous of his wife, William Schultz, a carpenter, stabbed her to death and then killed himself with a revolver. The two dead bodies were found by Schultz's daughters.

New York, Aug. 6.—Jesse Haney, owner of several of the earliest comic papers, is dead at his home in this city. He was born in Germantown, Pa., in 1829 and came to New York in 1853 and allied himself with the group that included Sol Etynge, Walt Whitman and Artemus Ward. He first started the New York Picayune, a comic paper. This was succeeded by the Irving Magazine and later by the comic monthly paper that included Bellew, the elder, and Frank Beard on its staff. After being long connected with the American News Co. he retired and three years ago was stricken with paralysis.

DOWAGER EMPRESS DEAD.

The Mother of the Germany Emperor Passes Away.

Cronberg, Aug. 6.—Dowager Empress Frederick of Germany is dead in gloomy Friedrichshof, where her last suffering days have been spent, while cancer was slowly eating her life away.

Death came gently at 6:15 p. m. yesterday, almost the same hour as it came to Victoria, her mother, last winter.

Emperor William was at his dying mother's bedside early in the morning when there was a feeble rally, the last flash of her indomitable spirit when she became unconscious and recognized the son whom many accuse of coldness to her in her later years.

Her brother, King Edward, who idolized her, started from England Sunday. He arrived too late for the last sad farewell to his eldest sister.

In the spring Edward was here. Often he wheeled the patient sufferer in her invalid chair in the little garden, where on sunny days she sat and calmly waited for the end she knew must come.

A TERRIBLE TALE.

Story of Death From Starvation in the Gold Region.

Port Townsend, Wash., Aug. 6.—A story of death from starvation in the Agiapuk mining district was brought from Nome by passengers on the steamer Centennial.

As a result of 43 days of unparalleled hardship, George Dean, a miner, is dead, and two companions, Jack Houston and Joseph C. Thiery, are at death's door.

Added to the story is a horrible tale that in their desperation Houston and Thiery severed the thigh of their dead companion from his body and were cooking it when help arrived and saved them from practicing cannibalism.

The men had been in Good Hope country prospecting. June 7 they started for Nome by way of Agiapuk river. Before they reached Teller City provisions gave out and hunger compelled them to eat grass, birds' eggs and anything they could find.

Dean left a letter partly written, bidding his family, who live in Canton, O., farewell. He was a member of the masonic order.

Thiery is from Davenport, Ia., and Houston was formerly mate on the Yukon river boat Sovereign.

The Oath Will Stand.

London, Aug. 6.—Although no division was challenged at the third reading of the king's declaration bill last evening in the house of lords, it is generally believed that no further attempt will be made to pass it, either this season or the next. Lord Salisbury, the premier, referring to the statement of Catholic peers, said the government now realized that the Catholics did not wish the offensive words of the original declaration to be withdrawn unless the government at the same time withdrew the declaration regarding the security of the protestant succession. The government never had the slightest intention of withdrawing that. The Catholics regretted that they must be prepared to see the declaration stand in its present form.

A Quick Passage.

Washington, Aug. 6.—Consul General Hughes at Coburg, Germany, reports to the state department that a French-Belgian syndicate is reported to be forming, under the patronage of the king of Belgium, to build an electric express line for passengers and light freight between Paris and Brussels, and from the latter place to Antwerp. The trip from Paris to Brussels is expected to be made in one and a half hours, and from Brussels to Antwerp in ten minutes.

Stricken With Heart Disease.

Highland Falls, N. Y., Aug. 6.—Prof. Elwood Piano, aged 40 years, a musician of wide reputation, while returning from New York last night on the steamer Mary Powell, in company with his wife and sister-in-law, died suddenly of heart disease. He was the organist in the Episcopal church here and provided the music for the social functions at the summer place of J. Pierpont Morgan.

Made a Finish.

Provo, Utah, Aug. 6.—James M. Wilson, a patient at the insane asylum, threw himself head first into the open door of a furnace. He was badly burned before being pulled out. While bandages were being prepared Wilson broke away and again threw himself into the furnace, this time being so frightfully burned that he died within a short time.

Sent Out to the Gulf.

Tampa, Fla., Aug. 6.—Last night 100 business men, in order to end the strike of Resistencia union cigarmakers, searched the streets of Tampa and seized many a strike leader and, it is rumored, that they were sent on a vessel outside the bar and to the gulf. Excitement prevailed, but no rioting occurred. It is said an attempt was made to assemble the strike leaders in a conference and capture them all together, but the strikers heard of it and dispersed.

THE RAILROAD SCARE

ODD EFFECTS OF THE FIRST SIGHT OF A LOCOMOTIVE.

Some of the People of the South Hid Behind Trees In 1833, When the Iron Horse Went By—The Country's Earliest Railroad.

America cannot lay claim to the first locomotive or the first railroad. That great honor lies with England. Yet Yankee genius was not very far behind her, for, when George Stephenson launched his first real locomotive, the Rocket, on the Liverpool and Manchester road in 1829, the first spike had been driven on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, July 4, 1828, by Charles Carroll of Carrollton, the last surviving signer of the Declaration of Independence. This was the first road started in the United States, and in 1830 it had reached Ellicott Mills, 13 miles from Baltimore.

But the south can claim the honor of completing the longest railroad in the world at that date, being the old Charleston and Hamburg road, now a part of the South Carolina and Georgia system, which was begun in 1830, and by October, 1833, it had 137 miles of track in operation. In a letter from Mr. Samuel C. Clarke of Georgia, a kinsman of the writer, who attained the extreme age of 91 years and who had seen the beginning and the completion of this road, he thus gives his experience upon first sight of a locomotive:

"One day while going down to Charleston with a party of gentlemen to attend the races as we approached the city we saw in the distance the new railroad, finished some 10 or 12 miles out of Charleston. It was built upon piles, longer or short, according to the nature of the ground. Sometimes in crossing a ravine the rails were 20 feet from the surface. Our track ran near this elevated road, and soon a horrid shriek as from 20 panthers was heard in the woods. By this time we were nervous. Elephants and lions we had heard of; and some of us had seen them, but what monster was this whose screams we heard? Presently it came in sight, flying aloft through the air and breathing fire and smoke, and our frightened steeds became unmanageable, and in fact I think that some of our party were as badly frightened as their horses. If any of my readers are old enough to remember the introduction of locomotives and how they felt at first sight of them, they will perhaps understand our sensations that day in the pine woods.

"A mile or two farther on we came to a broken wagon by the side of the road, and near it sat a Georgia cracker smoking his pipe. On being asked what was his trouble he replied, 'Well, stranger, I've often hearn tell of nullification, and now I reckon I've saw it for true.'"

It is somewhat amusing now to read of the superstitious dread with which the inhabitants looked upon the building of these first railroads. Some thought the smoke of the continual passing trains would cause a pestilence or destroy all the crops along the road. Others were afraid to ride on the cars for fear of having their breath taken away, and the people in the cities objected to the railroad being built because they feared the smoke from the engines would soil the clothes which were hung out to dry.

Many are yet living who looked upon the terrible, screeching iron monster with awe and trepidation. Mr. Nat McGee of Ivy, Albemarle, tells a joke upon himself that when he heard the train coming he jumped from his horse and got behind a tree, where he viewed it for fear of being run over. Mr. W. T. Prout, who was taking a wagon load of produce to Richmond, when he reached Gordonville heard the whistle and terrible noise of the approaching train, and he and his companions were so scared that they sprang out, leaped the fence and ran across the field to a safe distance, leaving the wagon and team to its fate, but when the train appeared it was only an engine and one coach.

The first roadbeds were formed, as has been stated, by driving piles in the ground, upon the top of which were placed wooden stringers, in which were cut a groove for the wheels to run. These were called "wooden railroads" and at a distance appeared like the elevated railroads in the cities of the present day. The honor of this invention was contested between John Hartman of Scottsville, Va., and John Williams, an engineer of Ohio, but it did not prove a bonanza to either, for the wheels were constantly bouncing out of the groove, and the piles soon after gave place to solid dirt embankments, and strap iron rails were substituted for the wooden groove. But the grading was very imperfect and uneven, which made riding on one of these primitive railroads like going over a corduroy road in a springless wagon, with the cars bouncing over these rough rails to the jingling music of the windows.—Richmond Dispatch.

Do Carpets Shorten Life?

Just think what a horrible receptacle of unclean things the carpet is in the rich English or French house! Where there are carpets, people should on entering be given slippers, as in the Netherlands, or the footbath, as at a Turkish mosque. Making servants sweep carpets is another proof that evil is wrought for want of thought. Flourens attributed the prevalence of lung and throat diseases in England to carpeted rooms.—London Truth.

Sam Jones Spoke.

Orion, Mich., Aug. 6.—The assembly people managed to get two of their disabled boats in condition to do business on Sunday and they carried great crowds to the island to hear the spectacular Sam Jones. His talk differed little from others which he has given at this place in years past. There is as yet no clue to the parties who put the fleet out of business Friday night.

Amalgamated Men Getting Ready for a Long Struggle

A. F. OF L. WILL GIVE HELP

They Have Declared War, Said President Shaffer, and the Steelworkers Are Preparing For a Long and Bitter Fight.

Pittsburg, Pa., Aug. 6.—President Shaffer of the Amalgamated association, who arrived here shortly before noon yesterday, stated that a general strike of the men employed by the United States steel corporation would be declared within one week.

President Shaffer declared that the Amalgamated board has been dismissed and that no more conferences would be held unless the steel magnates should sue for peace. They have declared war, he said, and the steel works are preparing themselves accordingly.

Secretary Morrison of the Federation of Labor, with its 2,000,000 adherents, has assured President Shaffer of the federation's financial support in case a general strike of steel corporation employes is ordered. President Shaffer stated that he has requested President Gompers of the Federation of Labor to come to Pittsburg this week for a conference, and he said he had every reason to believe that Gompers would come.

When asked if a settlement could have been reached in New York Saturday had they waived their rights at Painter, Lindsay & McCutcheon and Wellsville plants, he said:

"The Amalgamated association could have settled in New York if it had given up these mills, but we could not do that. Just as long as we can fight we are going to fight for them. They are as much of us now as any of the other lodges. Their fight is ours and our fight is theirs."

In this city all of the idle mills are in the same condition as before the failure of the New York conference to settle the strike, and no apparent move is being made by the manufacturers to start the mills, consequently there has been no break in the strikers' ranks. The most important strike points seem to be Leechburg and Wellsville, with McKeesport, a possible trouble center. From Leechburg this telegram was received:

The Hyde Park mill, which has been idle since the first of the year, was started yesterday afternoon. E. S. Pargny, manager of the American Steel association; Harry Davis, district superintendent, and Robert Lock, local manager, were on the ground. At 3:45 in the afternoon a train arrived at Hyde Park, coming from Saltsburg, Vandergrift and Apollo. The train stopped at the works and 55 men, clad in working garb and carrying dinner buckets, left the train and hurried into the works. There was no excitement and the mill owners and managers claim they have enough men in there to operate all of the five-plant mill. Sentinels are out and no one is allowed to get into the mill without a pass word.

A Good Appointment.

St. Louis, Aug. 6.—President D. R. Francis has announced the appointment of Halsey C. Ives of St. Louis as chief of the division of fine arts of the Louisiana Purchase exposition. Mr. Ives, who is a director of the school of fine arts, Washington university, was chief of the fine arts department at the Columbia exposition at Chicago. "Mr. Ives," said President Francis, "was not an applicant for the position to which we appointed him. His administration of the department at the Columbia exposition gave great satisfaction and those connected with it gave him such high compliments that, without our knowledge of his ability, we unanimously decided to tender Mr. Ives the place. This he accepted, after conferring with the directors of Washington university, who gave him permission to do so."

Shot Through the Heart.

Jackson, Miss., Aug. 6.—W. J. Ligon, santiary inspector of Jackson, last night shot and killed David L. Shelton. The shooting occurred on the principal street of the city and caused much excitement. The men had quarreled earlier in the day, it is said, over an inspection and engaged in a personal altercation. Shelton, it is said, returned to the attack with a stick, when Ligon pulled a revolver and shot him through the heart. Both men are prominently known, Shelton having married the daughter of the late Congressman McKee.

Will Investigate.

Milwaukee, Aug. 6.—James Worman, United States consul at Munich, Germany, who has been authorized by the state department at Washington to make an investigation of the operations of dental institutions in the various states, is here to attend the convention of the National Dental association, which will open today, and to secure evidence, if possible, that will put a stop to many of the dental "diploma mills" which are said to exist throughout the land.

Will Investigate.

Battle Creek, Mich., Aug. 6.—People at Marshall have caused so much gossip about the death of E. D. Gould, found dead in a closet last Friday, that an inquest has been demanded. Three physicians made a post-mortem. Gould formerly ran the Herndon house at Marshall and a railroad eating house at Lansing. He only lived here a few months. There is no ground for suspicion known by people here.

Ten Years' Trial

The Story of a Soldier's Struggle

By Brigadier General Charles King

Copyright, 1901, by Charles King

"That's murder," was the cool reply. "A mob gains tenfold in daring and devilment when it sees you're afraid to fire anything but blanks. You'll simply have to kill 50 then where five would have sufficed in the first place. No, sir. Ball cartridges or nothing. And here's another point. I'm not an officer either of the troops or of the law." And now Eric had to raise his voice above the outer clamor. "I can give the necessary commands and at the proper instant, and I can drive those howlers back in one volley if they attempt to force the gates, but you, Mr. Sheriff, must stand by my side and assume responsibility; otherwise a week from now you'll be around with a warrant for my arrest."

"My God, I can't!" said the civil official, wiping the sweat from his brow despite the cold wind from the westward prairie. He gazed almost fearfully along that surging fence line. It resembled by this time nothing so much as one continuous cage of snarling, roaring beasts. It was plain the poor fellow was losing his nerve. "Me and my family couldn't live in this community another week. Can't you say something to them, Mr. Channing?" Like many another civil official, the sheriff was realizing that it was quite one thing to tackle a lot of tramps, friendless and desperate as they were down at Bridge Siding; it was quite another to think of letting drive a deadly volley into the breasts of a mob that might contain friends and fellow citizens, and that would be sure to turn to in retaliation and possibly murder his own beloved ones. Small wonder the sheriff hesitated!

"Too late to talk!" shouted Channing impatiently. "Besides, there isn't one sane railroad man in 20 in that lot. They're toughs from every town along the Big Muddy, and, by heaven, they'll sack these yards before the regulars can get here unless you can stop it, Langdon! That infernal Seattle train ought to have been in long ago, but it may get here inside of an hour, and their general manager's just behind 'em on a special. What can you do?" And Channing set his stern jaw and glared at the crowd, fight, almost fury, in his blazing eyes, then turned back to Langdon. Before the latter could answer there came a scream from the sheriff.

"Look! Sledge hammers, by heaven!" he cried, pointing to the gate, already shaken by the furious heaving of the throng.

"Then there's only one thing to do," answered Langdon, his face very pale, but his eyes aflame. "Out of the way, please, Mr. Sheriff." And, thus dismissing and disposing of that now useless functionary, he stepped quickly back to the front of his men. Even in that supreme moment he was counting the chances of every move. He had faced rioters before and knew how vital it was that every movement of the troops should be machinelike and precise.

"Listen to me carefully, now, men." He spoke in his clear, animated tone, every word cutting through the clamor so as to be distinctly heard by these his young soldiers standing grave faced and some of them, it was evident, quivering before him, while, on the other hand, at his back and beyond the fence the uproar among the rioters made his voice inaudible. "I shall face you to the right, march opposite the gate, then face you to the front again. Now, watch me well. I shall go to the gates, say a few words to those fellows, then step back and order you to load, and that means load with cartridges. Obey coolly. Take your time, but keep your hammers down at half cock and don't let a finger touch the trigger! Quietly now," he added. Then, according to the tactics of the day, Langdon gave the order to carry arms, paused to see it thoroughly understood, then "Right face," which was done to a man without a flaw; then "Forward, march!" at which, to the accompaniment of redoubled yells and some few half bricks that came hurtling over the fence, but fell short, the company moved off. "Short step in front," he warned the guide, so that his men should not become spread out or, like novices, trip over one another's heels. And so in very commendable order and in another moment he had his men opposite the point of danger. Then rang out the order, "Company, halt!" faced them to the front once more, and there they stood at carry arms, silent, awed, but utterly subordinate, and, despite the fury of abuse and denunciation which greeted their move, looking straight into the faces of the raging mob, but with both ears attent and one eye on their cool headed commander. He smiled at them a moment. "Why, you fellows are steady enough for veterans," he said. And, with his own heart thumping fast, he placidly turned again and with one calm glance at the surging scene before him and purposely leaving his men at the carry he walked quietly forward, Channing and the sheriff away to the rear, looking breathlessly on.

Barely 60 feet interposed between his men and the mob as, all alone, he sauntered down to the gates. In spite of themselves the cursing ringleaders, the brawny wielders of sledge and crow, dropped blasphemy and bars to listen. They saw he had something to say, and curiosity prevailed. That white faced, gray eyed "cuss" had nerve and grit certainly and seemed profoundly unmoved by their uproar. What they heard was not to their liking, but hear it they had to, for he lifted up his voice so that it reached some hundred ears, and yet his words were as calm, deliberate, passionless, as he himself might prove merciless. He spoke as though it were a matter of utter indifference to him whether they burst through and "got it" or staid without and were spared.

"You seem bent on breaking in," the clear tones rang out over the murmur and mutter close at hand—the tumult at the distance. "Now, understand—if these gates fly open, the instant you attempt to enter you get a volley in the face!"

Then slowly, calmly, placidly as before, he turned about, walked back half way, only ten steps or so, and there, first glancing along his waiting line to insure its readiness and close attention, in clear, sharp, commanding tone, with a distinct pause after every word, so that even the mob could hear, gave the order:

"With ball cartridges—load!"

Ten seconds more, and the silent 70 stood in the position preliminary to ready, the brown barrels sloping to the front, the muzzles chin high, every eye fixed upon the gate in stern, calm determination, the ranks inspired by the soldier commander's intrepid and resolute bearing—70 men in uniform obeying to the letter the will of that one soldier in civilian dress—and then, once more in front of the center, Langdon calmly faced the hard breathing, half paralyzed mob without and dropped on his right knee. The act spoke for itself. From that position, instead of in rear of the line, he meant to give the word, and the death dealing volley would flash into their faces over his head.

CHAPTER VIII.

That was a memorable day in railway circles all over the west, but especially so in Nebraska. What made it more remarkable was that, with the going down of the sun, the Big Horn road was practically in running order again, while the Seattle, its powerful rival of the past, was still blockaded. Traversing as they did for 20 miles the same territory, the lines divided only by the narrow gorge of the Red Water, it was strange to mark the bustle and life along the north bank—the lights, head and tail, of passenger, freight and cattle trains hurrying away eastward—and by contrast to note the silence on the hither shore. All day long the "booming" western city, the railway center of the populous section, had been thronged with people over and above its postoffice list—first, the farmers and villagers from all over the county; second, the tramps and toughs and vagrants from all over creation. These latter, having joined forces with the strikers early in the game, had speedily, as has been seen, taken the bit in their teeth, the game into their own hands, and the destruction of trains by fire and flame and the wholesale robbery of freight cars were their doing, not that of the disaffected railway men, who, all too late, wished themselves rid of their desperado allies. But all over the neighborhood now—among the saloons that bordered the yards, the cheap taverns and lodging houses, all through the crowds of sullen, disheartened men skulking about the street corners undecided whether to give up and go back to duty or launch out on some new enterprise at the expense of the road—the story had gone far and wide how that fellow in the derby hat and plain clothes had taken command of a company of "melishy," "tin soldiers—nothing better," and had so coolly handled them and in so cold blooded a way had loaded up with solid lead and given the gang to understand that he'd let daylight through their hides if they stirred a foot through the company's gates that the mob that went there bent on destruction, determined to burn and loot the offices and warehouses, slunk away completely cowed. "That feller's boss of the Big Horn yards this day, boys, and we ain't in it," was the way the leader of the strikers expressed it, and there was no sane man who cared to put it to the test.

Ascribe it to whatever cause we may, it was a petrified fact that from the instant Eric Langdon stepped out at the head of that company the Big Horn's property was safe. The few willing workers left to the management took hold with a vim. An experimental train, guarded by militiamen from other companies, was started down the Red Water. A construction train followed with soldier boys manning both brakes and shovels. Channing, the hustling manager, tumbled clerks, bookkeepers, switchmen and carsmiths into engine cabs, wired for others to meet them at Gunnison and actually had his trains moving at the very moment when the Seattle sheds were going up in flame, and the great general manager of that great corporation, with curses in his heart and his hands in his pockets, stood scowling on the scene of ruin through which the belated regulars were driving the last vestiges of the mob, and Barclay, the general manager aforementioned, was both thinking and saying unwholesome things of the regulars' commander, at whose hospitable board he had been wining and dining but a month or so agone, the too deliberate Captain Nathan.

What Melville would have said to that crestfallen officer when at last, about noon, his train and command arrived cannot well be conjectured, but that the long delay was of serious import there can be no doubt, for Captain Nathan's explanation in writing was demanded and forwarded a day or two later, and both the unique explanation and old Gray Fox's [the name of Gray Fox was given by the Indians to the famous frontier soldier at that time commanding the department of the Platte] telling reply was speedily the talk of the department of the Platte. Nathan said that it was true he might have earlier reached the Red Water valley, but he conceived that his first duty was to protect the lives of his devoted men and prevent the possibility of an ambuscade or pitfall. To this end every dangerous bridge was examined, certain deep cuts were explored, etc., before he deemed it safe to proceed. He admitted long delay at the junction, but declared it necessary because of the alarming reports brought him by "reliable railway officials" to the effect that the tracks were undermined, the trestles "sawed" and every mile of the Seattle from the junction to Brentwood a thread of mines and mantraps. It was true, he said, that the train bearing some militia companies had passed him at Gunnison and gone forward by the Big Horn road, but the way was cleared for them by the sheriff and other officials, whereas on the south bank no friends were to be boned for.

When Herrings Were Plenty.

In former days herrings were so abundant in Newfoundland waters that the most wanton slaughter of them was permitted without any restriction whatever. Seines were allowed to retain 1,000 or 2,000 barrels of the fish until they perished, and then the net was freed, and the whole contents fell to the bottom to pollute the ocean for miles around. When a poaching smack was captured, the herrings it had on board were all thrown into the sea, and frequently boats when chased resorted to the same means to get rid of incriminating evidence. The fish then fetched only 50 cents a barrel of 500 herrings, or ten for a cent.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

ALASKAN LETTER

We Clip the Following Letter From the Hudson Gazette, Hoping it will be of Interest to Many of our Readers.

GEORGE TIFFANY,

ST. MICHEALS, ALASKA, July 12,

Dear Friends: You said before my departure that you would be glad to hear from me, and if I would advise you of my whereabouts you would mail me a Gazette now and then. You can little imagine how I would appreciate reading about many of my kind friends in Hudson, and I trust you will mail me a paper occasionally.

I left St. Paul the 21st of May, enjoying a picturesque journey on the Great Northern Railway through the vast prairies of Minnesota and Dakota, the Bad Lands, the grand old Rockies, along the Columbia River of salmon fame, and last, but not least, through the Cascades. In the latter mountains the scenery is grand; and, as the long train drawn by two mogul engines climbs and curves along the sides of snow-capped mountains you ofttimes wonder that the genius of man was ever able to cope with nature's works. So great are the curves that it well nigh seems possible for the engineer to grab pie out of the dining car window. Before entering the Cascade tunnel some of the passengers piled off and indulged in snow balling on the 23d. of May. It took ten minutes to pass through this marvelous piece of engineering. It is quite impossible for me to describe the beautiful scenery of this trip, and the interest it has for a "Wolverine" The Indians, cowboy ranches, deer, antelopes, etc., reminded me that I was leaving "my happy home for Nome."

Arrived in Seattle the night of the 23d remaining there one week. Seattle resembles Kansas City—a city of hills—but should some of the Hudsonites go up some streets they would say they were mountains. It is a boom town, and at present property is high; in fact everything is high, if they size you up as from the East en route to Alaska.

There is certainly a future for the town, as it is backed by a resourceful state, and its convenient port will be one of importance on the Pacific Coart after the Orient begins to open up. I would say that Seattle offers good inducements for Eastern capital.

Harry Dwyer and I were booked to sail on the steamship Roanoke, the finest boat making the northern trip, and we sailed in the forenoon of May 30th. The trip in Puget Sound was fine, but after passing Cape Flattery into the waters of the Pacific Ocean we encountered a storm which lasted three days. At first I enjoyed the novelty of seeing the huge waves come down toward us, as though they would cover our good ship up, but I lost interest as well as other things, and for five days my menu consisted mostly of "rolls." A sea-sick man once said, that for the first half hour he thought he would die, and then he was afraid he wouldn't. I finally struck sea legs, regained my appetite and lost my "pail" appearance. Among our four hundred passengers there was considerable musical talent, and we enjoyed concerts every evening.

On the 7th of June we made our first stop, at the Dutch Harbor, where we remained two days, recoaling and taking fresh water. All passengers stretched legs, and spent two days collecting sponges, shells and curios, having clam bakes and visiting the quaint little town of Unalaska, which is located on one of the Aleutian Islands. These islands form a sort of a rampart between the Pacific and Behring Sea. It is an interesting sight to see the native Aleuts manipulate their "kyacks" or walrus-skin canoes. Some 3,500 to 4,000 people from the steamers in port roamed around the islands, some climbed up steep mountains, and the base-ball enthusiasts had ball games, which were called at 7 o'clock p. m., and finished long before darkness.

We steamed away from the pretty little harbor and the mountainous island into the waters of Behring Sea, and nothing of interest occured until we ran into a lot of ice near Nunivak Island, where our great steel boat had a hole punched into its bow by floating ice, and for a time there was considerable excitement. It was a consolation, however, to see our wooden consort, "Santa Anna" near us. After a day's work the damage was repaired, but we could not proceed, as the ice was too compact. The natives from the island came out in their "kyacks," with carved ivory, fur and beaded articles, which they traded to the passengers for alarm clocks, combs, mirrors, or anything they took a fancy to. I succeeded in trading a small pocket glass, valued at one cent for a fur bag and two carved ivory fish. The ice fields were certainly a great sight to behold, some pieces towering ten feet above the water, and of enormous breadth.

After eighteen days at sea we arrived at Nome. There is no harbor there, and everything has to be lightered to the beach. We were the second in, and you cannot imagine what an event the arrival of a boat is to the inhabitants of this great mining town, who have been exiled from the outside world all winter long. The first outside papers sold for one dollar, and fruit brought unheard of prices.

The first novel sight presenting itself to the eye is the beach, which made the town famous, and even today many men are washing out gold on this beach one man finding a pocket of the precious stuff, which made him $400 in the one day; but this is rare, as the beach is all worked out, and most of the men at work are those that have been compellep to eke out an existence by washing out two or three dollars a day. The streets of the town are very narrow, barely room for teams to pass, and always muddy, making it impossible to carry heavy loads. The walks are also narrow, about four feet wide, and you can imagine the appearance ten thousand people would make on such streets. High laced leather or hip rubber boots are worn, as when walking in town you are obliged to take the street if you wish to make any headway, and the surrounding country is covered with "tundra," which is a long moss, slippery and wet. Buildings are of frame, canvas or steel. A large hotel burned down, but in a few days it was rebuilt and open for business. There are various mercantile lines represented, but saloons and gambling dens are too numerous to mention.

A miner will come to town with his "poke," which is a leather bag filled with gold dust, and get full of bad whiskey, gamble his gold away and return to his mine to dig more for the same purpose. Money is spent like water, and many of the mining class are embarrassed when winter comes and have to part with portions of their claims. Prevailing interest at the bank is ten per cent. monthly. There are many nice people in Nome, who have been successful both in a mining and mercantile way. The town presents a curious collection of humanity, some rough and wild, some gentle and refined. All places of business have gold scales and the pay for the article purchased is sifted from the "poke" into the scales. The present price for good dust is $16 per ounce. The bank has an assayer and a furnace for assaying. The boat we came on carried $3,770,000 in dust to Seattle in '98. Last year it was estimated that $8,000,000 was taken out of Alaska and $22,000,000 out of the Klondike region. This year many other districts are being developed and no doubt the output will be materially increased.

The man who winters in the country is called a "sour dough" and the new comer a "chechako." One never walks he "mushes." I left Nome the 19th for St. Michaels. We found that the Bay of St. Michaels was full of ice and for days we lay in midst of acres of glistening ice, tons upon tons in single cakes. We came to the conclusion that it was very monotonous and nine of us organized a party, equipped ourselves with long poles and ropes and started out to try and reach the shore six miles away This experience will never be forgotton. Jumping from cake to cake where a misstep would land you in the water between huge cakes which were liable to crush you like an egg shell. As we approached the shore our narrow escapes became more frequent for we were obliged to wade three feet deep in water over ice which in places was porous and full of air holes. It was quite a nervous strain on all of us, but in about two hours and a half we got safely ashore. St. Michaels is headquarters for the U. S. army in Alaska, and the island is in a military reservation, and two companies of infantry besides Gen. Randall and staff are stationed here. The large trading companies doing business in Alaska have stations here, as all freight for the Yukon river is transferred from the ocean boats at this point. It is a busy place and one has a chance to see hordes of miners going to and fro from the Klondike to the Nome regions. Large river steamers are constantly in the bay receiving cargo. The Yukon river is larger than the Mississippi and the scenery along it is said to be very fine. There are a number of native villages in this vicinity and it is very interesting to visit them. They do a great deal of pretty carving in ivory, and make some very nice fur coats, rugs, etc.

After my little journey of 2,473 miles by rail and 3,000 by water, I have arrived at my new Alaskan home and extend to my kind Hudson friends an invitation to come and see me.

Sincerely yours,
G. H. Tiffany.

BIG ENOUGH TO HIT.

So Thought the Small Boy, but the Man Thought Differently.

He wasn't very big, but he was a sturdy little chap with a face that bore the marks of much thinking and premature responsibility. I learned afterward that he was supporting a crippled mother and an invalid sister who had been left helpless in the world by the death of her father. He might have run away from home and evaded the responsibility, but he didn't think of it. He just sold papers.

At the loop on Fifteenth street a crowd was gathered, waiting for the evening cars. A ragged young girl was selling flowers at the Fifteenth street end of the waiting station when a man, rushing to catch his car, knocked her against the side of the building. Without stopping, probably not having noticed what he had done he continued his rush, when the boy stepped in front of him defiantly.

"Say, what do you want to knock a girl down for? Hit me. I'm big enough."

The man paused in surprise and then glanced around. He saw the flower girl picking up her wares and understood. Without a moment's hesitation he went back to her, gave her enough money to make her eyes sparkle with joy and said:

"I'm sorry, my dear, that I hurt you. I didn't see." Then, turning to the boy, he continued: "You said you were big enough, young man, but you're a great deal bigger than you think. Men like you will have a lot to do with keeping this old world in a condition of self respect."

Then he caught his car, and the boy and the girl stood there wondering what he meant.—Denver Times.

DREAMS WHICH HAPPEN.

A Robbery That Was Witnessed by a Woman During Sleep.

A lady spending the summer in the country, some 20 miles from her city residence, dreamed that the latter was robbed, she herself being a witness of the robbery. In her dream she saw two men, one of whom limped, in the act of rummaging some trunks in the hall. A candle stuck by means of its own wax on the newel post illuminated the scene with a dim light.

After finishing their work with the trunks the men went up stairs to a closet, from which they removed curtains and hangings stored for the summer months. The dreamer observed that they overlooked her most valuable curtains, which had been placed well back on upper shelves.

Suddenly she seemed to be transported to her birthplace at Auburn, N. Y., where she especially noted the bronze figure of an Indian which surmounts the prison edifice.

At breakfast the next morning she related her vivid dream to those present, five of whom are now living and vouch for the fact. Subsequently it was found that the city house had been entered and robbed. On the newel post were the marks of the candle. The curtains had all been taken but the best set, which were found where the dreamer had seen them.

Suspicion was directed to a painter who had been at work on the house, who was lame and who disappeared immediately after the robbery. Investigation of this man's character showed that he had served a term in the Auburn penitentiary.—Health Culture.

A DAY OF SPORTS.

Tecumseh Citizens to make Aug. 27 a Red Letter Day of Sports.

A meeting of business men was held in the office of F. B. Wood last evening and the preliminary arrangements were made for a day of sports in Tecumseh Thursday, the 27th. A soliciting committee consisting of T. C. Harris, A. Spayde, T. A. Lowry and L. C. Hayden and an executive committee, consisting of T. C. Harris, C. A. Wright, E. C. Brown, B. J. Garlinghouse and D. L. Whitenack were appointed.

These committees will commence at once to arrange a program of attractions which will undoubtedly surpass anything of the kind held in the county in a long time. No effort will be spared by the committee to make the day a grand success. The committees will try and arrange with the railroads for a reduced rate of fare and excursions from surrounding towns.

PITCHER WINS

The Ball Game at Clinton Between Clinton and Tecumseh for Clinton.

McCARTHY, OF YPSILANTI,

Pitches the Game for our Neighbor-Town. No Credit to Clinton.

The Clintonites are happy, having won the rubber game at that place last Saturday afternoon, or rather their hired pitcher, McCarthy, of Ypsilanti, won the game for them.

The Clinton boys hit Calhoun rather hard, but Tecumseh couldn't get onto McCarthy's curves, although when he played here for Ypsilanti, they hit him pretty well all over the field. Still it was a good game for our team and they do not feel blue over the result at all. There will probably be another game here between the two teams before long. Following is the score:

Ann Arbor vs. Tecumseh.

The Ann Arbor team were no match for Tecumseh last Friday whatever. They played a poor game. Score stood 17 to 1. Batteries for Tecumseh, Harris and Beasley; for Ann Arbor, Donnelly and Boardman.

Blissfield vs. Tecumseh.

The ball game at Blissfield yesterday afternoon between Blissfield and Tecumseh was a fine exhibition of ball playing. Tecumseh won the game 13 to 6. Blissfield had secured a battery from Napoleon, O., and our boys were up against a good team, but the Tecumseh's curve in playing form and their sluging was too much for the Blissfield pitcher. The boys report a good time and kind treatment from the Blissfieldites. A return game will be played here in the near future.

That the Clinton base ball team fully maintains its excellent athletic record was proven Saturday in winning from Tecumseh the last of the series of three games played this season by a score of 8 to 0. There was a large crowd in attendance nearly all surrounding towns being represented and fully five hundred tickets were sold. The gate receipts amounted to over $100.—Clinton Cor.

Important Notice to Water Takers.

The immense waste of water by unmetered water consumers has reduced the fire pressure to a dangerous point. The hours for unmetered lawn sprinkling are 6 to 8 o'clock a. m. and 5 to 8 o'clock p. m.; revolving lawn sprinklers shall not be used more than two hours daily in the evening only; hose shall not be left running at any time. Water service will be shut off summarily from premises where these rules are infracted, from and after Aug. 7, 1901. All water rates not paid at the village clerk's office on or before the 15th of this month, service will be shut off without further notice and a penalty will be collected before such service will be restored.

DR. W. E. BURTLESS

ST. CLAIR

An Operation Performed 5 Years Ago Causes Trouble.

Chas. Marquette of Marine City has sued Dr. W. E. Burtless, the leading physician of St. Clair, for $5,000 damages, charging malpractice. Dr. Burtless performed an operation on Marquette's wife five and one-half years ago and she died four hours thereafter.

Dr. Burtless has made a motion that Marquette put up security for costs in the case. He charges that a conspiracy has been formed to ruin his practice; that the suit is without merit, and that it is brought out of revenge. He is inclined to charge professional rivals with instigating the suit.

Dr. Burtless refuses to discuss his charges of conspiracy. He says that if the case ever comes to trial, which he doubts, he will prove his allegations. The doctor says he has never been paid for his attendance upon Mrs. Marvvette, and he has a suit pending to recover judgement against Marquette. He has been lenient but now he will push it through.

He alleges that before Marquette brought suit his attorney was assured by a rival of Burtless' that he would go on the stand against the doctor. The attorney then came to him, Burtless says, and offered to settle for $1,000, but he told him to go to the devil.

Some interesting facts concerning professsional jealousy will be brought out if the case comes to trial.

IMMORTAL J. N.

The queer ways and sayings of a queer man. The latest snap shot of this queer man appeared in the Sunday St. Louis Republic.

The St. Louis Republic of Sunday, Aug. 4. contains the latest picture of the Immortal J. N., who it will be remembered visited in Tecumseh last spring. The Republic tells about his favorite joke about the shoemaker.

He says he once ordered a shoemaker to make him a pair of shoes, and, as one foot was smaller than the other he told the shoemaker to make one shoe smaller than the other, but when he went after them, he was surprised to find that the shoemaker had made one shoe larger than the other.

Another joke, J. N. often tells about his hotel bill. He asked the landlord what his bill was. The landlord told him it was two dollars and as J. N. never has any money, he asked him to make it a ittle less. So the landlord told him he would make it $1.00. "Well", says J. N., "I don't like to see any one that is more generous than I, so I will throw off the other dollar."

At another time he was attending a speech in Mousouri and he noticed that the people did not laugh at the jokes, so he got up went down the center isle and got up on the stage with the speaker standing in front of him, and waving his arms toward the audience he cried "This pressure is a great power," and he fell down like one dead. Before any one had time to go to his assistance he was again on his feet, and said: "I thought if you couldn't tumble to the gentlemans jokes, I would."

He is about 60 years old, very tall and has long gray hair. He is at present in the west, but is known all over the United States.

Waring—Macham.

Sunday evening at the M. E. Church occured the marriage of Miss Myrtie Macham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Macham, to Floyd Waring, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Alva Waring. At half past seven to the beautiful strains of Mendelssons wedding march, the bridal couple came down the isle unattended. They were met at the alter by Rev. Seelye, who preformed the ceremony, assisted by Rev. Marsh, of Tipton.

Immediately after the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Waring received their friends in the reception room of the church. The church was prettily decorated for the occasion with palms and ferns.

The bride wore a travelling gown of gray and carried a bouquet of roses, the groom wore the conventional black. Mrs. Waring is one of Tecumseh's most highly respected young ladies, and has lived here all her life, having graduated from our public schools. Mr. Waring is an examplary young man liked and respected by all who know him. He is in the employ of Avery and company.

Mr. and Mrs. Waring left for Reading, Mich. last night and will visit friends for a few days. On their return home they will go to house keeping in their newly furnished home on Maiden Lane street, and the congratulations of their many friends go with them.

COMPANY C.

Left for Camp over the Lake Shore Monday Morning.

Capt. Bert E. Gray received orders to take his company for a few day's outing at camp. The boys left yesterday morning, about 40 strong, for camp. They are anticapating a pleasant time, and they certainly should have it as the camp at Manistee is one of the pleasantest places in Michigan.

ANN ARBOR SPEAKS.

Mr. Edwin Wooley, contractor and carpenter of Ann Arbor, adds his voice to that of the army of Michigan people who endorse the little conqueror. Our representative found him at his place of residence, No. 618 Fountain street. Mr. Wooley appreciates "a good thing" as do most of our readers, and does not hesitate to tell his experience for the benefit of others. Endorsement of this kind has made Doan's Kidney Pills a household word throughout the state. The good they have done has won them many a title and such worthy names among the people as the "little conqueror of kidney ills," "little enemies to backache," "modern wonder worker," etc.

Mr. Wooley says:—"I was subject for years to attacks of backache or pains through the loins and kidneys, generally of a dull, heavy, aching nature, but often when the weather changed or when I moved awkwardly they became sharp twinges of pain. As I was doing work which required stooping it was very painful, exceedingly so, if I caught cold which, as a rule, settled in my loins. I tried various remedies but was never successful in obtaining any permanent benefit until I used Doan's Kidney Pills. At this time my back was troubling me a great deal but shortly after I began the treatment the aching abated and when I had finished it I was cured. This was months ago and up to date there has been no recurrence of the trouble."

It Was His Deal.

A mining engineer who has returned from Alaska brings, among other interesting things, evidence that the higher the latitude the greater the latitude. Watching a poker game in which the stakes were heavy he saw a player give himself four aces from the bottom of the pack.

Burning with indignation at such shameless cheating, he turned to a bystander and whispered, "Did you see that?"

"See what?"

"Why, that fellow dealt himself four aces!"

"Well, wasn't it his deal?"

Why We Bathe.

Professor Vivian Lewes, at the London institution, recently furnished the following answer to the question, "Why do we bathe?" Twenty-eight miles of sweat glands in our skin are discharging 26 ounces of water per day and leaving upon the outer surface of the skin a full ounce of solid matter. These are aided by the oil glands of the hair, which facilitate the adherence of external dirt. Hence the refreshing character of the morning bath and the necessity for grease absorbing alkalies in soap.

For Whooping Cough.

"Both my children were taken with whooping cough," writes Mrs. O. E. Dutton, of Danville, Ill. "A small bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar cured the cough and saved me a doctor's bill. J. J. Orr.

Making It Clear.

The London Spectator tells a funny story of a definition given by a well known public speaker in an address to children.

"Now, children," he said, "I propose to give you on the present occasion an epitome of the life of St. Paul. Perhaps some of you are too young to understand what the word 'epitome' means. 'Epitome,' children, is in its signification synonymous with synopsis."

Having made this simple and clear explanation to the children, the speaker went on with his story.

Mr. Daniel Bantz, Otterville, Ia., says: "Have had asthma and a very bad cough for years, but could get no relief from the doctors and medicines I tried, until I took Foley's Honey and Tar. It gave immediate relief, and done me more good than all the other remedies combined. J. J. Orr.

FLOWER AND TREE.

A single leaf of the orange tree, carefully planted, will often take root and grow.

Seven-year-old tea plants yield four ounces of leaves apiece, or 700 pounds of tea to the acre.

New Zealand has in its edelweiss a plant differing but slightly from the famous Swiss variety.

An oak tree at 100 years averages 41 inches in diameter, a larch 40 inches, an elm 50 inches and a yew 9 inches.

A white pine tree 20 years old ought to be about 25 feet high, and at 30 or 40 years of age it ought to measure about 60 feet.

The pest of British Columbia forests is a plant called the devil's club. It has spikes which, when they enter the flesh, break off and produce poisoned wounds, which fester.

Wore His Old Hat Home.

They were talking about getting bald. "Men wear their hats too much," the doctor was saying. "I have noticed that a great many business men wear them in their offices. The head should be kept bare as much as possible." "My partner always wear an old straw hat around the store," replied a Market street merchant. "He wears this in winter as well as in summer, or at least he did until last winter, when he had an experience that cured him of it.

"One very cold afternoon he left the office early, and as he walked briskly through the street he noticed in a rather absentminded way that he was attracting considerable attention. People turned and looked after him and laughed. It was not until he had walked five or six blocks that he realized what it all meant. He met a lady of his acquaintance, and when he went to raise his hat he found that he was still wearing the old straw one, having forgotten to change it when he left the office. Fortunately there was a hat store near by, and he went in and bought one more suitable to the season."—Philadelphia

The Prudent Scotsman.

A cautious Scotsman, 85 years old, had saved enough to purchase a piece of freehold land upon which he had had his eye for some time. He repaired to the freeholder and opened negotiations for the purchase. The freeholder, however, informed him that for some reason or other he could not part with the freehold, but said he would give him a lease for 999 years. This, he was informed, was practically the same thing. "Na, na," said the aged one, shaking his gray head; "time soon rins awa'."—London Outlook.

HE COWED THE LION.

THE DARKY BELTED ALL THE FIGHT OUT OF MONARCH.

Laughable Manner In Which the Big and Ugly Circus Animal Was Returned to the Showman After a Railroad Smash Up.

"It's queer how animals will act in a railroad wreck," said the boss canvasman. "Now there wus th' Saberlee wreck. Six cars wus in th' ditch an half o' th' show's dens wus under 'em. There wus one cage o' monkeys mashed flat that we knowed of, an a lot o' th' other animals had took t' th' woods, little animals, zebras an wolves an deer an such like. Nothin t' do any harm exceptin th' big lion, Monarch. His den wus bottom up in a little puddle o' ditch water, with a hole stove in it big enough t' let out a cow, an Monarch himself wus gone with the little animals.

"Well, it wus all off with makin th' stand that day, so we put up th' runs, got th' cookhouse outfit down on th' ground, had breakfast an started in t' dig th' stuff out o' th' ditch. Th' railroad company's wreckin crew come along t' help us, an we'd got purty well under way when a tall, black buck darky come out o' th' woods an stood round rubberin.

"Nobody paid any attention t' him fer awhile, but by'n'by Mack, th' chandelier man, spoke t' him, kind o' kidded him about bein han'some, er some such guff. It wus Missouri, an he wus a real black buck. Didn't have anything t' say back—didn't say anything at all, in fact, fer awhile. Jes' shuffled round in his cowhide boots from one foot t' th' other an grinned bashfullike. By'n'by when he saw we didn't roast him hard he kind o' took courage.

"'Did any o' you gemmen losed a giraffe?' he says.

"'Giraffe?' Mack says. 'No; we never owned no such thing with this trick. Why?'

"'Well, boss, Ah done foun' somethin up in mah 'tato patch this mawnin, an Ah 'lowed as maybe hit 'longed t' you all.'

"Mack got interested. 'Wot does it look like?'

"'Lawdy, boss, hit's mos' monstrous. Nevah did see no sech ole thing befoh, sah. Big cat vahmint, with yaller eyes, an hit done come a-snahlin an a-spittin at me soon as Ah got out o' baid.'

"'Where is it?' says Mack.

"'Oh, Ah cawt hit all righty. Done put a rope roun' hits neck an tied hit t' mah cabin.'

"'Go an git it an fetch it down here,' says Mack. Then th' wreckin crew got a tackle roun' another den, an we forgot all about th' darky.

"Maybe it wus 20 minutes, an maybe it wus half an hour when we heard a noise over on th' road amongst th' trees—a noise kinder like a nigger drivin a mule or like somethin bein driven. It come nearer an louder an louder an nearer. Everybody stopped work an listened, an th' ole man himself come out o' his car with his napkin hangin roun' his neck.

"'What is that?' he pipes up in his snappy way. 'Who is that out there? Go an see what that racket is, some o' you boys. Hurry up, now.'

"Nobody paid any attention t' him, an th' noise got nearer an nearer. In a couple o' minutes a cloud o' dust sailed out from behind th' trees. When it got within a hundred yards o' th' track, it cleared up a bit, an there wus that big, black nigger with a rope in one mit an a piece o' fence rail in th' other. On th' other end o' th' rope wus Monarch.

"Of all th' mean, sneakin, underhanded cat animals that ever traveled with a circus Monarch wus th' worst an a powerful fighter when he had any sort o' show. Sometimes we'd put our hands on th' canvas cover o' his cage when he had t' run over th' train, an there never wus a time, day or night, that he hadn't a slap ready fer you.

"Well, that darky wus a-lammin him with his chunk o' fence an talkin mule talk t' him wuss than anything you ever saw in th' south.

"'C'm on 'long heah, you yaller eyed devil,' he wus sayin. 'Ah don' know what you is, but you ain' goin snahl ner spit at me, nohow. C'm on 'long theh, you big sassy vahmint,' an with that he'd lam him with his piece o' fence an let drive with his cowhide boots.

"An you kin bet your life Monarch wus a-comin. I never saw a critter so cowed as he wus. Why, when that nigger brought him right in amongst us there wus nobody that took th' trouble t' open up a gangway, an I reckon any young one could 'a' took him by th' scruff o' th' neck an turned him over on his back. He wus jest a great, overgrown pet tomcat, with all th' fight an meanness walloped out o' him.

"We'd yanked his den up on to th' road bed with th' hole in th' end butted against a wagon. Th' door wus open, an when Monarch saw his happy little home waitin there fer him he jerked th' rope out o' th' darky's hand an' bolted inside it. He couldn't get fur enough inside, either—went away up in th' fur corner an tried t' hide. Saberlee shut th' door an spoke to him, but Monarch wus th' worst whipped cat animal you ever saw."—New York Sun.

Suppressing Cruelty.

Many a man who would be ashamed to strike a brute beast with a bludgeon has no shame in making a bludgeon of his tongue to strike human beings in the tender places of their being—their social sensibilities and their self esteem. Cruelty in its gross and outward forms we have in good measure suppressed, but the refined cruelty of the bitter word, the unloving censure, the abusive harangue, is not yet extinct. Let us be as careful of men's inner skin as of their outer.—Exchange.

Influenza.

It is very well known that the influenza is not an exclusively modern complaint, but I am not sure whether a curious reference to it by Bower, the continuator of Fordun's chronicle, has been noted. Writing of the year 1420 he says that among those who died in Scotland that year were Sir Henry St. Clair, earl of Orkney; Sir James Douglas of Dalkeith, Sir William de Abernethy, Sir William de St. Clair, Sir William Cockburn and many others, all by "that infirmity whereby not only great men, but innumerable quantity of the commonalty, perished, which was vulgarly termed le Quhew [le Quhew a vurgaribus dicebatur]" (Bower, xv, 32.) Now, "quh" in Scottish texts usually represents the sound of "wh" (properly aspirated.) Therefore it seems that in the fifteenth century the influenza was known as "the whew," just as it is known in the twentieth century as "the flue."

I have refrained from quoting at length Bower's explanation of the cause of the epidemic, but there seems little doubt that the disease was identical with that with which we are so grievously familiar.—Notes and Queries.

HANDLING BIG SERPENTS.

Poisonous Snakes In Demand by Doctors For Experimenting.

"In handling a big snake you must always touch him with a soft, smooth, gliding motion of the hand, making it feel to him as much as possible like the touch of another snake, and, besides, you must be careful to keep his tail out straight. Keep the tail straight, and he can't coil on you. His bite is nothing, for he has not poison, but his coil around your leg or arm or body will crush the bones.

"The poisonous snakes—the water, moccasins, rattlesnakes and copperheads—are bought for zoos. Now and then a doctor buys them heavily for awhile. He wants to experiment with their poison. After he has been bitten two or three times he stops buying.

"There are a number of people who buy snakes for pets. These people always, without an exception, make pets also of rats, mice and turtles. Any one fond of snakes is sure to be fond of those other things too. They keep their snakes and turtles and rats as near as possible to them. Often they keep them in their bedrooms. There was a young man who used to come here last year after pine snakes—a university student. That young man would sit with his hand in among the coils of a cageful of snakes for hours. He would take one's head in his hands and lift its face close up to his own and gaze for a long time in its eyes. Then he would hold it off and stroke it and study its changing colors in a kind of trance. I don't know what pleasure or satisfaction he got out of the snakes. He bought over a dozen from me during the year and kept them in his bedroom in a boarding house. They all escaped one night through a rathole and got among the neighbors and raised general ballyhoo."—Philadelphia Record.

LOVE AMONG SAVAGES.

Ability to Stand Torture a Test of Masculine Devotion.

Among the Arabs of upper Egypt the youth who proposes to a girl must submit to a whipping at the hands of all her male relatives, and, says a dry narrator, "if he wishes to be considered worth having he must receive the chatisement, which is sometimes exceedingly severe, with an expression of enjoyment."

Not infrequently it is the maiden herself who imposes the test. The Sakalava girls of Madagascar make their lovers stand at a short distance from a clever spear thrower and catch between the arm and side every weapon flung at them. If the youth "displays fear or fails to catch the spear, he is ignominiously rejected, but if there be no flinching and the spears are caught he is at once proclaimed an accepted lover."

Worse than this is the trial enforced upon their suitors by the Dongolowee girls. When in doubt as to the respective merits of two rivals, the young lady fastens a sharply pointed knife to each elbow; then, seating herself between her lovers, she drives the blades slowly into their thighs, and the hero who takes the greatest length of steel without a murmur wins the bride.

Major Mitchell in his "Expeditions Into the Interior of Eastern Australia" says of the natives on the river Darling that all their ideas of fighting are associated with the possession of gins or wives and that after a battle the wives "do not always follow their fugitive husbands from the field, but frequently go over, as a matter of course, to the victors." "None but the brave deserve the fair" is a maxim well understood of most barbaric races.—Chambers' Journal.

Composition on Love.

Love is a thing that makes people think each other pretty when nobody else does.

It causes two persons to be awful quiet when you're round and also quiet when you're not round—only in a different way.

It also causes people to sit together on one end of a bench when there's heaps of room on the other end.

Nurses has it and sometimes policemen. That's when they don't know where you are, and you have lots of fun playing on the grass.

Husbands and wives has it, but most generally only lovers.

Old people don't have much, 'cause it has to be about dimples and red cheeks and fluffy curls and lots of things which old people don't ever have.

When I grow up, I'll have to go and love some one, I suppose. Only she'll have to let me say what to do.

I've written all I know about it till I do grow up.—Eddy in New York Sun.

Nothing Like Accuracy.

First Clubman—Woggles, I want you to decide a bet. Higginside says the quotation, "Hell hath no fury like a woman scorned," is from the book of Psalms, and I say it's from Job. We've put up $5 on it and agreed to leave it to you.

Second Clubman—I think you're both wrong. I know it's in the Bible, but my impression is that you'll find it in the proverbs of Solomon.—Chicago Tribune.

Pin Money.

Spoiled Wife—Why are you dividing your month's salary in two heaps, Henry?

Indulgent Husband—I thought I ought to put this five in the bank this month, love. The other $95 is your pin money.—Ohio State Journal.

The Diplomat's Solution.

"And if an irresistible force meets an immovable body?" suggested his friend.

"The situation, indeed, would be critical," admitted the eminent diplomat; "but, with mutual restraint and reasonable concessions, I see no reason to despair of an amicable settlement."—Puck.

"Some people," said Uncle Eben, "doesn't seem to take no special interest in tellin de troof 'ceppin when it's sumpin disagreeable."—Washington Star.

France and the Potato.

There was much difficulty in introducing the potato into France. It was only toward the end of the reign of Louis XIV that it began to be used. The learned had opposed its introduction systematically, saying it produced leprosy, and the common people refused to test it even on their live stock.

A trick at last established it. Fields were planted all over France with potatoes and carefully guarded until the tubers were ripe, it being given out that these fields were growing a new thing specially for the king and that trespassers would be prosecuted. Now, the laws at that time were severe. A man might be hanged when he hunted in the wild forest, for the game was the seigneur's, almost each one of whom kept his private gallows. Trespass against the king implied, therefore, terrible punishment.

The danger of the punishment proved itself an alluring bait. As the contriver, wise in foresight, had seen, the fields that were purposely left unguarded were pillaged right and left, the potatoes eaten, some kept and planted and the tuber at last effectually introduced in France.

Irving's Intensity.

The piercing eyes and intense expression of Henry Irving once had the effect of making a fellow actor altogether forget that he was on the stage at all. It occurred in Manchester during a performance of "Macbeth," and in the scene where Macbeth says to one of the murderers, "There's blood upon thy face!" Irving put so much earnestness into his words that the murderer forgot his proper answer ("'Tis Banquo's, then") and replied in a startled voice: "Is there? Great Scott!" He fancied, as he afterward said, that he had broken a blood vessel.—Ledger Monthly.

Unknown to the Lawyers.

Judge —, one of the great lawyers of the last generation, charged a client a retainer of $1,000 in an important case, but the parties got together next morning and settled the suit before the judge had opened a book or written a line concerning it. His client called to see if he would not refund part of the money. The lawyer seemed surprised at the suggestion. "Refund!" he exclaimed. "Refund, did you say? My friend, that is a kind of fund unknown to the legal profession!"—New York Press.

Cleaning Oil Paintings.

An art journal suggests raw potatoes to clean oil paintings. Have a few potatoes at hand, each cut in halves. The fresh surface is dampened slightly with cold water and used to rub the canvas. As the potatoes show soil the surface is sliced off and the rubbing continued. This process will create a little lather, which should be wiped off as fast as it accumulates with a clean, damp sponge. When the whole canvas is cleaned, it should be washed over lightly with clean water from which the chill has been taken and finally the water carefully wiped off with an old clean silk handkerchief. Raw potatoes to clean paintings are frequently in hearsay evidence, but this description of the process may be of value. It is suggested by way of reasonable caution that the experiment should be tried first upon a canvas of trifling value and upon one corner of that.

Life Insurance.

It is an interesting fact that, whatever the reason may be, life insurance is much more popular in the United States than in any other country. In proportion to their numbers the American people carry twice as much life insurance as the Britishers, five times as much as the Germans and eight times as much as the French.

This is partly explained by the large number of American policies issued to serve other purposes than mere provision for the families of the insured. The scope of what may be called business as distinguished from family insurance is constantly enlarging. A novel and interesting recent development of it is the insurance of the lives of Protestant ministers for large sums which are made payable at their deaths to their churches.—New York World.

How He Saved His Dinner.

In the little town of Arundel there is a taxidermist who is gifted with wonderful presence of mind. Here is an instance:

Some time ago a gentleman called at his shop with a cock pheasant, which he desired to have skinned, stating at the same time that he did not require the body. This quite suited the taxidermist, who thought the pheasant would do for his dinner on the morrow.

However, later in the day the gentleman called again and said that he would take the body away. The taxidermist replied that it was unusual for customers to take the bodies away, but that he had no objection, and he fetched the bird, which his wife had put on a plate and covered with flour.

"Ah!" exclaimed the gentleman. "It looks very nice. But what is this white powder with which it is covered?"

"Oh, that," replied the taxidermist quietly, "is arsenic. I always cover the bodies with that until I can dispose of them."

"Ar-arsenic!" stammered the gentleman. "Why, I thought that the bird would be good to eat. Thank you, I won't trouble to take it away with me. Good day."

The taxidermist had saved his dinner.—London Answers.

Rude Justice.

A certain Arizona justice of the peace, whose knowledge of the law was never gained from books or actual practice before the bar, was hearing an assault and battery case. The lawyer for the defense was shouting his arguments when the court said:

"That will do. Sit down."

He then adjusted his spectacles and sagely observed:

"Prisoner, sthand up! Accordin tah th' law an th' evydince—an there is no evydince—Oi found yez guilty, sor, an foine yez $50. If yez air guilty, faith, it's a very light sintince, an if yez are not guilty it'll be a mighty good lesson for yez!"—Detroit Free Press.

Their Secret is Out.

All Sadieville, Ky., was curious to learn the cause of the vast improvement in the health of Mrs. S. P. Whittaker, who had for a long time, endured untold suffering from a chronic bronchial trouble. "It's all due to Dr. King's New Discovery," writes her husband. "It competely cured her and also cured our little grand-daughter of a severe attack of Whooping Chough." It positively cures Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, all Throat and Lung troubles. Guaranteed bottles 50c. and $1.00. Trial bottles free at C. A. Wright's drug store.

UNINHABITED ISLANDS.

There Are Thousands of Them In the Indian Ocean.

If you should want an island—that is, an uninhabited island—for the purpose of occupying it alone, Robinson Crusoe like, or to use it for romantic fiction or for any other purpose, to the exclusion of all others in the world, you need have no trouble in finding one if you see fit to make a journey to the Indian ocean. In the waters between Madagascar and India you can find more than 15,000 of them, where there is not a human being and where you can, if you will, be monarch of all you survey.

An English traveler has recently been among the small islands that dot the western end of the Indian ocean to make an inventory of them and reports that he counted 16,100 and found only about 600 of them inhabited. Now, there is a good chance for any one who may want an island.

These particular islands are not large, as islands go, but very many of them are sufficient for the purpose of a Robinson Crusoe or any other novel here or for even a small colony of shipwrecked mariners or other persons who might be cast on one of them or seek for the purpose of making a home pretty much out of the busy world.

Some of them are only an acre or two, well elevated above the tide, while others are a quarter of a mile in diameter and running from that up to a mile or two in length and a quarter or less of the length in breadth. Many of them are granitic structures that rise steeply from 20 to 100 feet, well covered with rich soil, through which small fresh water streams hurry to the sea, which they reach after flowing over beaches of glistening calcareous sand that are begirt by coral reefs, which form walls about the islands.

When the rainy day saved for finally comes, a man finds that it is a deluge, whereas he only saved for a shower.—Atchison Globe.

A GENTLE HINT.

In our style of climate, with its sudden changes of temperature,—rain, wind and sunshine often intermingled in a single day,—it is no wonder that our children, friends and relatives are so frequently taken from us by neglected colds, half the death resulting directly from this cause. A bottle of Boschee's German Syrup kept about home for immediate use will prevent serious sickness, a large doctor's bill, and perhaps death, by the use of three or four doses. For curing Consumption Hemorrhages, Pneumonia, Severe Coughs, Croup, or any disease of the Throat or Lungs, its success is simply wonderful, as your druggist will tell you. SOME WISE DON'TS.

Don't confound hauteur with dignity or repose with stupidity.

Don't "howl," "roar" or "explode." To laugh heartily is better.

Don't boast. The illiterate and the self conscious are thus made manifest.

Don't use superlatives. Few things require them, and they weaken description.

Don't think a foreigner can comprehend you any better if you shout into his ear.

A Railroad Man's Story.

"One of the worst starts I ever had," said an engineer the other day, "was due to a large, lazy pig that had got on my mind. Nothing will slide a train more easily and destructively from the rails than live pork. This particular specimen had a habit of burrowing alongside the track, and it was a fair presumption that sooner or later he would find something to interest him between the rails and somebody would go down the bank.

"I was coming down a hill one day at high speed and craning my neck for a comforting sight of piggy in his accustomed place when, as I popped around the curve, a bright red flag assaulted my anxious gaze. The connection between that flag and the pig was only a bit of mental aberration on my part, but it was very vivid. I shut off and grabbed the whistle cord, but before I could even screech for brakes I saw that the flag was only a red flannel shirt which the good woman of the shanty to which the pig belonged had hung on an improvised clothesline between the telegraph poles.

"That may not sound like much of a scare, but it represents a type that turns the railroad man's hair to a delicate [illegible]

WAITING IN SILENCE

Labor and Capital Are Faced in Battle Array

WILL BE NO MORE CONFERENCES

Both Sides Active in Preparing for the General Order to Strike, Which Goes Into Effect Next Saturday Night.

Pittsburg, Pa., Aug. 9.—The general strike becomes effective on Saturday night and the claims put forth on either side as to the results that will accrue from it are widely at variance. Officials of the steel companies admit that thousands of men will obey the order of President Shaffer of the Amalgamated association and go out, but they positively deny that the tie-up will be general. They point to their success in reopening four mills that were closed and say that they have strong holds at points where the Amalgamated association claims the greatest strength. The steel officials are inclined to minimize the sympathetic assistance which the association will get. One official stated the matter this way:

"What can the machinists do? Have they not just been beaten? And the mineworkers. Did they aid the firemen?"

President Shaffer and his associates on the other hand, insist that the strike order will be generally obeyed and that they will obtain more than enough support to cripple the steel corporation.

"We have these people licked to a standstill already," was the way that Vice-President Gibson of Pittsburg voiced the feelings of the Amalgamated people.

The first act of violence in this neighborhood occurred at Natrona last night when a foreigner, whose name could not be learned, was shot, presumably by strikers. He was employed in the copper extraction department of the Pennsylvania Salt Manufacturing Co. and was struck by shot in three places, but not seriously injured.

President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor made the following brief statement: "I cannot say anything for publication at present. I shall be glad to see any of the press when the time comes to speak, but in the meantime I cannot discuss these matters. I expect to remain in Pittsburg today and will hold another conference with Mr. Shaffer during the day. When we have reached a conclusion, I will call you all in and give you our decision."

It was reported that an attempt would be made before morning to reopen the Painter mill.

At Newcastle the Raney Rosena furnaces were shut down, leaving 600 men without employment.

Battleship Wisconsin for Panama.

Washington, Aug. 9.—Just before the navy department closed an order was sent to Capt. Geo. C. Reiter, of the battleship Wisconsin, now near the Puget Sound naval station, to proceed to San Francisco, from which point the battleship will be dispatched to Panama, in case the state department requests the presence of a warship on the Pacific side of the isthmus. This action was taken after Acting Secretary Hackett had received from the state department a communication from J. Edward Simons of New York, president of the Panama Railway Co., setting forth the seriousness of the situation on the isthmus and suggesting that warships be sent both to the Atlantic and the Pacific side.

Checks for Millions.

New York, Aug. 9.—Stockholders of the Standard Oil Co. will receive next month a dividend of $8 a share for the third quarter of the year. In the payment of this dividend $8,000,000 will be distributed by the big oil trust to its stockholders. Checks for this amount will be sent out on Sept. 16.

Directors of the company, at a meeting this week, ordered this dividend. Already the company has distributed $32,000,000 in dividends this year, so that the third quarter's profits in which the stockholders will share will swell the total to $40,000,000. In March last a dividend of $20 a share, or $20,000,000, was paid, and in June one of $12 a share, or a total of $12,000,000, was distributed.

Filed Big Claim.

Washington, Aug. 9.—The second largest claim yet filed with the Spanish treaty claims commission has been presented by Francis Zeigle, an American citizen, resident in Cuba. His claim amounts to $872,427. Zeigle says that in 1896 his plantation was worth $1,000,000, but by reason of the depredations of the Spanish troops, he is now reduced to absolute want. He states that he himself was compelled to leave the island and went to New York and later his family, owing to the persecutions of the Spanish troops, were compelled to accept the courtesies of the British consul, who spirited them away, they finally joining him in New York.

Cresceus Failed to Connect.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Aug. 9.—About 7,000 people were disappointed in the exhibition by Cresceus at the Hudson River driving park yesterday afternoon. Paced by a running horse and driven by his owner, George H. Ketcham, the champion went his mile in 2:06¼. He started shortly after 4 o'clock, after Mr. Ketcham had driven him three warming up heats in 2:48, 2:32 and 2:17. On the trial, the running horse picked him up near the quarter, which Cresceus made in 31¼ seconds. He went to the half in 1:03; to the three quarters in 1:35¼, and to the wire in 2:06¼. There was faint applause when the time was posted.

Comets of the Past Century.

During the nineteenth century 235 new comets were discovered as against 62 in the eighteenth century. The nineteenth century also beheld a greater number of large and brilliant comets than did its predecessor. The finest of these were the comets of 1811, 1843, 1858, 1881 and 1882. In the year 1800 only one periodical comet was known, Halley's. Now many are known, of which at least 17 have been seen at more than one return to perihelion.

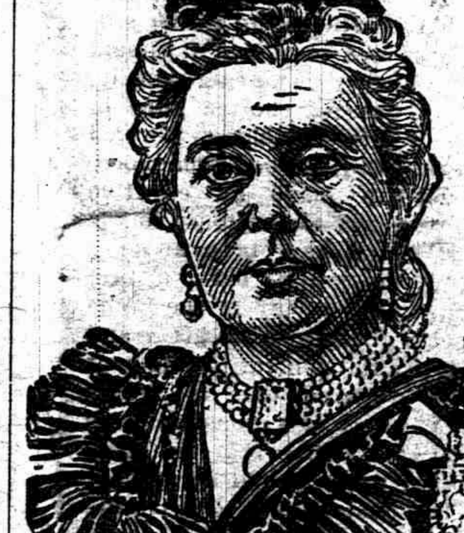
EMPRESS FREDERICK'S FUNERAL

A Simple But Impressive Service in Accord With Her Wishes.

Cronberg, Aug. 9.—The funeral service held at Friedrichshof late in the afternoon was simple but highly impressive. It was performed at the request of the late dowager empress by the Bishop of Ripon, her own chaplain, assisted by the Rev. Thos. Teignmouth-Shore, canon of Worcester. The coffin stood in the death chamber covered with a long black pall and strewn with white roses. At the foot, with bowed head and slightly in advance of the other mourners, stood Emperor William in the uniform of the Black Hussars, the regiment of the late dowager empress. Just behind him were all the other members of the royal family except Prince Henry of Prussia. The other mourners who formed two lines in the rear, included Prince and Princess Christian of Schleswig-Holstein, Col. Pritzelwitz, Crown Prince Frederick William's aide; Count von Seckendorff, who was the secretary of the deceased; the Duke of Cambridge, the Grand Duke of Hesse and a few court officials.



EMPRESS FREDERICK.

The service was conducted entirely without music. It consisted of a portion of the burial service of the Church of England, the 90th psalm, a reading from the first epistle to the Corinthians, and the benediction. The congregation rendered the responses.

Immediately after its conclusion Emperor William and empress drove back to Homburg. A few people standing near the Friedrichshof gate saluted respectfully on their majesties arrival and departure. The castle still presents the appearance of a state of siege.

FRIGHTFUL EXPERIENCE.

Sea Monster Seizes a Naval Officer While in Bathing.

Washington, Aug. 9.—Admiral Kempff has forwarded to the navy department an official report, thrilling in its details, of the biting off of the leg of Quartermaster S. McKie, third class, of the gunboat Annapolis, by a shark or other mammoth sea monster.

The Annapolis has been stationed of late at Iloilo, and on June 24 last a party was sent out for rifle target practice. Dr. Rohrer, in command of the Annapolis, states that permission was given to several of the men to go swimming while others were engaged in firing. Two of the men had been in for some time when McKie joined them and asked them if they had been able to touch bottom. Being answered in negative, he made a dive and was gone for several seconds. One of the seamen says he heard a gurgling sound beneath the water. A moment later McKie appeared on the surface and shouted "shark, shark." The surface of the water was covered with blood near where he came up. McKie started to swim, and, although crippled, reached the boat and was pulled in by his companions. A horrible sight met their eyes, the quartermaster's leg having been bitten off near the knee. He will live.

BLISS AT MANISTEE

Governor Formally Received at the State Encampment

DINED WITH BRIGADE OFFICERS

Will Try Yachting and Also Preside at the Grand Review of State Troops Arranged for Sunday—Visited the Kopje.

Camp Bliss, Manistee, Mich., Aug. 9.—At 5 o'clock Gov. A. T. Bliss and wife arrived at Camp Bliss. The governor's staff and Gen. Boynton and staff and the Third infantry, commanded by Col. Bates, met the train. Robert L. Blacker of Chicago, formerly the richest man in Manistee, and Louis Sands, now the richest man here, were also present. A carriage was provided for the governor and wife and the regiment started towards the camp at once, with the band playing. The staff officers were in full dress uniform.

The parade marched to Boynton kopje, where Gen. Boynton and the brigade officers accorded the governor a military reception, 17 guns booming out as the salute to the governor, the bands playing. The powder, however, gave out and the full number of guns were not fired.

The parade then marched around the camp, the men turning out of their tents and cheering. The Third infantry passed before the governor, after the officers of the company had marched up to the kopje and saluted in battalion formation. With uncovered heads the officers listened to the playing of the national hymn and then the governor was escorted by his staff officers to their kopje, where all shook hands and jollied a few moments, after which the governor was escorted by the staff to supper.

A telegram was received at the camp from Ann Arbor, announcing the death of the father of Ernest Wuster of Company I, First regiment. Wurster is with the regiment at the outlying camp.

A. P. Bliss, the governor's brother, is at the camp with the governor. Today the governor, staff and invited guests will go for a yacht ride on Charles K. Canfield's yacht Cangardna. Canfield is a Chicago millionaire, formerly a resident of Manistee.

Millionaire Lawson Orders the Independence Destroyed.

Boston, Aug. 9.—If no yacht can be found to race against the Independence by Sept. 3 by Mr. Lawson, the owner will order her broken up as old metal. This was his instruction when the only chance for a race against either the Constitution or Columbia stopped because the managers of these yachts would not enter a regatta in which there was to be a class for 90-footers. The particulars are contained in the following statement issued by Mr. Clapp, who is Mr. Lowson's secretary:

"The only pending engagement of the Independence was a race under the auspices of the Indian Harbor Yacht club, to take place Aug. 14, and Mr. Lawson, before leaving for an eastern cruise which he intends to extend until Sept. 10, gave instructions to have the Independence put in the best racing condition possible and to remain at Newport tuning up. The justices called on Hudson to arrest Carty. During a scuffle between Carty and the policeman young Magan Carty walked up and shot Hudson with a shotgun. The discharge entered Hudson's neck and caused instant death. Carty was arrested.

MILLIONS WAITING

DEPOSITED BY A SOLDIER

Tragic Story of Baron Dembitzky, Who Met Death as a Union Soldier in the Battle of the Wilderness.

New York, Aug. 9.—A fortune of $2,000,000 now in the United States treasury awaits a young Pole named Dembitzky, provided he can trace his relationship to Baron Ludwig Napoleon Dembitzky, who fought in the union army and died on the battlefield during the civil war. An attorney of this city has been retained by the young man, who is now living in Russia.

The attorney, who has been in communication with Secretary Gage, said that the record of the government's indebtedness to the original Dembitzky has been found. Baron Dembitzky, according to the story furnished to several of the newspapers, left Poland in 1863 because of political troubles and came to this country. He had $400,000 in American money, the proceeds of the sale of his estates. This he deposited with the federal government at Washington and went into the army. He was killed in the battle of the Wilderness.

In 1897 his grand-nephew in Russia received a communication from Jos. Howies, consul of the United States at Warsaw, Russia, informing him of the money left by the old soldier in the government's care and asked for proof of relationship. The sum, with compound interest, now amounts to more than $2,000,000. Considerable difficulty was encountered in establishing the relationship because records in churches and court houses in Poland were destroyed by fire by Russian troops.

Stinson took the lead at the start and was never headed. He made a terrific pace for the first five miles, doing the second in 1:28 and the first three in a total of 4:44, which is the best ever done on any track. The five miles were finished in 7:42, which equals the world's record, and the sixth mile was again made in 1:28. After this the pace was slower, McEachern hung on the leader's wheel until the last mile, when he weakened, and Stinson finished a lap ahead of him. Six thousand people saw the race.

A Year of Bloodshed.

And so it had resulted, to the unspeakable disgust of the few officers with Nathan's command, that the untried militia, under fearless and energetic leadership, had forced their way, despite mobs and obstructions, to the seat of action and rescued the property of the Big Horn road, while the regulars, hampered by their timorous head, were held back for hours in front of purely imaginary obstacles and only reached the yards at Brentwood in time to find the buildings a mass of flame. Even that calamity might not have happened but that at 11 in the forenoon Major Melville, learning that the mob was drifting away from the Big Horn and gathering in threatening force about the Seattle yards down on the south side, had hurried in from the suburbs, whither he had gone to station the recently rusticated battalion, and while standing on the platform of the freighthouse, calm and unmoved in the presence of a jeering, howling pack of tatterdemalions and writing an order summoning certain companies to the spot, was suddenly struck in the head by a coupling pin hurled by a vigorous and vengeful hand and felled to the ground, stunned and senseless.

That was a sore blow to the Seattle. It left the situation on the south side in the hands of the rioters for over an hour. Word was sent to little Major McConville, but he, with his men, was moving and guarding cattle trains. The best he could do was to send a company on the run, but their captain had had no experience. The sheriff vainly tried to tell them how Langdon had handled things over at the Big Horn. He would take no responsibility. They dare not, and the mob saw it in a twinkling. The only wonder is they did not dash upon this isolated command and by sheer force of numbers bear it down and seize its arms. When at last the Nathan train steamed in and the command tumbled off at the suburbs, it was the younger officers who led the detachments, Nathan retaining 40 of his men ostensibly to guard the train. But it was his own precious hide of which he was thinking. He decided to establish his headquarters in his own car, while Torrance, with 30 sturdy battery men on one flank, and Woodrow, with a like number on the other, shoved ahead and, guided by deputy sheriffs and railway officials, did their belated work in short order and yet in deep chagrin. Santley, sullen and disgusted, was retained with Nathan as adjutant, but he could only obey. The news of Melville's prostration reached them five miles out from town and completed Nathan's demoralization even while it threw him in supreme command. The first thing he did, therefore, was to send back a messenger to Gunnison, trundled all the way on a hand car, to wire from there to Omaha and Pawnee the grievous tidings that Major Melville had been stricken down by rioters and lay insensible in charge of the physicians. Nathan thought the situation demanded re-enforcement at once; so did old Gray Fox, commanding at Omaha, and the latter ordered thither just one man, a captain of infantry senior in rank to Nathan. What they needed was a cool head, said he, not cold feet, and, lest the uninitiated should misinterpret the phrase, let it be explained here and now that "cold feet" is soldier synonym for "scare."

Things were indeed in grievous snape when the vice presidential car rolled into the Seattle yards and ranged up alongside that of Captain Nathan. By that time, thanks to Santley, sentinels had been thrown about the sacred precincts, and, seeing no rioters in the immediate neighborhood, Nathan had measurably recovered his nerve. He hoped to make a favorable impression on his wife's plutocratic uncle, but Mr. Barclay sniffed the fumes of smoldering thousands, and the sight of half a mile of smoking ruins up the track soured him utterly. All this could have been prevented had Nathan shown any dash, pluck, energy—any of the qualities railway men admire and so many possess. And then to think that even now the Big Horn was open! He had seen Channing's first train whistling down the opposite side of the gorge. He learned from his satellites, boarding the car to the east of town, of the almost miraculous rescue of the Big Horn's buildings. A tremendous story it made by that time, and the heart of the magnate was sore in his bosom that such ill should have befallen the Seattle, such good fortune the Missouri Valley. He hated Channing, anyhow. Channing was sprung from the ranks and had worked his way up step by step from section boss to superintendent in one road after another. He had been assistant general superintendent of the Seattle only a few years back, and when the vacancy occurred that should have been tendered to so energetic and valuable a man it was Barclay who opposed it. "Channing's all right for an assistant or subordinate," said he, "but he hasn't the education or the social position a superintendent should have." So a man with Barclay's requirements got the promotion over Channing's head, whereat the latter instantly resigned, went over to the Northern Pacific for a short term, and then it was the Big Horn that tendered him the superintendency and within another year made him general manager.

"If the president and board of directors will look after the finances," said he, "I'll run the road." And run it he had and marvelously well, to the secret dismay of the Seattle. And now at the first serious clash he had straightened things out for his own road while the strikers were smashing things for the Seattle, and Barclay could have cursed the day he let him go.

But that wasn't all.

It took hours to gather his forces and count the costs. Then he could have sworn that Melville had so ordered the distribution of troops as purposely to expose the Seattle's yards, whereas Melville had sent more troops to the south side than he had retained on the north, little McConville, with four companies, having been detailed to cover the Seattle's lines, and "Mac" had saved their stock trains, though he couldn't be everywhere at once and so protect their sheds and shops. Barclay had only succeeded in getting his division superintendents, with improvised crews, at work and his cattle off their cars and into the corrals when nightfall came. He had found only a meager half dozen laborers for the necessary work, Channing having earlier gathered in every willing hand the town afforded, and when the morning of the morrow dawned the Big Horn shop whistle sounded as of yore, and its east bound train set forth on time, while there were still only silence and smoldering ruin throughout the yards of the Seattle.

Late that afternoon, weary, hollow eyed, unshaved, but feeling hopeful and well nigh content with his work, Eric Langdon was making the rounds of the Big Horn yards, visiting the sentries whom he had posted. With the full consent and co-operation of the little major and at the earnest request of Channing he had assumed the duties of "military adviser," had personally coached three or four companies besides his now devoted followers of Company G and was recognized as a sort of field officer of the day, respected and looked up to by the entire command. McConville, differing with Nathan as to the management of affairs, had withdrawn from the south side during the early hours of the night and was quartered in an old passenger car at the Big Horn yards. Captain Damrell, the "doughboy" right bower of old Gray Fox, had reached town at midnight and supervised, if he did not actually supersede, Nathan. Channing, wearied, but triumphant, was still at his post at the passenger station and in full telegraphic communication with his entire line and with the president and board of directors. He was hungry and eager for dinner, but a "special" was coming full tilt from Gunnison Junction, and he could not go. The Missouri Pacific had rushed Mrs. Melville over its line posthaste to Omaha as the result of alarming dispatches concerning the major's condition, and, with one of Gray Fox's staff officers as escort, she had spent the morning speeding up the line of the Missouri Valley and was expected every minute. Langdon had been duly informed of the injury inflicted on his beloved chief and friend, but it was a time when his presence and services were sorely needed at the yards, and he had to be content with the tidings that Melville had been borne to the Brentwood House, given the best room and attention and was resting easily. Now he was planning for a nap of perhaps an hour, for the mob was scattered in silent, sullen groups all over town, and, so planning, he came back toward the station and was surprised to see two carriages in waiting and Channing, with numbers of his subordinates, on the platform. He was still more surprised when, with a volume of steam rushing from the escape valve, a powerful locomotive came ringing in from the east, two or three cars in its noisy wake, and belated soldiers, newspaper correspondents and railway men sprang to the platform, while Channing stepped forward to greet another party, followed by a little swarm of curious spectators. A moment later, as Langdon reached the steps, he saw Channing, with a lady on his arm, elbowing a way through the circle. He saw the top of a little hat—a lady's hat—following in their lead, and his heart gave a sudden leap. The next instant he, too, broke through the fringe of townsfolk and, lifting his hat with his left hand, quietly possessed himself of a stylish traveling bag with the other.

"Why, Mr. Langdon!" was the astonished cry of the damsel thus greeted, and, though further words she spoke not for the moment, the light that flashed in Ethel Grahame's eyes and the color that sprang up in her cheeks told the intruder that it was a more than welcome meeting.

"Oh, you'd known 'em both before!" said Channing as the carriage whirled away. "Why, cert'nly! Hello, if here isn't Barclay! Now, what do you s'pose he wants? I want you to come to the Brentwood and dine with me, Mr. Langdon—soon as I get rid of these people."

They drove straight to the platform and unloaded—first, Barclay, groomed scrupulously and dressed as usual, but pale and haggard; then two of his superintendents, both well known to Channing in earlier days. Forward they came until within close hailing distance, and then, with a jaunty, half patronizing, half envious tone, the magnate of the Seattle accosted his rival from the ranks, and the throng closed in about them.

"Well, Channing, luck's been with you again, hasn't it? What'll you take for your rabbit's paw?"

"Luck!" laughed Channing, triumph in his twinkling eyes. "'Twasn't luck, but pluck, and here's our rabbit's paw. Mr. Barclay, shake hands with Captain Langdon."

"This? Why"— was all Barclay could find to say as he looked and saw and turned a saffron red.

"Yes," said Langdon placidly as he shifted both his hands behind him. "I have met the—manager before."

CHAPTER IX.

Eventful days in the life of Eric Langdon were those following the collapse of the great railway strike at Brentwood. It was but natural that the officials of the Big Horn should vaunt themselves over a victory that not only broke up a mob, but quite as effectually downed the Seattle. The chagrin of Messrs. Barclay and others representing that powerful and wealthy corporation could not be concealed despite all their brave show of satisfaction. The Big Horn had all trains running and its live stock in Chicago before the Seattle could succeed in firing a freight engine. The Big Horn behaved magnanimously to its misguided employees, for Channing was a man ever in touch with the great army of operatives and knew how best to win their sympathies and willing service. Every engineer, fireman and trainhand who had not taken active part in the destruction of property was back at his post inside of 24 hours, whereas the anger, envy and disgust rankling in Mr. Barclay's bosom against the Big Horn could only find vent in malicious newspaper items at the expense of the rival management and heroic measures at that of his men. It was a day of disaster to the Seattle and of triumph for the Big Horn, and the breach, already broader than the gorge of the Red Water, now widened between the roads. Channing couldn't help bragging and exulting, and it was bad policy. The Seattle was much the richer company of the two. Its stock was mainly held in England and the eastern states, whereas the Big Horn was western in ownership and management. Barclay gave a big dinner at the Brentwood House three days after the break of the strike, to which all local journalists and magnates were bidden, the cigars and champagne for which were expressed from Chicago, and in the postprandial eloquence on that flowery occasion much stress was laid on the fact that the Seattle would rather suffer double its loss than that it should go down to history as having won its victory by means of shotted guns in the hands of hireling soldiery leveled at the breast of Brentwood's manhood. Captain Nathan made an effective speech in response to the toast to the army. "It would have been an easy matter," said he, "for my brave men to shoot their speedier way to the scene of action, but that from his great and merciful heart the general manager of the Seattle declared that he would rather the earnings of a thousand years went up in smoke than that the blood of one honest toiler should lie at their doors." Tremendous and long continued applause ensued, through which Santley and Woodrow sat in grim silence and in which even Torrance only half heartedly joined, for well they remembered Barclay's almost frenzied appeals to Nathan to get ahead, for God's sake, and do something, if he had to dam the Red Water with the dead.

Melville, his eyes covered, his head still bandaged, lay upon a low couch in an upper room, attended by his devoted wife and niece. The sound of revelry by night came from below with explosive puffs, and the manager of the Brentwood twice tapped at the door to express his regret and anxiety and the hope that the major wasn't being disturbed. "It's the Seattle blowout," he explained, "and the road's setting 'em up for all comers apparently."

"When does the Big Horn set 'em up?" asked Melville, with a smile of amusement.

"The B. H. doesn't have to," answered Boniface. "By the way, sir, Mr. Channing goes east again tomorrow, and he hopes that you will feel able to see him. Of course he isn't at the banquet," he added, with a grin. "We've had a queer time with the rival factions in the house."

BASE BALL.

AUBURN REDS vs. TECUMSEH

The Locals Win both Games with the Reds of the Hoosier Town.

Last Tuesday was the first game between the Reds from the "Hoosier" town and our boys, and all played good ball.

It was a very interesting game. Harris pitched the entire game and never gave a base on balls, and struck out 6 men, to Wheatley's 3; the Reds getting eleven hits and four runs.

The second game on Wednesday was pitched by Calhoun. He gave one base on balls, struck out five men, and held the "Hoosiers" down to four hits.

Stout, they claimed, was their best pitcher, but he struck out 2 men and gave 3 bases on balls.

Following is the score for Tuesday.

Next Tuesday and Wednesday, Aug. 13 and 14, the Battle Creek team will play our home team at the Athletic Park. The Battle Creek's won a game from the Grand Rapids team, of the Western Association, yesterday, with a score of 14 to 4. Horn pitched for Battle Creek and struck out 7 men, while the Grand Rapids pitcher struck out but one. Pattison, captain of the Creeks' made two home runs with men on the bases each time. It will require the best efforts of the locals to defeat them.

A number of the citizen of this village have received photographs of the score card, of the goose egg ball game at Clinton, with two or three of the Clinton ball players ruminating in the back ground. We will admit that it is a very clever and bright idea, and a credit to the one who got it up, but it was impossible to believe that he resides in Clinton, untill we noticed the spelling of Tecumseh on the score card and the addresses on the different envelopes. It does seem as if they would start a kindergarten.

The game between the Tipton and Tecumseh K. of P's was a fine and interesting game and lots of fun at both pitchers getting their "bumps." There will be a game here in a few weeks between the two lodges. There was a large attendance. Score 16 to 19 in favor of Tipton.

Following is the list of players and their positions: Calhtun, catcher; Coddling, pitcher; Harris, 1st base; McKinney, 2nd base; Fay Anderion, 3rd base; Geo. Church, right fielder; Jack Bradd, center fielder; McCully left fielder Wilson, shortstop. Channing Beebe pitched the game for Tipton.

Clinton claims the championship of Southeen Michigan, by reason of the two victories over Tecumseh, but it is likely that the team must meet the Blissfield team, which has championship claims filed with a record of 12 victories, and no game lost at the time Clinton entered up her score. Besides here are Carleton and Monroe with Southern Michigan residence and an Alkali team down at Wyandotte, that must be licked before Clinton can emblazon a champion rooster on its canner. —Adrian Press.

Professor "Dada" Janssen, the eminent composer, and Mr. Edward Caldwell who is in charge of "Side Talks with Girls" in the "Ladies Home Journal," are rusticating in this vicinity and are attracting considerable attention through the many misfortunes which have attended them.

Last Tuesday evening the Professor, for the first time in his rather checkered career, attended a circus under a real tent. It was lovely! The gasoline torches never shone so brightly, the ladies in tights were pinker than ever and the clowns were funnier than even "Dada" himself. The Professor stayed to the concert. Red lemonade quenched his metropolitan thirst and then he began to feel naughty,—Oh so naughty!

His beloved Bowery wasn't at hand but Doc. Schoolcrafts was so he dug up a "nick" shoved it into the picture machine, glued his eye to the peep-hole and prepared to see the wicked girls make goo-goo eyes at him but alack, and likewise alas, the machine rebelled at the pressure of that seven and three-quarter head and threw its whole front at the New Yawker barking his shin, smashing his toe and ruining his temper.

The Professor is so blooded that blood poisoning is feared. He has gone to the lake country to recuperate.

Editor Caldwell escaped disaster at the circus, and his sleeves emitted a merry ha-ha whenever he thought of the troubles of Professor Janssen. How little he surmised what was in store for him! But this is the tale.

The Sluggers from fair Auburn, lovliest village of the plain, had assembled to slug the Tecumseh Chieftains. The Editor is a "rooter".—he would rather root than write, so he esconced himself in the uppermost and farthermost corner of the grand stand. He unfurled his umbrella, he adjusted his eider down cushion, expanded his lungs and began to give a few "Side Talks" to the players through his megaphone. All was merry as a marriage belle.

Beasley came to bat, Eddie lit a cigarette. Beasley batted the ball and the ball lit on Eddie,— right in the center of his shirt waist. When he came to he muttered that some one had put mustard in his high-ball instead of ginger ale. A wild cheer rent the air for then we knew that the L. H. J. had not lost its most valued contributor.

A subsequent diagnosis by the Old High Jinks showed that the iron which Eddie had recently been taking for his blood had crystalized and taken the form of a horseshoe magnet thus creating an irresistible attraction for the iron core of the ball.

Mr. Caldwell has also departed for the lake country in order to recuperate. May a kind Providence perserve these distinguished gentlemen from further disaster.

To my Friend, S. W. Anderson.

  When memory took my hand
And said, "Come let us go on a journey
  To the dead passed wonderland."
So we wandered back on paths that lead
  Through fields of joy and pain,
And lived once more those dear dead days
  That will never come again.

We met on the road Despair with his load
  Of sorrow and fruitless schemes,
But we passed him by and hurried on
  To the land of Childish Dream.
We wandered on still hand in hand
  Till in Childhood's Garden fair
We found the roses of Mother Love
  Still blooming everywhere.

We lingered long in that Eden fair,
  And never a care found we,
For childish troubles are banished there
  By mother who used to be,
The ruler of all our childish world
  And with love and kisses sweet
She would clear the path of every care.
  And guide our wayward feet.

I fain would stay in that fair land,
  But Memory whispered no
There are other fields to wander through.
  Fair fields we used to know,
Come, walk again through fields of youth
  Where first we saw the glow
Of love immaculate and sweet,
  Come, comrade, let us go.

We took our last long lingering look,
  At Childhood's Garden fair
One last deep drink of nectar
  From the roses blooming there,
And then with many a backward glance
  With weary steps and slow
We came to the fields of youth once more,
  The fields we used to know.

We entered by the eastern gate,
  Where the morning sun shone warm,
And saw with eyes of wonder
  An angel's fairy form
Two eyes of Heaven's azure hue,
  Two cheeks like roses red,
A wealth of hair like the golden rod,
  Formed a crown for her stately head.

I stopped and to the maiden said
  Fair one, abide with me,
We will roam through fields Elysian,
  But never a word said she
And gliding swiftly on before
  As the light of coming morn,
She passed out through the western gate,
  To the fields where love was born.

We hurried on through the open gate,
  And watched the mighty throng
Of smiling faces with Hope's bright eyes,
  Made happy by love and song.
I looked in vain for the maiden fair,
  That came like the sunset glow,
Then Memory link his arm in mine.
  Don't linger, he said, let's go.

So we wandered on through varied scenes,
  O'er plain and mountain peak,
Searching for hidden treasures,
  Like a miner when gold he seeks
Till our hair was steaked with silver
  And our steps had grown less light,
Then Memory loosed my hand and said,
  'Tis late, farewell, goodnight.

DEWEY REUNION.

Held at Cambridge Yesterday. Many From Here Attended.

Yesterday, August 8, at the beautiful and spacious residence of Chas. Dewey in Cambridge, occurred the second annual reunion of the Dewey family. The day was beautiful as though appointed especially for this occasion and everybody was in touch with the day.

Early in the forenoon the Deweys came from all parts, from Kansas City, St. Louis, Mo., Grand Rapids, Ann Arbor, Detroit, Decater and Adrian. A letter of regret was received from Admiral Geo. Dewey and wife. The admiral is a second cousin of the host, Chas. Dewey.

A fine program was presented, Chas. Dewey, whose hospitality they were enjoying, gave the address of welcome in an able manner. Mrs. Frank Dewey, of Detroit, gave a fine selection on Mt. Vernon, which was delightfully received by her hearers.

A bountiful three course dinner was served to about seventy-five decendants of the Dewey family many others being unable to attend. Toasts were given among which was one to Admiral Dewey, by Mrs. Adah Dewey, which was especially bright and interesting.

After a social hour the company dispersed feeling in more ways than one that the day had been well spent. The third annual reunion will be held next year at the home of Alphonzo Dewey, west of Tecumseh. The same officers for the past year will serve the ensuing year.

The August Atlantic is most entertaining and strikingly a fiction number. Besides the dramatic conclusion of Miss Jewett's Tory Lover and the romantic continuation of Miss Johnston's Audrey, it contains no less than six complete stories or sketches by such popular and practiced hands as Abraham Cahan, Duffield Osborne, Arthur Colton, Ellen Duvall, etc., which will insure its becoming a favorite with readers of summer fiction.

The Actor That Failed.

In the Midsummer Fiction Number of McClure's Magazine, Clara Morris, whose "Recollections of the Stage and Its People" has proved such delightful reading, tells the story of an actor that failed—failed dismally. He was an understudy in a leading role in "Mazeppa," and when called upon to assume the part, owing to the tragic death of the principal, he did not take advantage of his opportunitier. As the "fiery untamed steed," "Old Bob" turned "Mazeppa" into a roaring farce. Walter M. Glacken's pictures are almost as amusing as the text.

ANN ARBOR SPEAKS.

Contractor Wooley, of Ann Arbor, Makes a Public Statement.

Mr. Edwin Wooley, contractor and carpenter of Ann Arbor, adds his voice to that of the army of Michigan people who endorse the little conqueror. Our representative found him at his place of residence, No. 618 Fountain street. Mr. Wooley appreciates "a good thing" as do most of our readers, and does not hesitate to tell his experience for the benefit of others. Endorsement of this kind has made Doan's Kidney Pills a household word throughout the state. The good they have done has won them many a title and such worthy names among the people as the "little conqueror of kidney ills," "little enemies to backache," "modern wonder worker," etc.

Mr. Wooley says:—"I was subject for years to attacks of backache or pains through the loins and kidneys, generally of a dull, heavy, aching nature, but often when the weather changed or when I moved awkwardly they became sharp twinges of pain. As I was doing work which required stooping it was very painful, exceedingly so, if I caught cold which, as a rule, settled in my loins, I tried various remedies but was never successful in obtaining any permanent benefit until I used Doan's Kidney Pills. At this time my back was troubling me a great deal but shortly after I began the treatment the aching abated and when I had finished it I was cured. This was months ago and up to date there has been no recurrence of the trouble."

QUEEN ELIZABETH'S FAULTS

She Was Very Vain and Inordinately Fond of Fine Dress.

Yet Elizabeth was never really successful with her wardrobe as a more feminine woman might have been. Her dresses were never beautiful, only ludicrously and most inappropriately magnificent—laden with jewels, weighted down with cloth of gold, stiff with silver embroidery and so heavy that even her big, powerful frame must, without supporting vanity, have felt the fatigue of carrying them about. Elizabeth was certainly vain, but she cannot claim femininity merely on that account, for vanity is by no means an exclusively feminine characteristic. There are perhaps more vain women than vain men because women have more leisure and their costumes afford greater opportunities for vanity than the strangely hideous clothing which custom has arranged for men, but no thoughtful (feminine) observer can doubt that a vain man is vainer than a vain woman.

Elizabeth's hands were her especial pride, and, judging from her portraits, they were certainly beautiful. They were laden with jewels, and it was her habit in public to pull her rings off with absent artlessness and push them on again, moving those white hands about in the most obvious way. Once, during the grave consideration of a state paper, wherein her cold sagacity never took second place, she interrupted the discussion to ask whether the Duc d'Anjou, who was at one time one of her suitors, had been told what a pretty foot she had and how white and well rounded was her arm? This in the woman who financed the armada with hard headed economy, who dared the superstitious terrors of her own conscience in her high handed and impudent treatment of the bishops, whose interest in methods of torture for state prisoners was most mechanical and intelligent, entirely unhampered by any squeamish feminine hesitation as to blood or pain, is most curious.

In connection with this last characteristic of cruelty vanity is not at all unprecedented. Indeed, if one observe closely one will notice that excessively vain persons have almost always a strange inclination toward cruelty. The accounts of what Queen Elizabeth permitted and indeed commanded in this respect will hardly bear reading by us sensitive folk today.—Margaret Deland in Harper's Bazar.

Slavery Protected the Negro.

If the negro had been forced to compete for existence in America, he would have been crushed out by the civilized power, as the Indian has been, says Albert Phelps in The Atlantic, but the peculiar institution of slavery protected him not only from this competition, but also, by artificial means, from those great forces of nature which inevitably weed out the weaker organisms and which operate most unrestrainedly upon the ignorant savage. For the first time, perhaps, in the history of the world human beings had been bred and regulated like valuable stock, with as much care as is put upon the best horses and cattle. As a natural consequence the sanitary condition of the negro during slavery was remarkable, especially by contrast with his present condition, and his growth was the abnormal growth of a plant abnormally raised in a hothouse. When, therefore, this mass of helpless beings was thrown upon its own resources by the act of emancipation and when the protection of slavery had been withdrawn, the direst wretchedness and suffering followed.

A Brief Interview.

The late Rev. R. S. Storrs was a very hard man to interview, for he resented the inquisitiveness of the press and was icy to its agents.

One evening a reporter attended a reception at his house and in the course of the evening touched his arm and whispered: "Doctor, I'm from the ——. I want the names of guests and all the particulars."

"Yes," Dr. Storrs whispered in return, "this way, this way." And, taking the young man's arm, he escorted him to the front door and put him out.

It Takes Time.

"Your wife," we said to the husband of the great authoress, "is the woman of the hour."

"Indeed she is," he responded, with a tinge of sadness in his voice. "She is the woman of the hour and a half when she is dressing for the theater."—Baltimore American.

Heart Disease

retards the circulation, weakens the stomach, deranges digestion, pollutes the blood, destroys the nervous force and saps the vitality of the whole system. It causes pains in the side, palpitation, shortness of breath, smothering, dropsical swellings, sinking spells, and frequently ends all suffering in sudden death. Why tempt death when a cure is within easy reach?

The Gallant Cabman.

Nothing perhaps produces quite so much wit from a cabman as a sense of being underpaid, which in most cases means that he has been justly paid. A lady who had been guilty of this kind of justice experienced the usual sense of discomfort when her driver straightened the palm into which she had just dropped her shilling and looked at her speechlessly. She was weakly about to add another sixpence when the cabby's sense of humor prevailed. He transferred the shilling to his pocket and smiled sweetly down at his embarrassed fare. "Course, missy," he remarked, "there was the pleasure o' drivin you!"—London Chronicle.

Entertaining Squirrels.

Alive in his native woods the squirrel is an amusing little fellow, and he will entertain you by the hour if you will let him.

You probably become first aware of his presence by his dropping things on your head. Then he plays hide and seek with you as he zigzags up a tree. While he pauses for thought, or possibly to wash his face, another squirrel comes scudding along the branches of a neighboring tree, and away they go, one chasing the other, jumping from branch tip to branch tip, racing up and down the trunk and making the bark fly. Sometimes one loses his footing and falls headlong 20 or 30 feet to the ground, landing there with a force that makes him bounce. You think every grain of sense must be knocked out of the small body, but he only blinks a bit, and, after a moment spent perhaps in letting the stars set that must have suddenly risen before his eyes, he streaks it up the nearest tree after the other fellow. Long after they have disappeared from sight you hear them chattering together up among the leaves like two watchmen's rattles.—Philadelphia Record.

Her Opinion of Asparagus.

It seems that asparagus is not grown in the tropics—at least it was not grown at Rio de Janeiro when a certain American gentleman, who had lived several years in the Brazilian capital, went with his wife and 8-year-old daughter to visit friends living near Buenos Ayres, a part of the continent where the climate is better adapted to the fruits and vegetables of the temperate regions.

At the first dinner after their arrival the visitors were treated to some fresh asparagus. The little 8-year-old daughter was likewise served with the asparagus, but she evidently did not think much of it as an article of food.

Her mother tried for some time to coax her to eat it. Finally the little girl, taken between the rudeness of whispering at the table and the rudeness of not eating her food, leaned over and, with a choking voice and quivering lip, whispered to her mother: "Mamma, it is not nice. It's raw at one end and rotten at the other."

A TRUE FISH STORY.

The Peculiar Adventure of a Wedding Ring.

"About the queerest fish story I know of," said a highly truthful looking man—indeed, he was a clergyman—"happened to me at a little lake in Wisconsin, where I used to summer with my family. One day my wife was out in our boat with a party of friends. She was letting her hand trail in the water, without thinking about its shrinking effect, and when she finally took her hand in her wedding ring was gone. The lake was deep at that point, and although we made considerable effort to recover the ring it was not found.

"Naturally it worried her a good deal, and the next year she would not go back to the same place, nor did we go the following year, but the third year we went there again, and one day I was in the woods about a mile from the lake with my boy, trying to get a shot at some denizen of the forest or other. As we went peering around among the trees to get a squirrel we had seen I noticed something shining on a twig of a tree about 25 feet from the ground. I sent my boy up after it, and when he came back I was more than astonished to find that the shining thing was my wife's wedding ring.

"How it ever got there was a mystery at first, but I was not a believer in fairies and that sort of thing, so I began to investigate for material causes. The top of the tree had deadened, and with a suspicion in my mind I sent my boy up to see what signs might be above the green boughs. He called down to me presently that there were remains of a fishhawk's nest in the forks of the tree, and, putting this and that together, I came to the conclusion that the hawk had caught the fish that had gobbled up my wife's ring in the lake and had taken it to the nest for the young hawks. They didn't care for jewelry and had left that part of the fish in the nest, from which, as the nest was blown to pieces by the wind and beaten by the storms, the ring had dropped out and by chance had caught on the twig where I found it. In any event, if that was not the way it got there, how did it? For it surely was there, and my wife is wearing it today."—Exchange.

PERFUMED CIGARS.

The Ones General Rosecrans Once Offered to a Friend.

One of the stories told by old employees in the treasury department at Washington is of the time when General Rosecrans was register. The general never smoked and knew nothing about cigars. He determined, however, to have a box of good cigars handy for the benefit of friends who might drop into the register's office. The general accordingly purchased a box of expensive cigars, put them in a drawer and forgot all about them for some time. Then, one day, when a friend was calling, the general remembered the cigars and brought them out.

"I know nothing about cigars," said Rosecrans, "but I am told that these are very fine."

His friend lighted a cigar, and a look of pain and horror instantly overspread his face. He tried to conceal his feelings and puffed manfully at the cigar for several seconds. Then Rosecrans, noticing that he was growing pale, asked what was the trouble.

"General," said the visitor, "I don't want to be ungrateful, but I'm afraid it's this cigar."

"Impossible!" exclaimed Rosecrans. "Why, when I bought them I was told that they were the finest cigars on the market."

"Well, general, you were deceived. The cigar tastes and smells exactly as if it were made of camphor."

"Camphor!" stammered Rosecrans, looking chapfallen. "Why, I never thought, but perhaps camphor does injure a cigar." And, reaching into the drawer, he brought to view several garments filled with camphor balls. "Do you suppose that can be the trouble?" he inquired.

SAPOLIO

Women are Like Flowers. Healthy and strong they blossom and bloom. Sickly, they wither and die. Every woman ought to look well and feel well. It's her right and duty, but she might as well try to put out a fire with oil as to be healthy and attractive with disease corroding the organs that make her a woman. Upon their health depends her health. If there is inflammation or weakening drains or suffering at the monthly period, attend to it at once. Don't delay. You're one step nearer the grave every day you put it off. Women can stand a great deal, but they cannot live forever with disease dragging at the most delicate and vital organs in their body. You may have been deceived in so-called cures. We don't see how you could help it—there is so much worthless stuff on the market. But you won't be disappointed in Bradfield's Female Regulator. We believe it is the one medicine on earth for womanly ills. There is as much difference between it and other so-called remedies as there is between right and wrong. Bradfield's Female Regulator soothes the pain, stops the drains, promotes regularity, strengthens, purifies and cleanses. It does all this quickly and easily and naturally. It is for women alone to decide whether they will be healthy or sick. Bradfield's Regulator lies at hand. $1 per bottle at drug store.

Dogs and Somersaults.

As there is more than one way of cooking a goose, so there is more than one method of teaching a dog to throw somersaults. But the most practical and thorough manner is to fasten a cord around the body of the animal close to the forelegs, and two people should hold the ends of the cord on either side of the unfortunate dog.

A third party armed with a stout rope takes a position immediately in front of the canine acrobat and with a measured and masterly stroke flogs the floor at close quarters to the dog's nose.

At each stroke of the rope the dog springs backward, and that movement is the trainer's golden opportunity. As the dog spring backward the rope passing under its body is jerked upward, and, although the first few attempts may prove futile, the somersault is acquired in course of time. An intelligent dog soon sickens of this order of things and throws somersaults without the assistance of ropes.

A Blunt Query.

A good story is told of one of the dignitaries of the Scottish church. Before he became known to fame he was minister of a remote parish in Perthshire and was not considered a particularly attractive preacher. At his suggestion extensive alterations were made in the transept of his church, and these had the effect of sweeping away considerable seating accommodation. One day after the alterations had been effected he visited the church to see how it looked.

"What do you think of the improvements, John?" he asked of the beadle.

"Improvements!" exclaimed John in disdain. "They're no improvements at a'. Whaur are ye goin to put the folk?"

"Oh," said the minister, "we have abundance of room, John, considering the size of the congregation."

"That's a' very weel the noo," retorted the beadle, "but what will we do when we get a popular meenister?"

A New Excuse.

One of the men in a large pottery took two or three days' holiday now and again, and when he came back, on being asked what was wrong, he said he had been away burying his grandmother.

He did this two or three times, and then he thought he had better change his excuse, so, on being asked the next time, he replied:

"Well, my brother, the sailor, is at home just now, and he is so used to the sound of the waves that I had to lash pailfuls of water on the window all night before he could sleep, and then I had to sleep during the day."

THE BIG STRIKE

Only 14,000 Men Obeyed General Strike Order

FIGHT IS NOW UNDER WAY

In All 60,000 Men Have Quit Work, But the Mills in Many Localities Are Running as Usual—Officials Clash.

Pittsburg, Pa., Aug. 13.—The struggle for mastery between manufacturers and men in the steel industry is now fairly launched, and on the first show of strength advantage is with the former. General strike order issued by President Shaffer has so far been obeyed by only about 14,000 men, according to the best figures obtainable here. The first two preliminary calls were answered by about 45,000 men, so that the total number out is in the neighborhood of 60,000. The strikers made gains here yesterday over the showing of Sunday night, and their prospects for further accessions at both McKeesport and Wheeling during the week are very favorable. The action of the Amalgamated men at Chicago, Joliet and Bayview in refusing to come out and their failure to secure any recruits in the Carnegie group throughout the Kiskiminetas valley, and the big plants at Youngstown and Columbus, O., have been markedly disappointing to them. They are keeping up the fight, however, in a spirited manner and claim that they have strength in reserve which will surprise their opponents. They assert that they have gained a foothold in the Carnegie mills in this city, and at the time desired the men will come out. They are pressing their advantages at McKeesport and Wheeling and their organizers are still at work in those two cities. President Shaffer has decided to personally visit Wheeling and will go there Wednesday to address a mass meeting of his followers.

Officials Clash.

Officials of the National Tube Co. and Mayor Black clashed over the question of protection for non-strikers and property. A large crowd of strikers assembled around the works yesterady morning and their pickets intercepted tube workers on their way to the mills. There was some excitement and the mill officers claimed that their men were being threatened and called on Mayor Black to clear the streets and protect them. The mayor said he would only interfere to stop actual rioting and assault. Two other appeals were made to him later in the day, but he insisted that there was no danger of an outbreak. Another crowd gathered at noon when the tube men were leaving the plant, and while the workers were jeered no violence was offered. The strikers say that it is only a question of time when material will give out and the tube men must quit. Otherwise it is believed that there would be serious trouble in McKeesport. Reports from Wheeling and Bellaire indicate that there may be trouble there. At the latter place an attempt is to be made to keep the plant in operation, and the mill officials say that if the men who did not go out are interfered with they will ask for state militia to protect them.

No attempt has been made as yet to put in operation the plan of withdrawing savings deposits suggested by President Shaffer in his speeches of Saturday. The suggestion aroused great interest, particularly in banking circles, and many bankers not connected with the larger industrial combinations have protested against it. President Shaffer said that he had not sent out the circular dealing with the matter. He said:

"I have the circular in my pocket still, and the matter is under consideration. I am aware that there are banks which have no connection with the trust or its interests. There are things to be considered which makes it necessary to stop any action for the present. On general lines, however, the matter is perfectly reasonable. Why should our people put money in the banks to be loaned to the trust to carry on their business of destroying us?"

Reports from Lorain say that the mills are working as usual and that there is no prospect of trouble. Mingo Junction reports that there may be an early attempt to start the National steel plant there with non-union men. Altoona wires that the seven-inch mill of the American Steel Hoop Co. at Duncansville, which has been idle for months, was started and that the prospects of trouble in the mills there is slight. The Oil City plant of the National Tube Co. is moving without trouble.

Used an Ax.

Vancouver, B. C., Aug. 13.—Ah Wooey, a Chinese gambler, has been committed for the murder of four of his countrymen, who were hacked to death with an ax by Quong, another Chinaman, last month. A third Chinaman claims to have heard Wooey and Quong discussing the plan of the murder. Wooey offered Quong $200 if he would kill two or more of the quartet. Quong has confessed to having committed the crime.

Miss Morgan Hunts.

Glenwood Springs, Colo., Aug. 13.—Miss Anna Morgan, daughter of J. Pierpont Morgan, is one of a party that started out from this town for a week's hunting in northwestern Colorado. Prof. Henry W. Osborn of Columbia university, is in charge of the party. The deer season will not open until Aug. 15, but there is no law against shooting bear, mountain lion, lynx and coyote.

Bonds at Premium.

Washington, Aug. 13.—The secretary of the treasury has purchased $38,400 short term 4 per cent bonds at $113.1363 and $5,000 3s at $108.424.

The Heart of a Mouse.

A tiny mouse who lived near the house of a magician begged him to save her from the cat of whom she lived in deadly terror.

So the magician changed the mouse into a cat, and she went away delighted.

In a few days she came back again in terror. "Oh, save me, save me now from the dog," she begged.

And the magician changed her to a dog.

A few days more, and back she came—this time in deadly fear of a tiger.

"Nonsense," said the magician. "You have only the heart of a mouse, and afraid you will always be. It is the heart that tells!"

FRANCE IS SHORT.

Her Wheat Crop Will Not Nearly Supply Demands.

Washington, Aug. 13.—France practically has completed the harvesting of her wheat at about the time when it usually begins, and it is no longer doubtful that there will be a very serious shortage. This information is conveyed to the state department in a report from Consul-General Skinner at Marseilles. It is the firm belief in some quarters, says the consul general, that France will have to become again an importing nation of this commodity, and the country will have to look abroad during the coming year for about 56,000,000 bushels. About 20,000,000 bushels of soft wheat to make up this shortage is expected to come from the United States provided prices keep slightly under or on a par with those of Russian wheat. Already at least one cargo of American wheat of the new crop is on its way to France and has been sold in small lots in order to disseminate information concerning the quality of the new crop the more rapidly. The French importers, says Mr. Skinner, hope the Americans will not force prices to a point that will strengthen abnormally competition from Russia, and anticipate that the business of this year will be like that of 1899, and wheat came from the United States.

THE SMELTER ROBBERY.

Nearly All the Gold Now Raised From Bottom of the Bay.

San Francisco, Aug. 13.—It was stated at the office of the Selby Smelting company at noon that a force of divers, under the management of the Pinkertons, had taken $65,000 worth of gold from the spot where it was hidden by Winters, making $200,000 already recovered. It is expected the remainder of the stolen treasure, $80,000, will be recovered inside of 24 hours.

Winters is still detained by the officers, but has not been formally charged with the crime. The fact that he has not been charged with any crime lends weight to the report that he will be leniently dealt with for confessing the crime and pointing out the spot where he secreted the bullion.

A lively fight is expected between the detectives over the reward money, and the matter eventually may be taken into the courts.

The Cadillac Defeated.

Chicago, Aug. 13.—In a slight weather run, a long reach out and back, the Canadian Invader won the second of the races for the Canada cup. She had Cadillac beaten at every point of the compass and rounded the home buoy at 2:08 p. m. (unofficial), six minutes ahead of the Michigan yacht. On the run out, with a four to seven-knot east-northeast breeze sweeping their port quarters, the Invader led from one to two miles at times, rounding the buoy nine miles out a mile ahead of her pursuer.

Both broke out their balloon jibs on the home stretch and the sturdy Detroiter gained for a time. During the last four miles, Cadillac took in her ballooner and broke out the spinnaker. The beneficial effect of this change was shown in faster footing, but the race was already gone, and Cadillac came in nearly a mile to the bad.

Columbia Beats Constitution.

Bateman's Point, R. I., Aug. 13.—The second race of the present series of three for the Constitution and Columbia and the big yawls was started in anything but favorable weather. The air was cool and rain was falling, but the principal drawback was the lightness of the breeze, it being only about five knots strength.

Beside the Columbia and Constitution and the yawls Ailsa, Vigilant and Navahoe, the Virginia was also entered.

Constitution crossed the finish line at 4:26:40. The Columbia crossed at 4:26:38 and won the race on time allowance. As the yawls have not been measured recently the amount of time which the Constitution allows the Columbia is not known, but it is probably something over a minute.

Old Citizen Dead.

Flint, Mich., Aug. 13.—C. W. Horton died suddenly yesterday. He had been sick with typhoid fever, but was recovering, and while sitting on the edge of the bed fell back dead of heart failure. Deceased was about 60 years of age and leaves a widow and family. He was a traveling salesman for Strong, Lee & Co. of Detroit.

A. H. Davis, Mt. Sterling, Ia., writes: "I was troubled with kidney complaint for about two years, but two one dollar bottles of Foley's Kidney Cure effected a permanent cure." J. J. Orr.

YACHT WENT DOWN

Owner and Friend Were Victims of the Wreck

BODIES NOT YET RECOVERED

Boat Disappeared in the Famous "Cellar" of Galoup Rapids—Party of Ladies Left the Boat Just Before Accident Occurred.

Ogdensburg, N. Y., Aug. 13.—Charles White, James Whitney and Edgar Lane were drowned in the Galoup rapids Monday afternoon by the sinking of the private yacht Rhea. Whitney, who was the owner of the yacht, had as guests on board the boat Lane and White, Hugh Raney, the Misses Whitney and the Misses McPherson. The four ladies and Mr. Raney got out at the head of the lock to walk to the foot of the rapids. The other three men remained on board the yacht, which, after reaching the first swell of the rapids, entered what is known as "the cellar" and disappeared, carrying the three men down with her. The bodies have not been recovered. All of the parties resided at Prescott.

Kitchener Gaining.

London, Aug. 13.—In a long dispatch, giving the operations of various columns, Lord Kitchener says:

"I am glad to be able to send you the largest return I have yet had for one week. Since Aug. 5 the columns report 39 Boers killed, 20 wounded, including Commandant Moll, dangerously; 685 prisoners, including Wolmarans, late chairman of the first volksraad; 85 surrenders, including Commandant Devilliers, and the capture of 24,400 rounds of ammunition, 754 wagons, 5,580 horses and large quantities of stock. Most of the captures were made in Orange River colony."

Ready to Sail.

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 13.—The gunboat Machias, en route for Colon, has been loading coal, provisions and ammunition in Hampton Roads since Saturday. A large part of the supplies came from the Brooklyn navy yard and a great deal of the ammunition was prepared at the St. Helena magazine here. The vessel is likely to sail at any moment. She will carry a full complement of men. A number of graduated apprentices from the training ship Lancaster, now in port, have been transferred to the Machias. It is not probable that the boat will put in at any other port between here and her destination.

Pleased With Conditions.

Washington, Aug. 13.—Gen. Buffington, chief of the bureau of ordnance, has just returned from an inspection trip through the south and west. He says he found the ordnance and materials at the different posts visited in a very satisfactory condition. He is pleased especially with the conditions at the Rock Island arsenal, where, he says, the finest electric power plant to be found anywhere exists.

Royal Visitors.

St. Johns, Aug. 13.—The government has received an intimation from Mr. Chamberlain, secretary of state for the colonies, that the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York will visit Newfoundland Oct. 21. A representative committee of 75 citizens will be appointed to make all arrangements for the reception. The legislature has already passed a vote of $15,000 for the purpose.

Fatal Cloudburst.

Lexington, Va., Aug. 13.—Assistant Postmaster John G. Poole and his family, while attempting to cross a mountain stream about six miles from here, were swept down by the waters of a cloudburst and his wife and three daughters, aged from one to eight years, drowned. Mr. Poole and a daughter about three years old escaped. The bodies were recovered.

MINOR TELEGRAMS.

The corporation of Glasgow has decided to confer the freedom of the city on Carnegie.

The first day's trotting meeting scheduled at Brighton Beach was postponed on account of the heavy rain. An effort will be made to complete the two days' program today.

The large sawmill and planing mill and 50,000 feet of lumber owned by R. L. Buzard at Carrier, Pa., were destroyed by fire last night. Loss between $55,000 and $60,000; insurance small.

Reports from the northwest indicate that harvesting is progressing favorably in the great wheat belt. The crop in Manitoba is said to be larger by 50,000,000 bushels than ever before in its history.

A murder resulting from a vendetta of 20 years' duration occurred in a church at Obotti Sunday. A general fight ensued in the church between the respective partisans, with the result that seven persons were killed and 23 wounded.

J. Sergeant Cram, president of the department of docks and ferries of New York city, who spent Sunday at Wantage, England, with Richard Croker, left for Scotland preparatory to his return to New York. It is understood Mr. Croker has booked passage to reach New York Sept. 5.

When informed of the death of Sig. Crispi, the Pope exclaimed: "Providence has evidently really decreed that I shall be the last of my generation to go. Well, Crispi was a good fighter." A few moments later the pope was praying for the soul of his ancient enemy.

Derailed the Train.

Port Huron, Mich., Aug. 13.—The 8:50 westbound passenger train for Battle Creek was wrecked at the junction, two miles from the station, yesterday. The train was in charge of Engineer Pollard and Conductor Chas. Martin, and the escape of both the engineer and fireman was miraculous. The cause of the disaster was a "D" rail, which was set for the eastbound freight. The engineer received orders at the station, but paid no attention to the semaphore when the latter was reached and instead of signaling the interlocker operator to reverse the rail, proceeded, and as a result derailed the train.

HONOR TO CRISPI.

Highest Military Honors to Be Accorded the Distinguished Dead.

Naples, Aug. 13.—The body of Signor Crispi was removed last night from the death chamber to the drawing room, which had been converted into a chapelle ardente. It lies enveloped in the flag of Garibaldi.

A guard of veterans is in attendance and the roads leading to the residence are guarded by troops, to prevent the approach of the crowds. The entire garrison of Naples will participate in the funeral procession. The body will be borne on a gun carriage, and the highest military honors will be rendered.

In his will Crispi requests that he be buried without a religious ceremony, and he declares that his patrimony and savings were lost during the campaign for liberation in Sicily and in the service of his country.

OIL BUINESS BOOMING.

Oklahoma Promises to Furnish Fresh Field of Operation.

Fort Sill, O. T., Aug. 13.—Oil companies, with fabulous sums announced for their capital stock, are being organized daily in the new town of Lawton, near here. Twenty or more "promoters" and "oil experts" direct from the Beaumont district had bottles of oil on display today. No gushers have been brought in. The excitement is not confined to any particular district. Evidence of oil can be found in all directions, but what is known as the oil district is about 11 miles north of Lawton. Oil locaters have plastered the entire country with mineral claims, and an Ottumwa, Ia., company has 2,000 acres staked in one body. Another company, claiming a capital of a quarter million dollars, has claimed a large tract nine miles northeast of Lawton, and a third company has been organized on paper, at least, and placed its capital stock at $1,000,000.

One Strike Ended.

Tampa, Fla., Aug. 13.—The Resistencia cigarmakers' union, now on strike here, showed evidences of almost total collapse today. Two of its soup houses were closed because it could not buy food. One was on half rations all day. Delegates have made overtures to the international union, it is said, but the latter union declined to consider them. After the deportations 2,000 strikers registered their desire to leave the city and an agent was sent to Havana to secure a vessel. The boat was to have been here Saturday, but has not arrived. An indignation meeting is being held by them on the supposition that they have been deceived.

Murder and Suicide.

Cincinnati, Aug. 13.—Since Saturday night Robert Stephenson and Mrs. Lillie Kispert have been dead in a room at 1513 Cutter street, and when the police broke open the door late last night murder and suicide were disclosed. The odor was so strong about the house that the police were called to break open the door. It is believed that Stephenson deliberately shot Mrs. Kispert in the left temple while she was asleep and then put a bullet through his brain. Nothing was found to indicate a reason for the crime.

A Good Job.

Washington, Aug. 13.—Secretary Gage has appointed Mr. Wallace H. Mills, chief clerk of the treasury department, as the treasury member of the government board of the St. Louis exposition. J. H. Brigham, assistant secretary of the department of agriculture, is chairman of this board, G. W. W. Hanger, chief clerk of the department of labor, is also a member of the board, which will consist of 12 persons. The principal work of the board in the immediate future will be to pass upon plans for the government building to be erected at the exposition.

In a Bad Fix.

San Francisco, Aug. 13.—Walter N. Dimmick, ex-chief clerk of the United States mint, who is accused of embezzling $30,000 from the government and also of other minor delinquencies, has been formally served with a warrant of arrest. He was held for trial on four charges, the aggregate bail being fixed at $37,000. As this was not forthcoming Dimmick was placed in custody of the United States marshal and taken to the county jail.

Boers Try to Escape.

Jamestown, St. Helena, Aug. 13.—Two Boer prisoners, Hollanders, made a desperate attempt to escape Saturday evening. They swam to a fishing boat far out in the harbor, captured her and set sail. All their clothing was lost and they were recaptured by the British war sloop Blake. They were returned to the prison camp and clothed in coffee bags.

Fatal Storm.

The dead: Miss Victoria Levi, Miss Busbee.

The injured were a Miss Wood, whose condition is considered serious, and four children of a family named Russe.

Less Famine in India.

London, Aug. 13.—The viceroy of India, Lord Curzon of Kedlestone, reports that the famine prospects have been much improved by a heavy rain in Bombay presidency, and that the government are considering the advisability of reducing somewhat the famine relief.

Still Another Gift.

Burlington, Vt., Aug. 13.—A gift of $50,000 for a library is promised to Burlington by Andrew Carnegie, and the aldermen accepted the offer. The city will provide a site and $5,000 a year for the maintenance of the library.

Both Were Drowned.

Charlotte, N. C., Aug. 13.—John Garrison and his nephew, aged 14 years, were drowned while bathing in a mill pond near Hickory. The boy got into deep water and Garrison attempted to rescue him, both losing their lives.

The orange came to Europe from Africa in the eleventh century. Sir Walter Raleigh brought it to England in the sixteenth century. It was first planted in Australia in 1788.

Daisy was originally the eye of day, or day's eye.

Formally Proclaimed.

Santiago de Chili, July 25.—Jerman Riesco was formally proclaimed president of Chili yesterday. He was elected to this office June 25.

THE CLOSING DAY

Camp Bliss Soon to Be a Thing of the Past

RECEPTIONS ARE NUMEROUS

Brilliant Events Scheduled For the Last Hours—Troops Begin Leaving For Home On Wednesday—Military Ball at the Armory.

Camp Bliss, Manistee, Mich., Aug. 13.—Last night the Second infantry band gave a concert in front of Gen. Boynton's headquarters. It was a complimentary concert.

In the afternoon the Second regiment's officers and aides were the guests of the Fessenden. This evening the governor holds a reception on Piety Hill for all the officers of the camp. This may interfere with Gen. Boynton's proposed hop in the Manistee armory.

Another man is in the hospital from slight injuries received by being tossed in a blanket.

Tonight is the last night in camp. Gen. Boynton will guard against possible outbreak by stationing two companies on guard in Manistee and one company will guard the camp. Wednesday the boys will arise at 3 a. m. and prepare to break camp.

The First infantry leaves here Wednesday morning at 6:50, arriving at Detroit about 4:30 on a Pere Marquette special. The other regiments break camp the same day.

The rumor has been gaining strength through the camp that Brig.-Gen. Boynton, who is a bachelor, is a woman-hater. The general would not allow his officers to bring their wives or families to quarter them on Boynton kopje. But this was because his staff have too much to do during an encampment to entertain women or fuss over them. On the contrary, the members of the governor's staff have ample opportunity and plenty of time to devote to the social side of the camp, with the exception of Gen. Green and his assistant, Major Boer, who are continually inspecting the camp, looking out for the sanitary conditions. He must give a written report on men, equipment, tents, grounds, arms, etc., after encampment. This is published by the state.

But Gen. Boynton is not a woman-hater. The few ladies of the staff or regiment who have ventured to his quarters deny the rumor, and have been delighted with the suave general. They have pronounced him "awfully handsome, and so polite." The general is very courteous and thoughtful, and those who call once are sure to climb the kopje again.

The general has arranged for a grand military ball at the armory. He has received the co-operation of the Manistee ladies. Invitations have been extended to the ladies of the regiment and the governor's staff.

Gen. Boynton and staff favor the formation of a troop of cavalry and battery of light artillery. They claim that these are essential to the completion of the state army. In time of war they would be invaluable, while in riots or strikes they would be very effective. The staff officers of the brigadier are agitating the matter. They expect no help from the governor's aides, as they are not military men.

Astounded the Editor.

Editor S. A. Brown, of Bennettsville, S. C. was once immensely surprised. "Through long suffering from Dyspepsia," he writes, "my wife was greatly run down. She had no strength or vigor and suffered great distress from her stomach, but she tried Electric Bitters which helped her at once, and after using four bottles, she is entirely well, can eat anything. It's a great tonic and its gentle laxative qualities are splendid for torpid liver." For Indigestion, Loss of Appetite, Stomach and Liver troubles it's a positive, guaranteed cure. Only 50c. at C. A. SHE'S A HEROINE.

Plucky Young Woman Saves Her Lover From Probable Death.

St. Joseph, Mich., Aug. 13.—At the risk of her own life Miss Clara Kuntz last night saved the life of her fiance, John Wilson, from probable death. While she and Wilson were walking on Territorial street an unknown man, who is believed to have been a rejected suitor, jumped from a dark alley and rushed toward Wilson with a knife. Without a moment's hesitation the young lady threw herself in front of her lover, the knife cutting a course along the chin and plunging itself in her arm just above the elbow. The would-be assasin fled. The plucky young lady was carried to Bird's drug store for treatment.

New Garnishee Law.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 13.—The new garnishee law will go into effect on Sept. 4, and it is stated that wage-earners owing money are already making arrangements to settle with their creditors on the installment plan, offering to pay a small sum every week until the debt is wiped out, thereby saving the court costs. In regard to the amount of wages exempt, the law says:

"When the defendant is a householder he shall have exempt the amount of 80 per cent of any amount his due from the garnishee defendant, but in no case shall more than $30 of such indebtedness be exempt, and in all cases at least $8 shall be exempt."

As there is little margin left for the creditor in the case of the average wage-earner—for the costs, amounting to not less than $2.50 in any case, have to be paid first—it is evident that settlements will be preferred to suits.

Michigan Man Murdered.

Middletown, O., Aug. 13.—The facts of a shocking murder have been made known here. Edward Grossman of Manchester, Mich., who met his death on April 31, was supposed to have been struck by a train. A different story is told by a man named Medler, who is dying from consumption in a Cincinnati hospital. He states that Grossman was working in a paper mill at Franklin, O., and incurred the enmity of the other employes, who placed a rope about his neck and raised and lowered him from a beam, finally hurling his head against the iron shafting and fracturing his skull. Grossman was then placed upon the railroad tracks to cover up the crime. A detective from Cincinnati arrested George Stag, living near Franklin, presumably in connection with the affair.

Smashed the Coffin.

Stephenson, Mich., Aug. 13.—Chas. Eckman, a prominent farmer east of Daggett, was thrown off a load of lumber and received injuries from which he died a few hours later. Monday at the funeral the horses carrying the pallbearers became wild, ran into the wagon carrying the coffin, breaking the coffin. The body was placed in a rough box and interred. Great excitement prevailed among the 70 mourners.

Why the Mole Is Blind.

The creatures which dwelt in the darkness of the depths naturally lost their powers of vision after awhile. It is the same way with the mole, which is doubtless descended from progenitors which could see. Blindness in the mole is the result of a degeneration of the optic nerve, the consequence of which is that images formed in the eye itself are not transmitted to the animal's consciousness. Occasionally a mole can see a little out of one eye which has retained its communication with the brain.

It is not that the mole is born blind, but that it inherits a tendency to atrophy of the visual organs just as people derive from their parents an inclination to consumption or other diseases. Some day in the future there may be no such thing as a mole that is not entirely and hopelessly blind.

Ten Years' Trial

The Story of a Soldier's Struggle

By Brigadier General
Charles King

Copyright, 1901, by Charles King

It had indeed been a queer time. Barclay, as became the managing head of a great road, had taken a suit of rooms on the parlor floor, with his secretary, typewriters and assistants, while Channing and his one aid-de-camp, Mr. Langdon, occupied modest rooms on the floor above and attended to business over at the station. Barclay nodded patronizingly when he met or passed Channing and once so far unbent as to take one hand out of his trousers pocket and extend a finger to his rival. But he never seemed to see Langdon, and Langdon had an aggravating way of looking straight into the other's face in a calmly speculative manner, as though he considered him some curious specimen of the "freak" family, a subject for leisurely contemplation, but in nowise a thing to be accosted.

The regular officers and many of those of the state troops took their rations at the Brentwood the few days they were there on duty, and it was curious to note the effect on the two occasions that Langdon entered the dining room while the military was there. The guardsmen to a man either arose to shake his hand or else whirled around in their seats and waved him joyous greeting. Woodrow, of the artillery, too, sprang to his feet and ostentatiously went half across the dining room to clap him on the shoulders or slap him between them on the broad of the back. Once, finding a vacant seat by Langdon's side, the rash subaltern quit the table of his commanding officer and finished his dinner at Channing's, and Nathan and Torrance, who never saw Langdon at all, took prompt note of the desertion and held it up against the youngster as an affront to be expatiated through many a slight and snub and semiofficial annoyance when they harked back to Pawnee. It was plain that Langdon was a marked man in the eyes of the populace—envied, respected and esteemed by one element and feared and hated by another.

"It's just as well you are going with Mr. Channing," said mine host of the Brentwood to him the night of the banquet. "There's a bad undercurrent here that will never forgive your spoiling their plans, and those fellows of the Seattle, who would have thanked God for your services at the time, are now doing the best they know how to stir up sentiment against you."

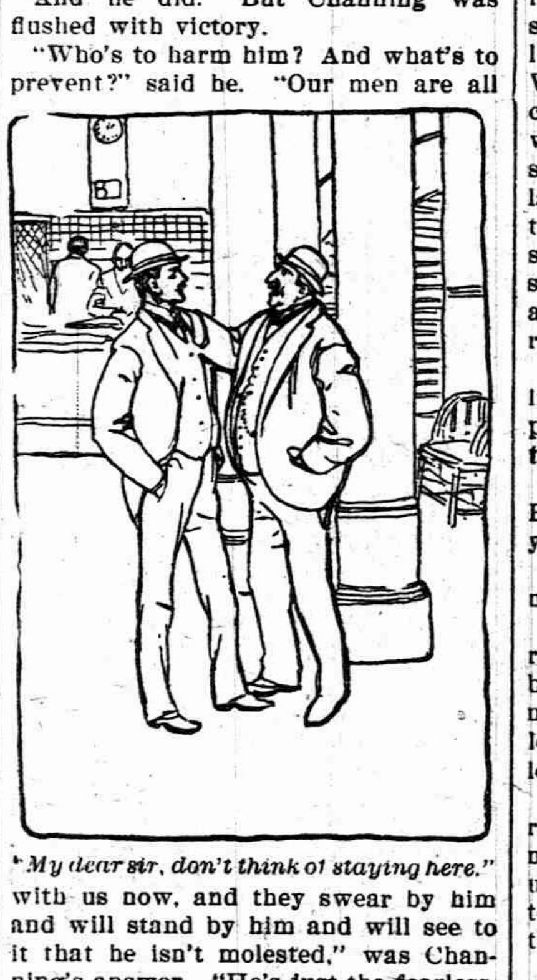
"But I'm not going with Mr. Channing," said Langdon promptly. "They have offered me a good position here."

The landlord was leaning against a column of the rotunda at the moment, smoking one of Barclay's best. A roar of applause and alternating currents of "He's a Jolly Good Fellow" and "Auld Lang Syne" issued from the swinging portals of the hall, and Boniface had been listening with a comical grin on his face. But at Langdon's words the expression of amusement gave way to one of deep concern. Impressively he stood erect and placed a hand on Langdon's shoulder.

"My dear sir," said he, "I mustn't be quoted in this matter. I like you, and I want to see you come out all right, but—don't think of staying here. I'll say as much to Mr. Channing."

And he did. But Channing was flushed with victory.

"Who's to harm him? And what's to prevent?" said he. "Our men are all with us now, and they swear by him and will stand by him and will see to it that he isn't molested," was Channing's answer. "He's just the fearless, reliable man we need for a certain kind of work, and here's the place for him."



"My dear sir, don't think of staying here."

But the landlord shook his head. "Mr. Channing," said he earnestly, "I see and hear things you cannot see and hear because men look and talk sweet when you come around. It's their bread and butter. You manage your business in the interest of your stockholders, and I must do the same for mine. I must attract custom, not antagonize it and lose my job. I mustn't offend those fellows of the other road, for some of them are stockholders of this very shop, and they are not fond of you, much less of Mr. Langdon. If you want to reward and help him, take him to Chicago. Don't attempt to settle him here."

But the mere idea that one of his chosen should be menaced by the enemy was enough to set Channing solidly against a change of plan. He went to Melville's room in the morning to say goodby and found that Boniface had been there before him, for Melville, too, was anxious. Mrs. Melville had gone out to do some shopping; Miss Grahame sat in silence, an absorbed listener. That evening Langdon knocked, as usual, at Melville's door to inquire what manner of day his friend had had and whether he could be of service. Miss Grahame was just coming forth, dressed for the street.

"The troops go back to Pawnee tonight," she said, "and some of the officers are coming up in a moment to say goodby. I thought I should like a brisk walk."

He hesitated a moment. He well knew to whom she referred by "some of the officers" and why she referred to them at all. It would be embarrassing all around for him to meet them there. It was significant of her own desire to avoid Nathan and his set that she should be going out just as they were expected. Langdon's first impulse was to offer to escort her, for night was falling, and the electric globes were already sparkling on the snowy streets, and with all her independence and fearlessness Miss Grahame might be wiser not to go forth unattended. But he faltered. The weather had set in sharper, colder, and he had no civilian overcoat and would not wear the "frogged" and braided garment of his late rank and profession now that he no longer held the commission. He could have spared himself any scruples as to that, since dozens of civilians east and west wear that army overcoat because it strikes them as handsome, because it gives them an air of distinction and because there is no law to hinder. It was not on account of lack of warm clothing he hesitated, but one glance at his worn, old business suit, made three years before and much too snug for him now, banished all thought of tendering his services.

"I may go in, may I not?" he said after a moment.

"Oh, yes," was the answer as she threw open the door to admit him and then as he entered stood there, thinking. Twice her fine, thoughtful eyes followed him into the room; twice she caught herself listening for the sound of their voices and trying to catch the words, then, with heightened color, turned sharply and stood within the room. A little party of artillery officers was issuing from the elevator. Another moment, and they were knocking at the door.

"Good evening, Captain Nathan. Good evening, gentlemen," was her placid salutation. "Yes, the major will be glad to see you." And, one after another, she ushered the quartet into the dimly lighted apartment where Mrs. Melville came forward to greet them. "You'll come up again tomorrow, Langdon," she heard Melville say as Santley bent over her to express his disappointment that she should be going out just as they were coming in. Couldn't she wait a moment? He would so like— No; evidently she couldn't. Moreover, she made it impossible for Santley to complete his sentence by calmly saying, "Now, Mr. Langdon, if you are quite ready," and thereby giving Santley to understand her escort was already chosen. Santley glanced at Langdon, turned red and looked as though he really wanted to speak. Langdon, passing Nathan without a sign, looked straight into the eyes of his adjutant and plainly indicated that he had no desire whatever to converse with him. Two minutes later, in the keen, frosty air of the wide western street, he found himself swiftly pacing the broad, wooden sidewalk, crackling with cold under their light footfalls, Ethel Grahame, with bright eyes and flushed cheeks and quick, elastic steps, springing along by his side, her hand within his arm. Had any one told him the day he so sadly left Pawnee that this would be a possibility in the near future Eric Langdon could hardly have believed.

The air was crisp, keen and sharply cold, but there was no wind, and he never seemed to feel the lack of an overcoat. His old cutaway was a handsome, stylish garment when first it came to him three years agone, but buttons and buttonholes were straining now as he filled his lungs with the ozone and oxygen of that rare, exhilarating atmosphere. The shops at the street corners at first were brilliantly lighted, and the bridge over the Red Water was lively with sleighs, street cars and pedestrians hurrying homeward. It was she who had turned southward as they left the hotel at the ladies' door, and it made no difference to him. His habitat was the north side—the yards of the Big Horn—but she had chosen the opposite direction, away from what might be called the residence side of the city.

"It is a fad of mine," she said. "I like to see as much as I can of every place I visit, and I've never been on the other side."

"Nor I," he answered. "Being a Big Horner now, my work keeps me at our yards all day."

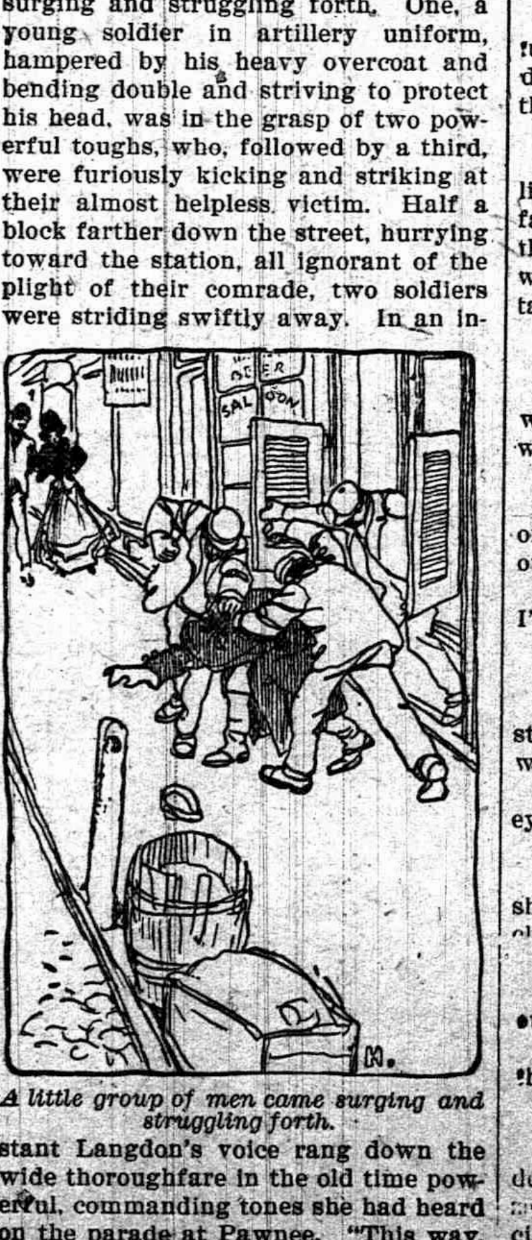
"Do you like it?" she asked after a moment's pause.

"It is interesting and exacting," he replied, guiding her carefully over a broken cross walk. The streets seemed neglected hereabout. There was a saloon on every corner and a knot of loafers at almost every saloon.

"I'm almost sorry you chose this route, Miss Grahame," he continued, noting the curious looks that were bent upon him and his companion; noting, too, an occasional elbow nudge among the loiterers.

"The Seattle side doesn't seem to be the better side, does it?" she answered, half laughing. "But, then, I've twice been to your station and the scene of your exploit. I thought I should like to see what was left of the Seattle. Oh, Mr. Langdon, I'm afraid there's trouble!"

Not 40 feet away the double doors of a saloon suddenly swung violently outward, and a little group of men came surging and struggling forth. One, a young soldier in artillery uniform, hampered by his heavy overcoat and bending double and striving to protect his head, was in the grasp of two powerful toughs, who, followed by a third, were furiously kicking and striking at their almost helpless victim. Half a block farther down the street, hurrying toward the station, all ignorant of the plight of their comrade, two soldiers were striding swiftly away. In an instant Langdon's voice rang down the wide thoroughfare in the old time powerful, commanding tones she had heard on the parade at Pawnee. "This way, B battery! Lively! This way!" then followed. "Stand here—just one minute, Miss Grahame." And with that he sprang from her side. She saw him launch into the fray with the leap of a panther, lithe, supple, quick as a cat. She saw the lightning blows that sent two of the brutal assailants crashing their full length on the sidewalk, saw him whirl upon the third, who darted back into the saloon, and the next instant an impressive tableau under the sputtering electric light—Langdon, bareheaded, spare and athletic, with clinching fists gazing down at two bewildered ruffians slowly struggling to their feet; a young battery man, blood covered and feeble, clinging to the lamppost; a barkeeper in shirt sleeves, with two or three satellites peering out from the doorway, and two stalwart soldiers, just arrived, facing their former officer and, with the instinct of long habit, standing at the salute.



A little group of men came surging and struggling forth.

Five minutes later the rescued battery man was being led away by his comrades, and a street car was conveying the rescuer and his fair, pale faced, silent companion back to the hotel.

"Keep your eye open for those fellows after this night's work," whispered the policeman who had escorted them to the crossing; but Langdon paid little heed, for presently Ethel spoke.

"You must let me mend that coat at once, Mr. Langdon," said she, and, glancing down, he saw that the swelling muscles had burst both buttonholes at the chest, and the old cutaway was a wreck indeed.

CHAPTER X.

Three days more, and Melville was pronounced well enough to travel, and Langdon was alone. The first flush of enthusiasm over, his exploits had died out. The populace of Brentwood had settled down to its usual routine, and but for some scores of unemployed men and a gang of troublesome tramps infesting the outskirts little was left in the town itself to recall the excitement and turmoil of the days of the strike. Over in the yard of the Seattle masons and carpenters by the dozen were busily at work, nearly all of them local craftsmen. The ill wind that whirled the Seattle's thousands up in smoke and flame was blowing modest hundreds into the pockets of Brentwood's artisans and through them to the coffers of Brentwood's merchants. The Big Horn might be the better managed road in some respects, said Brentwood, but the Seattle brings the money. Barclay's banquet had turned many a head and not a few hearts among the municipal leaders, and Barclay's dollars were potent among the people. The regulars had gone home over the Seattle, the guardsmen had preceded them over the Big Horn, and the roads had returned to the guardianship of their own watchman and Brentwood's police. The sheriff had discharged his extra deputies, and Eric Langdon, beginning the world over again on a modest salary, took counsel with himself in the absence of other advisers and planned his daily life. It had been Channing's expectation that he should take a room near the yards and his meals at the Brentwood, but Langdon had decided on rigid economy. It might be long months before he could hope for promotion and better pay, and it was his determination to save at least half of each month's stipend to go toward the payment of his debts and $10 more to form a fund on which he could depend in the event of ills or accident. Mine host of the Brentwood hated, he said, to have him go, but directed him to a quiet, homelike little place, where he secured a room and plain but sufficient board under the roof of a widow whose sole support had been killed in a collision on the Seattle three years before. Yet the hotel man was at heart not sorry to see him go. He liked him well, but certain of the owners did not. He begged Langdon to come round and make himself at home whenever he felt like it, but secretly hoped he might be too busy There had been a few days immediately following the strike when the mayor, certain of the common council, the district attorney and other prominent citizens and business men had expressed themselves as delighted to meet Mr. Langdon and as grateful beyond words for his gallant conduct at a critical time. But since Barclay's banquet they met him with a certain constraint when they met him at all, for his duties kept him at the yards from early morn till after dark. There seemed to be just one set of men whose eyes lighted up at sight of him, who were eager to press his acquaintance and many of whom never passed him without some semblance of a military salute. These were the members of the Brentwood rifles, officially known as Company C of the Fourth Nebraska

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Rather Venomous.

A tenderfoot who visited the Yosemite in the old days thus related his experience: The stage driver found out that he was seriously afraid of snakes and immediately proceeded to make his hair stand on end.

"Venomous reptiles? You bet. I don't know what reptiles is, but them snakes you can just bet your life is venomous. Why, one day I was comin down here drivin a wagon, when I catches sight of a snake in the brush all ready for a spring. My horses starts, an I whips 'em up fast to clear the snake, don't you see, afore he could spring. He makes one clear spring, the snake does, an he misses the horses."

"That was lucky. But you—you"—

"Lucky? You bet your life it was lucky. He missed the horses, the snake did, but he stuck his fangs clean through the wagon."

"You don't say!"

"I do say, and maybe you don't believe it, but it's a fact. He stuck his fangs clean through that wagon, an that wagon is swelled up so bad that we had to leave it by the wayside and take the horses home."

Lets Him Out.

Mrs. Nagger—Oh, James, how awkward! Mr. Smith has come, and now we shall be 13 at table.

Mr. Nagger—What then?

Mrs. Nagger (with a shriek)—Why, one of us will die before the year is out!

Mr. Nagger (brutally)—Never mind. I'm tough.—Pick-Me-Up.

Just In Time.

An Irish gentleman getting upon a street car found one place vacant, which he proceeded to occupy.

"Sure," said he, with a twinkle in his eye, "I came just in the nick of time."

"How is that?"

ROUND ABOUT US.

Did you hear that Carrie Nation had hurt her knee and would not be able to walk again? No. How did it happen? She found she had a joint in it so smashed it with her hatchet.—Ex.

Here are the Western Kodak's summer pun first reader lessons: "See the corn in the field; can the corn walk? No, Robert, the corn stalks. See the pretty cake; does the cake stalk? Never, but you should see the cake walk. I have a rope; can the rope walk? Yes if it is taut. The hen is in the garden; does the hen rise? No, the hen sets. The mercury is in the thermometer; will the mercury set? No, my child, this is July; see it rise."—Adrian Press.

One cold winter's night an editor's wife awoke and, while she leaned on her elbow to pin together the newspapers which they were using for coverlets, she saw smile after smile chase each other over the editor's visage while the wrinkles on his brow ran around and sank into dimples at the corners of his mouth. The strange sight was too much for feminine curiosity and she fiercely shook the sleeping scribe who awoke with a start and cried "How could you do it? How could you do it? I was dreaming in Heaven I think, editing the Weekly Trumpet and all the subscribers paid in advance and they all paid cash for job work.—Blissfield Advance.

LULLABY.

We've wandered all about the upland fallows,
We've watched the rabbits at their play,
But now good night, goodby to soaring swallows,
Now good night, goodby, dear day.

Sleep, liebchen, sleep, the bats are calling;
Pansies never miss the light, but sweet babes must sleep at night;
Sleep, liebchen, sleep, the dew is falling.

Even wind among the quiet willows
Rests, and the sea is silent too.
See soft white linen, cool, such cool white pillows
Wait in the darkling room for you.

All the little chicks are still; now the moon peeps down the hill;
Sleep, liebchen, sleep, the owls are hooting.
Ships have hung their lanthorns out; little mice dare creep about;
Sleep, liebchen, sleep, the stars are shooting.

THE OCEAN SCORCHER.

He Who Brags About How Many Times He Has "Crossed."

The ocean scorcher, the woman or man who was forever bragging about how many times he had "crossed," is, thank heaven, on the decrease. Fashion has at last set the seal of her disapproval on him, and he is rapidly becoming obsolete. The fashion is now never to mention the number of times one has been to Europe. "The last time I was over" is the way to refer to an over the water experience if you wish to be in the vogue. Of course you may, if you truthfully can, say "the time before last I was over" or "the tenth time I crossed" or "during my seventh trip through Europe," but a great majority, you will find, say "the last time I was over." It is safer—when one has been over but once.

Pin many of these travelers so fond of relating their European experiences down to the figures, and you will find that "the last time I was over" bears a close relation to the little boy who said he was next to the head of his class, to have it transpire later that the class consisted of himself and a little girl. "The last time I was over" may, like as not, have been the first. Still anything is better than the ocean scorcher and his bragging. To him it didn't matter where he hadn't been or what he hadn't seen or anything, but simply how many times he had crossed.

The one time on record that any one was known to get ahead of these scorchers was when a lot of them were sitting swapping lies on a certain steamship deck and a nonscorcher, having learned that the star scorcher's record was 188 runs, remarked, "There's a man on board who has crossed 566 times." Then, as the excitement caused by the news somewhat subsided: "He's never been anywhere except to the two ports Liverpool and New York. He's never seen anything, he's never done anything, but just cross the ocean 566 times—he's the ship's barber."—New York Sun.

He Hacked Off His Leg.

Caught in a bear trap on the banks of the Athabasca, near Milford, Me., John McLeod, a lumber scaler, was obliged to take out his jackknife and cut off his leg. The trap was too heavy to move and was sprung in such a way that he could not reach over and release it. He was far from any human being, and the only way out of it seemed to be to cut off the leg.

That was done easily, because the leg upon which he operated was of wood. But when he stumped back to camp it made him mad to hear the jeers of the French-Canadian cook of the lumber crew.

"Why you no take off you whole wood laig, ah? You get out un thrap and no spile you wood laig 'tall, ah?"

Accepted.

"I am a self made man," said the pompous individual, with his chest expanded.

The other looked at him critically.

"Your excuse is satisfactory," he said.—Brooklyn Life.

The condition of potatoes in the southern counties is 63, in the central counties 76, in the northern counties 86 and in the State 69. One year ago the average condition for the State was 94

A TOURIST

Writes from Trondhjem, Nordcap, To Relatives Here.

JAMES LILLEY,

Trondhjem, Nordcap, Jul. 28, '01.

DEAR FATHER:—

We have been on this steamer a week going from Trondhjem to North Cape and back. We are due to arrive in Trondhjem to-morrow morning. On our way up we stopped at Tromso, the largest town within the Arctic circle, and at Hammerfest, the town farthest north, and I sent you postal cards from both. It is an interesting trip and there is fine scenery most of the way, although the boats are rather slow as the distance up and back is less than 1300 miles.

The North Cape, the most northern point of Europe is in latitude 71 degrees 10 minutes and 40 seconds north. This is farther north than the point reached by the Franklin expediton by way of Greenland and shows the wonderful effect of the gulf stream. There are farms within fifty miles of North Cape and Hammerfest is a town of some 2500 people. Nearly all the way up the route lies inside the islands off the coast and at only two or three places and then of no great distance, are you exposed to the open sea.

There are some fine glaciers and snow covered mountains. The principal business is, of course, fishing and the making of fish oils. In Hammerfest we saw as many as fifty fishing vessels getting ready for business, which begins in August. They say that about 30,000 men are engaged in fishing. The steamers running up here are rather small, about 1,000 tons, but comfortable and the table is fair. We have 83 passengers, 31 of them are from the U. S. A. We met just before leaving Trondhjem a Mr. and Mrs. Crane, of Detroit. and traveled with them two or three days. They were bound for the cape but by a different boat. Then they go to Russia. Hope that you have had a change of weather and are now comfortable.

Affectionately,
JAMES.

BASE BALL.

The game here Saturday between the home team and one called Kennedy's Adrian team, picked from various ball clubs in the country, was anything but interesting. The Adrian team did not arrive on the grounds until 4:30 o'clock and in consequence the Tecumseh Ball Association was a big looser, many people thinking there would be no game and the attendance was small. The first part of the game was fairly well played, but the latter part was anything but creditable to some of the Tecumseh players. They seem to think the game an easy one to win and played a very sleepy game, bunching errors and allowing Adrian to win. The Tecumseh players need a good shaking up and given to understand they must get into the game.

Johnson was put into the box to pitch for Tecrmseh. This was his first trial in a full game and he did remarkably well, was a little wild with the ball but had good speed and curves. He struck out 12 men, being the best record here this season. He showed that with a little more practice he would be at his old form as a pitcher. Following is the score.

MICHIGAN DAY AT THE PAN-AMERICAN.

Buffalo, Aug. 8, 1901

Low railroad rates have been secured for Michigan Day at the Pan-American, and arrangements have been made for a large attendance and interesting exercises.

Michigan Day is set for August 20th. The Michigan building has been already dedicated, but this will be used as headquarters for the visitors and exercises will be held in the Temple of Music.

Governor Smith and his staff will be present. Among the speakers will be Senator Burrows, Representative Wm. Alden Smith, Mayor W. C. Maybury, of Detroit, Ex-United States Senator John Patten and General Duffield.

At a meeting of the Central Passenger Agents' Association in Jamestown, just held, a rate was conceded for the state of Michigan of one cent a mile for August 19-20, good returning the Sunday following.

The exposition will be at its best at this time, and with this low rate a very large attendance at the Rainbow City for the week of Michigan Day is expected.

George A. Barbour, president of the Michigan Commission to the Pan-American exposition, writes Mr. Mark Bennitt, superintendent of the Pan-American Press department, that a banner has been strung from the Russell House, Detroit, which reads: "Michigan Day, Day, Aug. 20, Pan-American exposition.

Invitations have been sent to over 600 public officials and other leading citizens of Michigan.

Reports from Michigan show much interest in the exposition throughout the state and indicate that citizens of this commonwealth are planning to attend the exposition in large numbers.

Michigan has one of the finest buildings upon the court of state and foreign buildings at the Pan-American, and it is most handsomely furnished, affording a fine headquarters for visitors from that state. The style of architecture is colonial, with large porches. There is large hall with mantel, ladies' and gentlemens's parlors, secretary's office, check room, postoffice, lavatories, etc., on the ground floor, and a hall with mantel, committee room, directors' room, two bed rooms, ladies' parlor and bath room. The floors are hard wood. The porches, which are noble and commanding, have fluted columns. Unlike most of the other structures on the grounds, the Michigan building has plain white walls, remindful of the White City at Chicago. The dimensions of the building are 100x82 feet.

The commissioners to the Pan-American from Michigan are:—George H. Barbour, president, W. H. Wallace, vice-president; Hal H. Smith, secretary, E. H. Foote, treasurer; Jas. E. Dee, Miner T. Cole and Gov. Aaron T. Bliss.

NEWSBOY'S BAND.

A Popular Musical Organization Supported by a Minneapolis Paper, Is Encamped at the Pan-American Exposition.

The Minneapolis Journal's Newsboys' Band arrived in Buffalo Thursday and is encamped at Camp Fillmore, at the Pan-American exposition until Aug. 12. On Friday they will parade through the business streets, serenading the newspaper offices and principal hotels.

The boys will wear their dress uniform of white duck trousers and red coats and will parade under police escort.

The band is composed of genuine street newsboys who sell the Journal every evening in Minneapolis. It is a full military band of 55 pieces and the fact that membership in the band is esteemed an honor is attested by a reserve class of 25 boys in constant practice on different instruments ready to supply vacancies,

The Minneapolis Journal has fostered the band from its beginning and pays all its tuition and expenses, endeavoring to make band membership something to work for and to be proud of. The boys vary in age from 10 to 17 years, averaging 14. Since the band made its first appearance, it has been in great demand for all sorts of public gatherings, having filled nearly 100 engagements in the principal cities of Minnesota, Wisconsin, North and South Dakota and Iowa.

A MATTER OF FAITH.

Our religious opinions are, as a whole, a matter of faith. Whatever denomination or sect we follow we pin our faith on the words and teachings of our pastor. His sincerity is never doubted; that he thoroughly believes his adopted creed is unquestioned. The opinions of the clergy on any subject carry well deserved weight with all classes of people. Many reverend gentleman in Michigan are testifying for the little conqueror, their praise is not given lightly and only after personal experience. Gratitude and a desire to promote the welfare of the public brings such testimony as follows:

The Rev. F. A. Smith, of 829 First street, Kalamazoo, Mich. says: "When I procured Doan's Kidney Pills I was, at the time, and had been considerably troubled with my kidneys. Backache was quite pronounced, being especially severe when I sat or stood in a stooped position for any length of time. Other symptons usually attending disordered kidneys plainly indicated what caused the difficulty. Doan's Kidney Pills corrected the annoyance in a very short time and I have not noticed, up to date any indication of a recurrence. As I took no other medicine there can be no doubt but Doan's Kidney Pills were the direct means of curing me. I am most favorably impressed with them."

Doan's Kidney Pills for sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

Stealing a Court Secret.

Once when Justice W. of the United States supreme court reached Pittsburg on circuit a Mr. Wright entertained him. There was a case pending then in the supreme court which involved the values of two stocks. The decision was certain to make one of the stocks valueless and the other valuable. It was considered an even chance which way the decision would go. The lawyers in the case had settled it in their minds that if Justice B. were to write the decision it would be in their favor. The justice was noted for writing long decisions. The majority of the men on the bench at that time wrote briefly. Justice W. was entertained at dinner at Mr. Wright's house. After the dinner Justice W. became companionable and good natured.

In the midst of conversation about the court and its work Mr. Wright said to Justice W., mentioning the case in which he was interested. "I suppose that the decision in that case will be a long one, there being so many points involved." "As long as the moral law, my boy," said the old justice as he smiled benevolently upon his host. That was all that he said upon the subject. Mr. Wright, however, knew from this remark that it was the particular justice who wrote long decisions who was preparing the one in this case. This gave him the cue for the decision, and he bought stock based upon this judgment. It proved correct, and he gained exactly $200,000 from this careless remark of the too amiable justice.

Their Secretist Out.

All Sadievill, Ky., was curious to learn the cause of the vast improvement in the health of Mrs. S. P. Whittaker, who had for a long time, endured untold suffering from a chronic bronchial trouble. "It's all due to Dr. King's New Discovery," writes her husband. "It competely cured her and also cured our little grand-daughter of a severe attack of Whooping Chough." It positively cures Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, all Throat and Lung troubles. Guaranteed bottles 50c. and $1.00. Trial bottles free at C. A. Wright's drug store.

The Fata Morgana.

The fata morgana is a singular aerial phenomenon akin to the mirage. It is seen in many parts of the world, but most frequently and in greatest perfection at the strait of Messina, between Sicily and Italy. So many conditions must coincide, however, that even there it is of comparatively rare occurrence. To allow of its production the sun must be at an angle of 45 degrees with the water, both sky and sea must be calm, and the tidal current sufficiently strong to cause the water in the center to rise higher than on the edges of the strait. When these conditions are fully met, the observer on the heights of Calabria, looking toward Messina, will behold a series of rapidly changing pictures, sometimes of most exquisite beauty.

Castles, colonnades, successions of beautiful arches, palaces, cities, with houses and streets and church domes, mountains, forests, grottoes, will appear and vanish, to be succeeded perhaps by fleets of ships, sometimes placidly sailing over the deep, sometimes inverted, while a halo like a rainbow surrounds every image. It is supposed that the images are due to the irregular refractive powers of the different layers of air above the sea, which magnify, repeat and distort the objects on the Sicilian shore beyond, but to the Italians these singular appearances are the castles of the Princess Morgana, and the view of them is supposed to bring good fortune to the beholder.

How High Was the Tower of Babel?

The actual height at which the last stone of that famous structure, the Tower of Babel, rested cannot, on account of the remoteness of the times at which it is said to have existed, ever become more than a matter of merest conjecture. Herodotus, who lived about 1,700 years after that "great spiral way to heaven" is said to have been attempted, says that he saw at Babylon a structure consisting of eight towers raised one above another, each 75 feet in height, but whether this ruin was the remains of the Tower of Babel it was even then impossible to ascertain. Herodotus, usually minutely exact in his writing, leaves us in ignorance as to how the upper level of each of these 75 foot towers was reached from the level below.

As might be expected, even in tradition, a wide difference of opinion exists as to the height of the tower. Most orientalists maintain that God did not put a stop to the work until the tower had reached a height of 10,000 fathoms, or about 12 miles. In Ceylonese tradition it is said to have been as high as 20,000 elephants, each standing one above the other. St. Jerome asserts on the authority of persons who had examined the ruins that it did not reach a height exceeding four miles. Other statements are still more extravagant.

For Whooping Cough.

"Both my children were taken with whooping cough," writes Mrs. O. E Dutton, of Danville, Ill. "A small bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar cured the cough and saved me a doctor's bill. J. J. Orr.

Use Hard Beds.

A German doctor advises the adoption of a hard bed and that children should be trained from the beginning to sleep upon no other kind. It is certainly true that as a rule the hard bed conduces to the most refreshing kind of sleep, the feather bed, so dearly loved by our grandmothers, being enervating in the extreme and encouraging weakness of mind in the matter of getting up in the morning.

The World's Space.

A statistician asserts that when 350 years shall have passed the density of the earth's population will be so great that each person will have only two-thirds of an acre, which space will have to suffice for all purposes—agriculture, roads, houses, parks, railways, etc. He estimates the present population of the earth at 1,600,000,000 and says that in 2250 it will be 52,073,000,000.

A Useful Mother-in-law.

"After all, a mother-in-law is a pretty good thing to have sometimes."

"What wonderful experience have you been having lately?"

"My wife was afraid to discharge our cook, and she wouldn't go for me, so we sent for Birdie's mother and turned her loose in the kitchen. They smashed some of the furniture, but the cook's gone."

Running the Gantlet.

Running the gantlet as a military punishment was, it is said, originated by Gustavus Adolphus to punish thieves in his army. It was borrowed by the English from the Germans, who copied it from Gustavus, and, being employed in the British regiments in America, was readily taken up by the Indians of this country.

Mr. Daniel Bantz, Otterville, Ia. says: "Have had asthma and a very bad cough for years, but could get no relief from the doctors and medicines I tried, until I took Foley's Honey and Tar. It gave immediate relief, and done me more good than all the other remedies combined. J. J. Orr.

Process Too Expensive.

Warts are curious things. They come and go mysteriously, although their going is frequently marked by exasperating delays, and there are almost as many infallible cures as there are warts, the only trouble with these cures being that they are useless when applied to the particular wart you happen to have. They are only good for other people's.

"In my opinion," said a clubman who was discussing the subject with a friend one day, "a wart is merely the outward correspondence of some mental excrescence. Get rid of that, and it goes away.

"Let me give you a bit of my own experience," he continued. "Last year I went to Europe. For about three years I had had a wart on my little finger, on which I had tried everything I could hear of, but without effect. It only grew larger.

"Well, in the excitement of preparing for the trip and of the journey itself I forgot all about my wart, and when I looked for it about six weeks later it had vanished without leaving the slightest mark. I simply forgot it, and it had no mental condition to feed on. I see you have one on the back of your hand. Forget all about it for a few weeks, and it will go away of itself."

"Yes," said the other clubman, shrugging his shoulders, "but I can't afford to take a trip to Europe for the sake of curing one wart."

Sewing Done by Ants.

Ants are credited with so many marvelous accomplishments that a new one must be remarkable to the noteworthy. Mr. E. G. Green of Ceylon, an authority upon insect habits, has, however, made an observation which is well worth putting on record. He has watched red ants holding grubs in their mouths and using the web they spin to repair a rent in their nest.

Some leaves which had been fastened together by the ants were separated by Mr. Green, and in a short time after he saw small white grubs being passed backward and forward across the gap. Closer observation showed that each grub was held in the jaws of one of the worker ants, and its movements were directed as required. A continuous thread of silk issued from the mouth of each grub and was used by the ants to sew up the rent in their shelter.

There were no grubs in the neighborhood, and those used were obtained from a nest at some distance. This deliberate use of a naturally formed web as a sewing thread is as astonishing as any instance of the intelligence of ants yet observed.

Peculiar Trees.

The visitor to the Falkland islands sees a number of what appear to be weather beaten, moss covered bowlders of various sizes scattered here and there. On attempting to turn one over he is surprised to find that it is anchored to the ground by roots of great strength. These are not bowlders. They are trees. No other place in the world can show such a peculiarity of "forest" growth. The Falkland islands are exposed to a strong polar wind which renders it impossible for trees to grow in the proper form. Nature has consequently adapted herself to the prevailing conditions and produced this strange form of plant life. These "living stones," as they are called, are quite devoid of "grain," and it is next to impossible to cut them up and utilize them for fuel.

Its Changing Value.

It was right that the gallant act should be rewarded, but what should she give him?

Ha, a kiss, of course! Were there not men who would pay a great price for that? Truly it was quoted high.

"That," she said as she bestowed it, "is easily worth $100."

"It was," he answered, "but it is not."

"What do you mean?" she asked.

"While in your possession it would bring a good sum," he said, "but in mine it cannot be exchanged for the price of a meal."

However, he was a prosaic sort of fellow at best, and besides he was hungry.—Chicago Post.

Cleanliness In Cooking.

Says a Chinese writer of the eighteenth century: "Don't cut bamboo shoots (the Chinese equivalent of asparagus) with an oniony knife. A good cook frequently wipes his knife, frequently changes his cloth, frequently scrapes his board and frequently washes his hands. If smoke or ashes from his pipe, perspiration drops from his head, insects from the wall or smut from the saucepan gets mixed up with the food, though he were a very chef among chefs, yet would men hold their noses and decline."

Canaries.

Canaries, which were originally green and gray in color, were native to the islands from which they take their name and were first taken to England on ships plying between English ports and the south of France. From this stock have been derived a number of distinct varieties, such as the crested, the green, the lizard, which imitates the reptile in its variegated markings, and the Belgian, which has a strange humpback appearance.

The Peanut.

In Tennessee and Georgia the peanut is known as a goober, in Alabama and the western gulf states a ground pea, in the southeast of the United States and in the West Indies a pindal or pindar and in various parts of England a jurnut, an earth nut or a manila nut.

Nothing at All.

Jones—Umph! That's nothing; my baby does that.—Exchange.

First Public Pianist.

Of all the myriads who play the piano how many know that "Tom Bowling" Dibdin was the first man who played the instrument in public? That was in 1767, and the feat was performed at the first night of "The Beggar's Opera."—Invention.

Ants can stand extremes of heat and cold. Forty-eight hours' exposure to frost will not kill them, and one sort has been observed to build its nest in chinks in a blacksmith's forge.

Tunnels.

A New York newspaper remarks that "ferries came and ferries go, bridges rise and bridges fall, but tunnels last forever." There is a scientific truth in the observation. Of all works of man earthworks, plain earth mounds sodded over, are about the most enduring. A properly constructed tunnel is essentially a work in earth and so almost as permanent as the great globe itself.

You can generally tell when a man is talking to a woman over the telephone by the tone of voice he assumes.—Nashville Banner.

SLICING A RATTLER.

THE COLORADO WAY OF TURNING THE DANGEROUS TRICK.

Dexterity and Daring of the Cowboy In Cutting Off the Head of the Reptile After Its Ineffectual Attempt to Strike.

"Did you ever see a cow puncher kill a rattlesnake with a knife?" said a Colorado citizen now in town. "When I first went west, I punched cattle on the Sunset ranch, one of the largest in southern Colorado. I was a tenderfoot, fresh from the east, but no swell head about me. That saved me a lot of trouble. The boys were dead willing to put me next, even to a 14-year-old broncho never halter broken. Among other things, I learned how to kill a rattler with a bowie knife. I killed one with a knife to make my standing good, but after that a gun or a pitchfork was good enough for me.

"I have seen a plainsman ride up to a small sized rattler, jump off his horse, kick at the waving head, avoid the strike and as the reptile came down place a heel upon its neck, coolly take a knife from his belt and dispatch it. I have also seen a live rattler thrown up on a haystack machine, and I have seen the men working on that stack jump, roll, tumble and slide to get away. They could not see the rattler; that was all. In the open they would have played with it.

"A rattlesnake is harmless out of coil. For that reason it wastes no time in getting back into coil after the spring. It will not strike unless it is perfectly sure it can reach its object. Therefore the cowboy must get into reach of the snake's spring. It can spring half its own length, and sometimes more. Of course the larger the snake the more coils, and the more coils the more vicious the strike.

"Dick Haynes was a young daredevil who would go out of his way to play with a rattler. I have seen him kill at least a dozen with a knife, and I saw him when he got such a close call that he dropped the game and used a gun forever after.

"We were out together one Sunday. It was warm, and as we rode he fanned his face with his sombrero. Suddenly he clapped his hat on his head and started his broncho on a lope. 'Watch me get that pison,' he shouted.

"Fifty yards to our right was a rattler. It was trying to get away, but we headed it in an instant and were off our horses. It immediately coiled, and then I saw the biggest snake I have ever seen. It was a diamond rattler and about 20 years old. It had the ugliest head I ever saw, enormous in size, and with a mouth that reminded me of a bulldog's jaw. Dick stopped just long enough to size up its length so as to get an idea of its spring, and then went in on it.

"The strike came like a flash of lightning. The snake struck the ground with a sound like the cracking of a four horse whiplash in the hands of an expert. Dick just saved himself by throwing his body back full length. The snake coiled again before Dick could get to it. I got nervous and called to him to shoot it.

"'That's the first one that ever struck at me and got back,' he said, 'and I'm going to have that pretty head.'

"The rattler was beside itself with rage. It lay, coil upon coil of smooth, glistening length, showing the long reach and powerful spring in reserve. Out of the coils two feet more of body and neck rose straight in the air, and above all that black, venomous head, with glowing eyes and forked tongue, waved, slightly, warily, to and fro.

"Dick stepped in again, more cautiously. He reached the knife nearer and yet nearer to that swaying head. I knew he was getting too close, but I feared to speak to him. Then came the strike, with that marvelous dart of speed. Dick's knife flashed and the snake lay squirming, a headless thing, upon the ground.

"'Let's get to camp,' said Dick. 'It got me in the thumb.'

"We jumped for the saddles and started on a mad run for home. Dick rode with his thumb on the saddle horn and his knife in his other hand.

"'If she begins to swell, off she comes,' said he.

"We reached the ranch, and while Dick poured down whisky we examined the thumb. We could find nothing, not the slightest wound. The snake had struck the handle of his knife, and the strength and suddenness of the impact made Dick lose his nerve. It was a good thing for him. He never went after a rattler again without a long [illegible]—New York Sun.

Oddest Parasite In Creation.

Do readers know that the royal Bengal tiger is infested with one of the strangest creatures that ever lived? It is said to be a fact easily demonstrated or proved by one who has access to a zoological collection that the web of the foot of tigers of the above named species is inhabited by a blood sucking insect about the size of a common flea which is a perfect counterpart of a tiger in every particular, shape, claws, tail and stripes included.

Eternal Lamps.

A common superstition that the ancients possessed the art of making lamps which would burn forever for a long time obtained, and it was claimed that one such lamp was discovered in the tomb of Rosicrucius. Science, however, has long set this, together with other superstitions, forever at rest, since it has been demonstrated that fire will not burn in a chamber from which the air has been exhausted.

A Laugh Saved a Life.

The Rev. George Harvest, rector of Thames Ditton, England, was very absentminded, so that on one occasion he went into a friend's house, and, seeing no servant, he rambled over it, finally entering the room of an old lady ill of a quinzy. He stumbled over a clotheshorse, and his awkwardness made the patient burst into such a fit of laughter that the quinzy broke, and she lived many years to thank him.

Dozens In England.

Don't imagine that a dozen always means 12 things. In the Staffordshire potteries and in the earthenware trade a dozen to this day represents that number of any special article which can be offered at any fixed price.

For instance, the pitchers, which are called jugs in the trade, are sold as 2, 3, 4, 6, 9, 12, 18, 24, 30 and 36 pieces to each dozen, the price for a dozen being constant.

The ordinary pitcher holding a quart represents 12 to the dozen, while a pint pitcher is 24 to the dozen and is so called when dealing with that size.

Few of the articles of the trade are sold in dozens of 12, plates being almost the only ones and some of them being sold 60, 70 and even 80 to the dozen.

Besides these curiosities in figures the potters have peculiar names, such as cockspurt, twifiers, etc., that make up a trade language of itself.

A publisher's dozen is usually 13 copies.

Work of the Earthworm.

When we behold a wide, turf covered expanse, we should remember that its smoothness, on which so much of its beauty depends, is mainly due to all the inequalities having been slowly leveled by worms. It is a marvelous reflection that the whole of the superficial mold over any such expanse has passed and will pass again every few years through the bodies of worms. The plow is one of the most ancient and most valuable of man's inventions, but long before he existed the land was, in fact, regularly plowed by earthworms.

It may be doubted whether there are many other animals which have played so important a part in the history of the world as have these lowly organized creatures. Some other animals, however, still more lowly organized—namely, corals—have done far more conspicuous work in having constructed innumerable reefs and islands in the great oceans, but these are almost confined to the tropical zones.

SHE WAS PLAIN WITH HIM.

Aunt Sally Gave the Minister Something to Think About.

Two women in the early part of the last century lived in Virginia. They were noted for their common sense, and many of their sprightly sayings are quoted and enjoyed to this day. They were both Methodists, and their house was a place of resort for the clergy of that denomination. Of one of the women, known as Aunt Sally, the following story is told:

She had a black silk dress which she was accustomed to slip on when she attended church. It seems that once, while conference was being held near her house, a Methodist minister who had enjoyed her hospitality and was saying goodby ventured to remonstrate against her use of costly apparel.

"Well, Aunt Sally," said he, "you have been very kind to me and my wife during our stay at your house, and we appreciate your kindness. We shall never forget it. But, my dear sister, before parting with you I must say that it has troubled my wife and myself very much to see you a devotee to the fashion of the world. I notice with pain that you wear your silk dress every day to church, contrary to the rules of our order, and I hope that hereafter you will refrain from such a display of worldly mindedness. I also hope you will pardon me for calling your attention to it."

"My dear brother," said Aunt Sally, "I did not know that my plain black silk was troubling anybody. It hangs up there behind the door, and as it needs no washing it is always ready to slip on when company comes or when I go to church, and I find it very handy.

"But, my dear brother, since you have been plain with me I must be plain with you. Since you and your wife have been staying here I and my cook have some days had to stay at home and be absent from church because we were doing up the white dresses of your wife that she might look well at the conference. Pardon me for explaining, and when you and your wife come this way call again."—Christian Observer.

Two Ways of Telling It.

Once upon a time a king in his sleep dreamed that all of his teeth fell out before him, one by one.

He summoned a soothsayer and asked him to interpret the dream.

The soothsayer said, "O king, the meaning of thy dream is that thy family and relatives shall die in thy presence, one by one, till all are gone."

The king was very angry at that and sent the soothsayer at once to prison.

Then he sent for another soothsayer and again asked for an interpretation of the dream.

The soothsayer made answer, "O king, the interpretation of thy dream is that thy family and relatives shall die, one by one, and thou thyself shalt outlive them all."

With this answer the king showed approval and commanded that a present be given to the interpreter, and that he should be sent home with honor.—"Persian Tales" in Century.

Lake Morat, in Switzerland, has the curious property of turning red every ten years owing to the presence of certain aquatic plants which are not known in any other lake in the world.

The weight of all the air on the globe would be eleven and two-thirds trillion pounds if no deduction had to be made for space filled by mountains and land above sea level.

A GENTLE HINT.

In our style of climate with its sudden changes of temperature,—rain, wind and sunshine often intermingled in a single day,—it is no wonder that our children, friends and relatives are so frequently taken from us by neglected colds, half the death resulting directly from this cause. A bottle of Boschee's German Syrup kept about home for immediate use will prevent serious sickness, a large doctor's bill, and perhaps death, by the use of three or four doses. For curing Consumption Hemorrhages, Pneumonia, Severe Coughs, Croup, or any disease of the Throat or Lungs, its success is simply wonderful, as your druggist will tell you. Get a sample bottle free from John J. Orr. Regular size, 75 cts. Get Greens' Prize Almanac.

Heads Much Alike.

Most expert craniologists insist that it is extremely difficult to determine sex from the skull, but admit there are a few distinctions which taken together indicate sex. Perhaps the most marked distinction is the prominence of the bony projection over the nose. The skull in man is thicker and stronger, and the mastoid processes beneath the ear are larger. Broca is authority for the opinion that if the skull rests on the mastoid processes it is almost certainly a man's. In woman the top of the head appears flatter, while in man the curve from before backward is more smooth and even. Greek sculptors always recognize this.—Health Culture.

A Kick From Mexico.

Tourists come here and shout to waiters, hotel clerks, shopkeepers, etc., believing that if you only yell forth your English it instantly becomes comprehensible. And a common error in breeding and one not confined to tourist foreigners is to make unpleasant remarks about men, women and things in a tone of voice which conveys at once to the natives that something disagreeable is being said. So we acquire not without reason the reputation of being muy groseros, or very rude, and too often we are.—Mexican Herald.

Seeing Around Corners.

There are many insects which have a very much larger field of vision than we have. This is due to the greater concavity of their eyes, enabling them to see around the corner, so to speak, behind and at the sides. This development in man would have its objectionable points, but also its good ones, not the least of which might be the detection of pickpockets.—Chambers' Journal.

POOR AND BIG HEARTED.

The latchstring hangs outside every cabin door if the men folk are at home, but you must shout "Hello!" always outside the fence.

"We uns is pore," you will be told, "but y'u're welcome ef y'u kin put up with what we have."

After a stay of a week at a mountain cabin a young "furriner" asked what his bill was. The old mountaineer waved his hand. "Nothin," he said, "'cept come ag'n!"

A belated traveler asked to stay all night at a cabin. The mountaineer answered that his wife was sick, and they were "sorter out of fixin's to eat, but he reckoned he mought step over to a neighbor's an borrow some." He did step over, and he was gone three hours. He brought back a little bag of meal, and they had corn bread and potatoes for supper and for breakfast, cooked by the mountaineer. The stranger asked how far away his next neighbor lived. "A leetle the rise of six miles, I reckon," was the answer.

"Which way?"

"Oh, jes' over the mountain thar."

He had stepped six miles over the mountain and back for that little bag of meal, and he would allow his guest to pay nothing next morning.

I have slept with nine others in a single room. The host gave up his bed to two of our party, and he and his wife slept with the rest of us on the floor. He gave us supper, kept us all night, sent us away next morning with a parting draft of moonshine applejack, of his own brewing, by the way, and would suffer no one to pay a cent for his entertainment. That man was a desperado, an outlaw, a moonshiner and was running from the sheriff at that very time.

Two outlaw sons were supposed to have been killed by officers. I offered aid to the father to have them decently clothed and buried, but the old man, who was as bad as his sons, declined it, left for that, and if not, why, he had.—"The Southern Mountaineer," by John Fox, Jr., in Scribner's.

WASHDAY WISDOM.

A very hot iron should never be used for flannels or woolens.

Calicoes, ginghams and chintzes should be ironed on the wrong side.

Clotheslines are made much more durable by boiling for ten minutes before they are used.

Table linen should be ironed when quite damp and ironed with a very hot and very heavy iron.

Irons should not be allowed to become redhot, as they will never retain the heat properly afterward.

Embroideries should be ironed on a thin, smooth surface over thick flannel and only on the wrong side.

OLEO MEN QUIT.

They Have Decided Not to Test the New Act.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 16.—The law passed by the legislature last winter declaring it unlawful to sell oleomargarine colored to look like dairy butter goes into effect on Sept. 4, and according to letters that the leading oleomargarine manufacturers of Ohio, Illinois and Wisconsin are sending to customers they do not propose to make a fight in the courts to question the validity of the law. According to these letters, the manufacturers are convinced that the law cannot be set aside.

W. J. Moxley, of Chicago, one of the largest oleo manufacturers in the country and who two years ago started the suit that resulted in the courts holding that the then existing Michigan law was invalid, is among those who are sending out such letters. Moxley tells his customers that they might as well abide by the new law and not sell oleo with coloring matter in it, for if they do he will not assist them. Other dealers are telling their customers the same thing.

A question of whether this means that the oleo manufacturers intend to abandon the Michigan territory or sell oleo that cannot be distinguished from lard except by the taste or tint was asked of a man who is thoroughly familiar with the oleo trade. He replied that neither of these alternatives will be adopted. The business of making oleo is so well developed that by using the exceptionally yellow fat of the Jersey and a few other breeds of cattle oleo can be produced that will have a pronounced yellow tint; not quite as yellow as the best grade of creamery butter, but of the same color as an abundance of dairy butter that goes upon the market. And that, too, without using a particle of coloring matter. He said further that cottonseed oil, which enters quite extensively in the manufacture of oleo, will give, if used in the crude form, a pale yellow color to the article.

Lad Accidentally Shot.

Otsego, Mich., Aug. 16.—Three boys, Lon and Harold Stuck, cousins, and Leslie Simpson, aged 8 to 13 years, were fooling with a 32-caliber revolver which Simpson has owned for some time without the knowledge of his parents. It was accidentally discharged, Harold receiving the bullet in the side. The bullet has not yet been located. Harold is the son of ex-Postmaster Charles E. Stuck.

T. & A. A. Ferry Terminal.

Manistique, Mich., Aug. 16.—W. R. Burt, president, and H. W. Ashley, general manager of the Toledo & Ann Arbor railway, were in the city and arranged for a terminal point for their car ferry line in this city. The work of placing the dock, warehouses and slips will be commenced at once, and it is thought the ferries will be running to this port within a month.

Sore on Carnegie.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 16.—Thief, robber, tyrant and murderer were some of the milder epithets applied to Andrew Carnegie by the sons of toil at the meeting of the trades council. The outburst was called forth by the introduction of a resolution protesting against the acceptance of Carnegie's gift for a library.

Mad Dog Scare.

Benton Harbor, Mich., Aug. 16.—A special meeting of the board of health was held and all the dags were ordered tied up or shot. This is the result of a mad dog scare last night, when one canine with hydrophobia bit four other dogs before it was killed.

Bill Nye on Life Insurance.

The late Bill Nye's indorsement of life insurance is probably the most characteristic paragraph to be quoted from his writings:

"In these days of dynamite and swift changing presidential administrations and dark tunnels through which an engineer goes groping his way at 25 miles per hour, these days of tumbling signs of the times and tipsy telegraph poles, live wires and dead repairers; these days when the politician and the deadly bridge policeman with his pull lie down together under the influence of the same stimulant; these days when death lurks in the air we breathe, the earth we tread, the food we eat, the water—the water we bathe in—I say it behooves us to look well to our insurance and our future state, and I take pleasure in certifying and saying to whom these presents may come that since I became fully insured my health has improved so much that it is a subject for profound congratulation on my own part and the deepest disgust on the part of those who would naturally inherit my vast wealth."

Keeping the Head Clean.

Keeping the head perfectly clean is a great aid to health. An exchange tells of a distinguished physician who, having spent much of his time at quarantine, said that a person whose head was thoroughly washed every day rarely took contagious diseases, but when the hair was allowed to become dirty and matted it was hardly possible to escape infection. Many persons find speedy relief for nervous headache by washing the head thoroughly in weak soda water. We have known cases almost wholly cured in ten minutes by this simple remedy. A friend finds it the greatest relief in case of "rose cold," the cold symptoms entirely leaving the eyes after one thorough washing of the hair. The head should be thoroughly dried afterward, and drafts of air should be avoided for a little while.

Millet and "The Angelus."

It was only after long years of struggle and dire poverty, through which Millet was consoled and supported by his wife, that the peasant painter was able to take the three roomed cottage at Barbizon and "try to do something really good." It was then that he began to paint that most beautiful "poem of poverty," the "Angelus," which is today one of the most valuable pictures in the world. Again and again he threw aside the picture in despair of ever finishing it to his satisfaction, and as often his wife replaced it on the easel and induced him to continue.

On one occasion he was so incensed at not being able to produce a certain effect that he seized a knife and would have destroyed the canvas and ended the matter once for all had not his wife fortunately seized his hand and induced him to give the picture another trial. Thus it was that at last the "Angelus" found a place on the walls of the Louvre. The success it won encouraged Millet to paint many more pictures and thus place himself among the immortals in art.

CRESCEUS' GREAT RACE.

New York, Aug. 16.—What is looked upon as the greatest harness race in the history of the trotting horse was on the card for the Brighton Beach track Thursday.

Cresceus, 2:02¼, and The Abbot, 2:03¼, met for the first time in a special race for $12,000, trotting mile heats, the best three in five. Cresceus recently took away from The Abbot the world's record against time, and while the latter has gone the quarter at a 1:56 gait, which horsemen say Cresceus could not equal, Cresceus can carry his speed further. Never has a race been looked upon by the trotting fraternity with so much sensational interest.

The early afternoon prospects for the great race were decidedly improved, following a morning of cloudy and threatening weather. The track was in fair condition but fully a second slow. On the other hand, the champion Cresceus was in the pink of condition and Ketcham confident that he would not only beat The Abbot, but also the race record of 2:05, which he made in Detroit. The Abbot was fit and ready for the fray, but had not made a public appearance this year.

There were fully 20,000 persons present when Cresceus and The Abbot started in the first heat. The sun shone brightly and it was believed that the track was in good condition. Cresceus was a strong favorite before the first heat, but The Abbot had a number of supporters.

Both of the great trotters came out for a warming up shortly before 2 o'clock and were loudly cheered by the big crowd that was then present.

Cresceus won the first heat by half a length. Time by quarters: :30¾, 1:01¼, 1:32¼, 2:03¼.

Betting $100 to $30 on Cresceus.

The time made by Cresceus in the first heat, 2:03¼, breaks the world's record for a mile made in competition.

The Abbot was distanced in the second heat, though the flag was not dropped. Cresceus's time was 2:06¼.

The distancing of The Abbot in the second heat ended the race. It was then announced that Cresceus would try for the world's record of 2:02¼ with a running horse to pace him.

Cresceus's trial against time, paced by runners, resulted in a mile in 2:05.

A Valuable Man.

Washington, Aug. 16.—The appointment of Mr. Sherritts, now a member of the board of general appraisers at New York, to be the American representative in China in connection with tariff affairs, is now practically determined upon. In case an international board is organized by the powers under authority given by the protocol, Mr. Sharritts will be the American representative on the board, otherwise his services will be valuable for such other plan of putting into effect the new tariff system of China as may be adopted. Mr. Sharritts is an authority on tariff questions, and beside his service on the general board of appraisers he has served as a government expert, assisting congress in arranging the intricacies of tariff legislation.

A Probable Lynching.

Jackson, Miss., Aug. 16.—Last night Gov. Longino received a telegram from Adjt.-Gen. Henry, stating that the governor's guards called for by the sheriff of Panola county arrived at Sardis at last evening. They have James Dunningham, a negro, in charge and are guarding the jail. Gen. Henry says they will leave for Jackson with Dunningham today. Dunningham is charged with attempted criminal assault on a seven-year-old girl. A mob made a move on the jail before the governor's guards arrived, but the sheriff stood it off.

Bloodhounds on Trail.

La Crosse, Wis., Aug. 16.—A posse of farmers armed with rifles and shotguns, and having a pack of bloodhounds, is searching the county for the burglar who robbed the farmhouse of Wm. Shaft, six miles from here. The robber was last seen to enter a cornfield, which was surrounded, but word comes that the trace has been lost.

Epidemic of Horse Stealing Is Raging in Michigan

VALUABLE ANIMALS MISSING

Thieves Tracked to the Indiana Line and Lost—Police Seem Powerless to Break Up the Gang, Which Appears to be a Smooth One.

Niles, Mich., Aug. 16.—At the present time an epidemic of horse thieving is prevalent in this part of Michigan and Indiana. Reports are coming in daily from all directions telling of horses being stolen and asking for aid in the recovery of the animals and the apprehension of the thieves. Usually a full description of the horses, and, in many cases, of the thieves, is given. Apparently, the police are powerless. An organized gang is probably at work.

About 10 years ago a gang of horse thieves worked throughout this section and had their headquarters in the recesses of the Kankakee swamp, just across the Michigan-Indiana state line. This gang thrived for a number of years, until broken up by an effort on the part of the inhabitants throughout these parts. It is generally thought that a similar gang, perhaps partially composed of members of the old gang, are operating on similar lines and making use of their knowledge of this section of the country to facilitate their escape with the stolen horses.

In most cases valuable horses are taken and, although liberal rewards are offered, no captures have been effected by the police.

Within the past few days valuable horses have been stolen at Paw Paw, Coldwater, Grand Rapids and from Branch county, this state, and several of these have been tracked to the Indiana line.

IRELAND AS IT IS.

James F. Egan Presents a Speech on Her Present Condition.

Chicago, Aug. 16.—Four thousand Chicago Irish-Americans gathered at Sunnyside park yesterday on the 28th annual demonstration of the United Irish societies, commemorating the 302d anniversary of the victory of Yellow Pass and the 303d anniversary of Hugh O'Neill's victory over the English at the Yellow Ford.

A meeting nearly equal in strength to that at Sunnyside park was held at Oswald's grove under the auspices of the Irish nationalists. At the former meeting Michael Davitt was the chief speaker; at the latter O'Donnovan Rossa.

Except Michael Davitt, who came from Ireland to attend the Sunnyside gathering, all the speakers at the demonstration of the United Irish societies were prominent Chicago Irish-Americans. Prominent New York Irishmen and one resident of Dublin were speakers at the nationalist meeting in Oswald's grove.

O'Donnovan Rossa arrived in Chicago Wednesday. James F. Eagan of Dublin, the sword-bearer of the lord mayor, arrived early yesterday. Mr. Eagan's speech dealt with present conditions in Ireland.

BONDSMEN MUST PAY.

They Will Be Held for Money Stolen by Letter Carriers.

Washington, Aug. 16.—The attorney-general has forwarded to the postoffice department a decision in which he holds that the government can collect from the bond of a postal clerk or carrier for money which he steals from a registered letter. The government is held to be under a moral obligation to recover and restore valuable mail to the owner when stolen by a government employe, and the surety company guaranteeing the employe is made liable to the amount of his bond. The decision settles an old controversy between the postoffice department and surety companies over the extent of the latter's responsibility.

The decision was in the case of a letter carrier in New York city who stole two letters containing over $2,000. Of this inspectors recovered $1,500 and called on the Fidelity & Deposit Co. of Maryland, who bonded the carrier, for the remainder. The company tendered instead only $10 each letter on the ground that that was all that the government was liable for to the owner, but agreed to abide by a decision of the attorney-general in the matter. The letter now holds that when a clerk or carrier steals a register containing money he is responsible for the amount stolen; that under the guaranty of the bond he violated, such bond and the surety company therefor is held responsible under its contract for the amount of the money stolen, provided it did not exceed the amount for which the bond was given.

Bank Robbers Escape.

Millersburg, O., Aug. 16.—Company I, Eighth Ohio infantry, in command of Capt. Snyder, after scouring the hills of Holmes county for two days in pursuit of the robbers who attempted to loot the Adams bank, returned to Millersburg last night and announced that they had abandoned the chase. The burglars crossed the Monegan river followed by the troops and a posse of citizens, about 300 in number, and finally reached the wild and rocky country near Danville, which is adapted as a hiding place. There Capt. Snyder abandoned the chase and brought his men back to the city. A posse of 50 citizens is still tramping around in the forest, but with little hope of capturing the robbers.

A delegation of full-blooded Creeks from Indian Territory conferred with Acting Secretary of the Interior Ryan and protested against the division of their lands in severalty and other work now being done by the Dawes five civilized tribes commission. To Subsidize Sugar.

Kingston, Jamaica, Aug. 16.—The government has decided, with the sanction of the imperial authorities, to further the establishment of several large, central sugar factories by guaranteeing the interest on the investment for a certain number of years. An expert to advise the Jamaican government is coming from England. On his arrival a conference with the planters will be held. Opinions are divided as to whether American or British machinery is the best. The larger section of the planters believe the former is the least expensive and more efficient. The hope is expressed that American manufacturers will send representatives to the conference.

MOBILE CUT OFF

Isolated By the Big Gulf Storm of Thursday

HIGH WATER LIMIT REACHED

Western Union Office Abandoned and All Communication Cut Off—Business District Entirely Deserted—Great Damage in Kentucky.

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 16.—The tropical storm which has been raging along the gulf coast for two days last night, completely isolated the city of Mobile, Ala., from the outside world. It is known that great damage has been done along the water front in Mobile, but whether there has been loss of life or not is mere conjecture. Nothing has been heard from the country south of Mobile up to the time the last wire to Mobile failed.

At half-past 4 in the afternoon the Western Union office in Mobile was abandoned, the water at that time being three feet deep in the operating room.

Two hours later communication was had for a few minutes with Mobile. The Associated Press operator there had made his way to the operating room in a boat. He took up his position on top of the switchboard, several feet above the flooded office, and detaching the Associated Press wire from its place in the board, sent this message:

"Am on top of the switchboard here with a lineman. The water is over three feet deep in this room and it is still rising. The wind is blowing at the rate of 50 miles an hour, and we look for worse things. The business district is deserted."

Here the wire failed and nothing more could be heard from it, although the most persistent efforts were made.

The water at 3 p. m. was reported as high as in the great flood of 1893, although at that time the wind was not as high. From Mobile to Fort Morgan is a distance of 35 miles, and on both sides of the bay summer resorts and summer houses are located. These were, it is believed, in the direct path of the storm. The telegraph line to Fort Morgan runs around the bay through the country and covers 85 miles before it reaches the government reservation.

It is feared there has been loss of life on the islands in Mississippi sound, just outside of the bar, below Fort Morgan.

These islands, which are inhabited by French fishermen, rise only four or five feet above the water under ordinary stage, and were the scene of great loss of life in 1893.

Wires are down between Mobile and all points west. Nothing can be heard from over-due Louisville & Nashville trains.

The Western Union Telegraph officials have been advised that the water has entered their office in Mobile. It is two blocks away from the wharf and one block nearer the business section of the city than the Cotton Exchange.

Twenty miles of Louisville & Nashville through the Tensas swamp is reported under water. All trains have been abandoned.

One train is reported lost, but it is only believed to have been tied up between two washouts.

MORE FLOODS REPORTED.

Tennessee River Now on a Disastrous Rampage.

High water is doing much damage throughout east Tennessee and probably in the coal regions. An avalanche of water, covering about 50 acres from 10 to 30 feet deep, rests against a railroad embankment at Coal Creek. It is feared this will break, and this would mean the loss of much property. The houses in the railroad section of the town are flooded. A number of branch roads and side tracks for coal mines are reported washed away. All the trains are late on account of the flood damage. A cave-in occurred near London, on the Southern main line, last night, delaying all trains.

Cumberland Out of Its Banks.

Burnside, Ky., Aug. 16.—The highest water every known in this locality in August is raging here. The Cumberland river has 50 feet in the channel, overflowing the banks and doing great damage to crops on the bottoms. It has been raining steadily for 96 hours. The Buffalo Tie Co. lost 6,000 ties by the breaking of one of the booms on Caney branch; also five large barges, valued at $12,000. The steamer Cumberland broke from its moorings and floated down the river. Twenty thousand logs have come down the river in the last 12 hours.

Safe at Galveston.

Galveston, Tex., Aug. 16.—The gulf storm, which has been reported by the weather bureau since Wednesday, has been watched closely here. The hurricane signal is flying here as a warning to shipping, but the weather bureau has been emphatic that the storm would strike inland to the east of Galveston. The tide here last night was normal and no uneasiness is felt for Galveston island.

Their Awful Fate.

Cleveland, Aug. 16.—The bodies of Andrew Kest, John Euging and Alec Snigle, three of the unfortunates caught in the crib fire, are said to be in the tunnel beneath the bottom of the lake. They have not been heard of, and if their bodies are at the bottom of the tunnel it will be months before they can be recovered, as the tunnel has been flooded with water.

She had no strength or vigor and suffered great distress from her stomach, but she tried Electric Bitters which helped her at once, and after using four bottles, she is entirely well, can eat anything. It's a great tonic and its gentle laxative qualities are splendid for torpid liver." For Indigestion, Loss of Appetite, Stomach and Liver troubles it's a positive, guaranteed cure. Only 50c. at C. A. THE MEN WILL OBEY

Joliet Steel Workers Will Stand By Shaffer's Order

ENTIRE PLANT IS CLOSED

Expected That Similar Action Will Be Taken at Milwaukee, As Their Contract is the Same—Shaffer Pleased by Action of Men at Joliet.

Joliet, Ill., Aug. 16.—The four lodges of the Amalgamated association employes of the Illinois Steel Co. at the Joliet mills, by a unanimous vote, decided last night to obey the strike order of President Shaffer. The conference was in session from 3 o'clock in the afternoon until 9 o'clock at night before the decision was reached. The steel mills were closed at noon to enable the members of the association to attend the meeting, which was called by National Secretary Tighe, after his arrival here in the morning. He was accompanied by Vice-President Davis of the fourth district. Both men presented the side of the association to the local members. It was argued that in order to secure the organization of non-union workers in the east, it was essential that the western men would have to join the strike movement. Mr. Tighe also appealed to the fealty of the men to the association; he urged them to be men and stand by their union. His remarks were received with enthusiasm and presaged the vote that followed.

This action will close the entire steel plant here, throwing out of employment nearly 3,000 men. Fires were drawn last night.

The Joliet men had the same contract with the Illinois Steel Co. as the South Chicago workers, who refused to listen to the arguments of Secretary Tighe. Mr. Tighe will leave for Milwaukee today.

Trying to Settle.

Pittsburg, Pa., Aug. 16.—Once more there are efforts afoot to settle the strike being waged against the United States steel corporation by the Amalgamated Association of Wire, Steel & Tinworkers, but their success is problematical. Neither side will admit there has been a single step toward bringing about a reapproachment or that there is any prospect of an exchange of peace proposals. During the day the strikers kept a close watch on the plants that are being operated with non-union men and also kept alert pickets around the Carnegie plants and the works that are completely closed down. There were few developments, and except in the instances enumerated there have been no changes in the general situation. Good order was general throughout all the strike districts.

Want Protocol Signed.

Washington, Aug. 16.—The state department is awaiting a reply from Mr. Rockhill as to the date of the signing of the protocol, as the disposal of this subject will pave the way to taking up the question of new commercial treaties with China and facilitate other important details in execution of the protocol. Whether the present treaty relations with China are sufficient or an entirely new fabric will be required depends considerably upon the terms of the protocol. It is expected that this document will be forwarded by mail by Mr. Rockhill, and not until it is in hand will the authorities here feel like reaching a final determination as to the scope of negotiations on such new commercial treaty relations as may become desirable. The protocol itself appears to contemplate the creation of an international board, to sit probably at Shanghai, and to have charge of certain details of commercial relations between the powers and China. But it is expected the powers will further consider the question of forming this board before it is actually brought into existence.

Pennsylvania Democrats.

Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 16.—The democratic state convention yesterday nominated Judge Harman Yerkes of Doylestown for supreme court judge and Representative Andrew J. Palm of Meadville for state treasurer. The platform makes no reference to Wm. J. Bryan or national affairs, being confined entirely to state issues. In the closing moments of the convention resolutions were adopted, without debate and by a practically unanimous vote, which will have the effect of blocking any effort that may be contemplated looking to the withdrawal of the candidate for state treasurer and the substitution of an anti-Quay republican on a fusion ticket.

Was a Big Deal.

Bethlehem, Pa., Aug. 16.—The stockholders of the Bethlehem Iron Co. has voted almost unanimously to accept the price of $7,500,000 offered by the Bethlehem Steel Co. for the big steel and ordnance works here, and an hour later the directors consummated the deal. The steel company, it is said, has a purchaser for the plant, and it is generally believed that this purchaser is Mr. Charles M. Schwab, president of the United States steel corporation, and it is also believed that he will buy the property of the Vickers-Maxim Co. and the Cramp Shipbuilding Co. The works employ 4,000 skilled mechanics.

Corn King's Affairs.

Chicago, Aug. 16.—Under proceedings in involuntary bankruptcy, the Chicago Title & Trust Co. has been appointed temporary receiver for the Geo. H. Phillips Grain Co. Bond in the sum of $100,000 was given. John S. Goodwin, attorney for Mr. Phillips, states that the latter will not oppose the receivership.

Ten Years' Trial

The Story of a Soldier's Struggle

By Brigadier General Charles King

Copyright, 1901, by Charles King

One evening, hardly a week after Melville had gone, three of them came to see him. "Cap," they said, was going to quit. He had been so quizzed and criticised for letting the strikers get away with their guns that he couldn't stand the pressure. The lieutenants were green, and wouldn't Mr. Langdon come round to the armory two evenings a week and drill them? Now, Langdon had been planning a course of reading in the library of the Young Men's Christian association, but the rifles were importunate. Something might come of it, and he consented. Eighteen men appeared the first night —Tuesday—and 38 the second—Friday. One of the lieutenants was the son of the leading banker of Brentwood, the other a young lawyer. Both greeted him civilly and sat and watched his work with absorbing interest. The third night "Cap" came round and looked on. Forty-four men were in ranks—twice as many as he could ever scrape together for drill—and, though he shook hands with Langdon during a rest, and said he found his business required all his time and attention and therefore he had concluded to resign, his manner lacked cordiality. Two weeks later a committee waited on Langdon to know if he would accept the command of the company if elected, and after an exchange of letters between himself and Channing Langdon said that, if unanimously chosen and the lieutenants waived promotion, he would serve. Then it got into the papers. The members of the company, as a rule, were young clerks, bookkeepers and salesmen, highly intelligent and full of enthusiasm, but their hapless experience had made them the laughing stock of the street boys, the railway shop men and the vagabond class of the community as well as of certain envious fellow citizens. "Tin soldiers," they were called, when all that was needed to make them a force to be dreaded by lawbreakers was a captain who knew his business, could command their respect and teach them steadiness, drill and discipline. Lieutenant Perrigo was presiding at the meeting when a sergeant arose and in a caustic speech pointed out their needs and defects and, saying there was just one man in the community capable of doing them justice, proposed that the captaincy be tendered to Mr. Eric Langdon, whereat the whole meeting, barring its presiding officer, sprang to its feet and cheered. There was not a dissenting voice, and 49 members were present.

Yet within a week the Brentwood Banner began publishing insidious little paragraphs. "It is understood that the rifles contemplate a ch[illegible] in the captaincy. What has Brent[illegible] done that several capable officers s[illegible] overlooked and the command t[illegible] to a kicked out captain from the army?" was the first specimen. The Examiner asked if the rifles expected to add to their popularity by putting at their head a man who would have slaughtered a score of fellow citizens but for the prompt and merciful intervention of local officials. The Examiner was supporting the sheriff for reelection, and this official well knew the paragraph to be utterly unjust and untrue, but he couldn't quarrel with his bread and butter, and it was best to admit tacitly, now that the danger was over, that he had actually interposed in behalf of the strikers. At all events, he did nothing to cause its correction. The Brentwood Sun (Populist) said if anything was needed to add to the contempt in which the rifles were held it was the rumor that they had tendered the command to an ex-officer of the army whose drunken folly was so near to costing scores of precious lives not a fortnight since. And Langdon, who stood ready to devote valuable time and energy to the public service, with little hope of any reward whatever, read these insidious attacks with infinite pain and sense of wrong and injustice, against which he stood powerless. Other influences, too, were evidently at work. The election, which was to have taken place the first Monday in January, was postponed a fortnight. Boniface, Eric's friend of the Brentwood, took him aside and advised him to withdraw his name. The committee, on the contrary, had begged him to "stand pat." Meantime Langdon continued drilling and instructing the company, and two nights a week the armory was crowded with citizens whose interest had been aroused and who came to look on. Veteran soldiers, G. A. R. men, went away saying that fellow knew his trade up to the handle. Prominent business men looked on silently and did a good deal of thinking as they strolled homeward. Newspaper reporters, previously instructed, wrote scathing or satirical paragraphs about martinet mannerisms, imported instructors, dismissed drillmasters and the like, and Eric, proud, sad, sensitive, would gladly have given up and shut himself in his sooty den at the yards but for a letter from Melville, to whom he had sent all the papers. "Stick to it, Langdon," he said. "The time will come when the very papers that abuse you now will have to change their tune." This was what the major's letter said, but not the major's hand. His eyes still felt the force of that cruel blow, and Ethel Grahame was his amanuensis. "I have faith in your future," said he. "So have I," in tiny letters wrote the amanuensis "E. G."

And so, despite the warning of mine host of the Brentwood, Langdon stood for election the third Monday in January and was beaten 50 to 10, the second lieutenant and son of Brentwood's richest banker being the successful competitor. "A Merited Rebuke," referring to Langdon, said The Sun; "A Merited Promotion," referring to Perrigo junior, a boy of 22, said The Banner; "A Foregone Conclusion," said The Examiner. But it was noticeable that the last two named refrained from further active abuse of Langdon. The object of the magnates was accomplished in compassing the defeat of what The Sun called his "aspirations." Down in their hearts both editors and magnates realized that Langdon was a wronged and injured man. It wouldn't do to say so, of course, yet he had checked that mob at a moment when its triumph meant the birth of a reign of terror in Brentwood. He alone had stood between them and anarchy. They bowed to the behest of the Seattle because it practically owned them. The editor of The Banner met Langdon at the Brentwood two days later, stopped, stammered and held out his hand. "Mr. Langdon, my name's Armstrong," said he. "I'm managing editor of The Banner, and I thought I'd like to say to you that I—I personally don't approve of the attitude my paper has had to assume in your case. I suppose you know the papers have to carry out certain lines of policy and sometimes attack men whom the editors would much rather befriend."

Langdon turned very white. His hand naturally had been extended to accept that of the stranger—it is the American fashion—but now it was withdrawn. His lips quivered a bit, but his eyes never flinched from their gaze straight into those of the journalist.

"I have no use whatever for the friendship of a man who will privately assure me of his good will," said he, "and publicly defame me." Then he turned his back on him and walked away.

Boniface saw the whole thing and gasped. Sherwood, clerk at the desk, and Bingham, Brentwood's mayor, were also witnesses, and the story spread. Here was a man who not only wasn't afraid of a mob, but even dared the press, and the man who can do that in this land of freedom takes his life in his hands.

"You've cooked your goose," said Boniface sadly, for he had grown to like Langdon more than a little and to feel for him deeply in his loneliness. "You've made an enemy of the most powerful newspaper man west of Omaha."

But he hadn't. Armstrong was poor; he was the servant of the stockholders and they of the Seattle; he couldn't afford to throw up his job and see his wife and children suffer, but he had a conscience. He knew that Langdon was right and The Banner wrong. He was cut to the quick by Langdon's contempt, but the man in him overcame the sense of indignity, and, putting himself in Langdon's place and asking himself what he would have felt and said, he went back to his office raging, not at Langdon, but at fate. He had seen much of Melville during that officer's brief stay; he knew his reputation and the story of his spotless life and soldierly career; he knew of Melville's sympathy for Langdon and had heard Melville's high encomium of Langdon as an officer and a gentleman; he was filled with admiration of Langdon's conduct at the time of the riots and had then referred to him in terms of unstinted praise; but, that danger ended, The Banner had to return to the paths of policy dictated by its owners. He actually thought that his assurance of personal liking for Langdon ought to compensate for the harsh things said of him in The Banner and was stung when it didn't. But at heart he could not but admire Langdon for his square, straightforward response. It was a revelation, an eye opener. It set him to thinking of the other side, not the paper side, of the question, and then he wished that he had that month to live over again. There should be no more abuse of Langdon in The Banner if he could help it.

And so there was a certain reaction in favor of Langdon. Some of the rifles resigned their warrants, secured their discharges and then set to work to raise another company for Langdon to drill. The men were easily found. Seventy stalwart young fellows signed the petition and brought it to Langdon to add his name. Then it went to the governor. There were vacancies in the regiment. A company was mustered in at Neosha; another, made up mainly of farmer boys, at Gunnison Junction. But some strange, occult influence seemed against the would be Brentwood Light guard. The petition hung fire. State Senator Suplee and Representative Carter said that they would see to it that the Light guard was duly admitted, but they didn't. Meantime the rifles prospered, as a social organization at least; took in a number of honorary members at $50 apiece, got a "swell" uniform, gave a series of most successful dancing parties and what they termed exhibition drills, where the clockwork precision with which some 30 of their number executed the loadings and firings in unison evoked tumultuous applause. It prompted the rifles to issue a challenge to all comers west of the Mississippi and east of the mountains to compete for a valuable prize at the Exposition building in April, the anniversary of their muster in, and the next thing the rifles knew Eric Langdon was going down to Gunnison twice a week to coach the Gunnison Grays, Company K, Fourth Nebraska, and Brentwood, which had refused to avail itself of his services, was properly

"What's the matter?" asked Mrs. Rox.

The Unicorn.

Chinese annals of great antiquity contain numerous detailed accounts of the supposedly fabulous unicorn, in which the description are identical with those handed down from the earliest times in the mythology or occidental countries. From this it is inferred that at some time in the remote past there actually did exist a single horned equine or cervine animal of some sort.

AN OCEAN CEMETERY.

THE MOST DEADLY TRAP FOR SHIPS IN ALL THE WORLD.

Bare, Bleak and Treeless Quessant, the Notorious Island of Terror, and the [illegible] Forests That Supply It W[illegible] d In Plenty.

F[illegible] the Atlantic ocean, off the northern French coast, almost due west from Brest, lies a great rocky island that is one of the most deadly traps for ships in all the world. It is the island of Quessant, the notorious Ile de l'Epouvante, the island of terror. Bare, without a tree to break its monotony, it lies in the path of the ships seeking the English channel. If they steer too far north, the hundred shoals and reefs of the British coast open their jaws for them. If they sail too far south, Quessant reaches for their bones.

Bleak and far away from any other land as the island of terror is, it still has its population. What mysterious thing is it which attracts that population and makes it cling? The infrequent visitor sees funny flocks of little sheep, scarcely twice as large as hares. He sees small herds of rough coated ponies almost as tiny as the sheep. These are the only signs of productive industry to be seen. There is fishing, of course, but fishing can be prosecuted better from the mainland, with less risk and a more convenient market.

What is the mysterious attraction, then? So asked Alexander Shuette, the traveler, when he made his way from the coast of Brittany to Quessant. The answer came, at least in part, one evening when a great storm swept in from the Atlantic and beat at the shores with unexampled fury.

He says: "The daughter of my hostess led me up the narrow staircase to my room. As I ascended I noticed, without remarking the oddity of it at the time, that the staircase was of shining oak. I was ushered into my room, a large, low chamber, completely paneled from top to bottom. Putting the lamp on a huge oak table that shone like a mirror, she said:

"'If you should need more firewood, monsieur, you will find it in the next room. Do not spare it. It is bitter cold, and there will be more than enough firewood in Quessant in two or three days. Good night.'

"I sat down before the blazing fire and prepared for a cozy evening. The storm raged in the narrow streets of the little village. The surges thundered against the granite breast of the coast like endless artillery fire, and sometimes I imagined that the very island trembled under the onslaught of the hundreds of millions of tons of water.

"As I sat listening I gazed into the flames. The wood struck me as strange. And then I wondered. On the entire island there is not a single tree, and yet I had been told not to spare firewood. 'There will be more than enough in two or three days.'

"I arose and opened the door into the next room. That room was possibly 20 feet high and was filled almost to the top with timber. First with wonder, then with growing awe, I gazed at the piles of wood. Truly she was right, the little maid, when she said that one need not be economical with firewood on the island of Quessant. There were timbers of every shape—splintered masts and spars, planks from decks and sides, remnants of a steering wheel, benches from the forecastle, yellow, black, brown, white and red woods, even two figureheads, some bright, as if they were new, some crusted with shells and hung with seaweeds. In the entire room there was not a piece of wood that did not come from some wrecked ship.

"When I returned to my room, I took the lamp and examined the place closely. I noticed a strange, delicate, yet very insistent fragrance—sandalwood. Thick wooden pillars supported the ceiling. They were of a beautiful dull black—ebony, as I lived. The panels were rosewood, mahogany and cedar. Even an unpracticed eye could see that all these precious woods once had ornamented the cabins of noble ships. The heavy carved chairs, the polished oaken table, even the bed in which I was to sleep all came from shipwrecks.

"Now I understood the meaning of the words 'stand rights.' In favor of this island, far away from the world and murderous for the ships that tie the world together, Æolus, with his bride of the winds, is more fruitful than is Ceres to the mainlands, with her harvest moon and her blessings of fruit. The blessings of Quessant come from the gale.

"The forests of Quessant! Are there such others in the entire world, so unique, so terrible? This forest, instead of trees, has the mighty masts of ships. In that tremendous forest are the oaks and pines of Canada and Maine, the cypress of Florida, the baobabs of Africa, the teak of Hindustan, the ebony and sandalwood of South America. The awful forests of Quessant form the visible apex of a vast cemetery that stretches from New York to Cape La Hague."

The Hostess' Funny Story.

"A very dignified young man took a seat in a smoking car," said the hostess, who joined in the after dinner story telling. "Near him were three traveling salesmen, well dressed, jolly fellows, one of whom suggested a game of cards, and the others agreed. They appealed to the young man to take part and make up a four handed game.

"'Thank you; I never play cards,' came the response to the invitation.

"'I am sorry for that. Will you have a cigar with us?' added the spokesman, producing his case.

"'I am obliged to you, but I never smoke,' replied the dignified young man.

"They thought they would jolly the young fellow out of dignity, so the leader produced a 'traveling companion' and asked:

"'As you do not play cards nor smoke you will not refuse to join us in a drink?'

"'I thank you, gentlemen, but I never drink.'

"With this a venerable man with ministerial aspect sitting in the seat behind the young man reached forward and tapped him on the shoulder.

"'I have heard what you have said to these men,' said the sedate old fellow, 'and I admire you for the stability of character which has enabled you to shun bad habits. I have a daughter in the parlor car, whom I should like to have you meet.'

"'I thank you, sir,' replied the young man, turning about and facing the gentleman, 'but the fact is I never intend to marry.'"—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Skeleton In the Closet.

The original of the singular saying, "A skeleton in the closet," which is found in almost every language in Europe, is found in one of those curious collections of stories which the monks of the middle ages were fond of making both for their own amusement and for the instruction of youth. In one of these collections, compiled by an unknown hand about the middle of the tenth century, there is a story of a wealthy lady who, having a secret grief, confided it to a friend who was apparently a perfectly happy woman. She was the wife of a nobleman who lived in his castle in the south of France. She and her husband were outwardly on the most loving terms. Not a care cloud seemed to cast a shadow on her path.

After hearing the story of her afflicted friend the noble lady took her by the hand and led her to a secret chamber adjoining her bedroom, there opened the door of a closet and exposed a skeleton. "Know, my friend," she said, "no one is happy. Every day I am forced by my husband to kiss this grinning death head, which is that of a gentleman who was my husband's rival and whom I would have married had not my parents willed otherwise."

A Simple, Bashful Maid.

"I am glad your name is Mary," said Mr. Slowcoach to his sweetheart, whom he had been courting for several years.

"Why so?"

"Because I was reading today and came across a line which said, 'Mary is the sweetest name that woman ever bore.'"

"That is poetically expressed. I've heard my father say it to my mother, whose name is Mary. It is from some poet, isn't it?"

"I believe so."

"But I have also heard my father say that there was even a sweeter name than Mary."

"I think he must have been mistaken," said the lover as he tenderly pressed his sweetheart's hand.

"No; I do not think he was mistaken."

"What was the other name?"

A beautiful blush suffused the charming maiden's cheek, the silken lashes fell and veiled the lovely eyes, and in a tone as soft as the whisperings of an Æolian harp she murmured:

"Wife."

Unclaimed Moneys.

Nearly every bank of old establishment has on deposit sums of unclaimed money. The aggregate of all these sums, if it could be told, would astonish the world. These moneys in the Bank of England are estimated variously, some placing the aggregate amount at less than $500,000 and some at many times that sum. In the Bank of England, as in all banks in this country and in England, the total amount is made up of small sums. According to law, the Bank of England should give public access to the list of such lost moneys, whereas it never does anything of the sort. When challenged, it invites legal action, but no one cares for a legal contest with the Bank of England, so the question never is faced.

How do these unclaimed moneys accumulate? Largely through the omission of stockholders to claim dividends and through the fact that many people die without leaving behind them a strict account of their investments.

She Was the Ghost.

"A certain lady and her family," says Sir Mountstuart Grant-Duff in his "Diary," "hired a place in Scotland which was haunted by the ghost of a woman who was to be seen constantly at night wandering through the rooms and passages. When the family arrived, the lady was much struck with the place and said, 'I must have been here before, for I know this place so well, only there ought to be two rooms here, and there is only one.'

"The agent replied that within a few weeks the owner had caused a partition to be taken down and made the two rooms into one. Still the lady was puzzled at her knowledge of the place, till she remembered that it was a house she used to go to in her dreams.

"Well, some time passed, and the agent was up at the house again, when the lady complained that one part of the contract had not been fulfilled. They had hired a house and a ghost for the summer, and no ghost had she seen. The agent replied: 'Of course not, because you are the ghost. We recognized you the moment we saw you.'"

Short and Sweet.

Perhaps one of the shortest courtships was that of an eminent jurist. He was on his way to hold court in a town when he met a young woman returning from market.

"How deep is the creek and what did you get for your butter?" asked the judge.

"Up to the knee and ninepence," was the answer as the girl walked on.

The judge pondered over the sensible brevity of the reply, turned his horse, rode back and overtook her.

"I liked your answer just now," he said, "and I like you. I think you would make a good wife. Will you marry me?"

She looked him over and said, "Yes."

"Then get up behind me, and we will ride to town and be married."

She did get up behind, and they rode to the courthouse and were made one. It is recorded that, brief though the courtship had been, the marriage proved a pre-eminently happy one.

A Remarkable Suicide.

The king was attacked by a Mohammedan force, and, finding resistance impossible, he assembled his family and principal officers, and after addressing them and intimating his determination never to accept Mohammedanism and inviting those who did not agree with him to go away he applied a light to a large quantity of gunpowder collected for the purpose and blew into atoms the palace and all who were in it.

According to the confession of a man named Medler, who is dying with consumption in a Cincinnati hospital, the supposed accidental death of Edward Grossman, of Manchester, April 31, who was found on the railroad track with his skull crushed in, was really a murder. Grossman was at that time employed in a paper mill at Franklin, Ohio, and according to Medler's story, incurred the enmity of some of the other employes. He says they placed a rope around his neck and bumped his head against an iron shafting until the skull was crushed, then they placed the body on the railroad track, to give apperance of an accident. A detective of Cincinnati, has arrested Geo. Stag, of Franklin, O., whom they think is connected with the case.

MARRIAGE

GLENN R. JACKSON

To Miss Josephine Power, a Young Lady prominent in Society in That place. Mr. and Mrs. Jackson to make their Home in Wabash.

At 11 o'clock this morning Miss Josephine Power and Mr. Glenn R. Jackson were united in marriage by the Rev. Father Boeckelam. The ceremony, very quiet and simple, was preformed at the Catholic parsonage with no guests present save Miss Alice and Mr. Charles Power, sister and brother of the bride. A wedding lunch was served at 12 o'clock at the home of the brides sister, Mrs. E. K. Simons, 817 Franklin street. Mr. and Mrs. Jackson left for Goshen at 2 o'clock, in this manner escaping the party of young people who were anxiously waiting for their appearance at the Big Four depot. They took the Big Four out of Goshen for Wabash, where they intend making their future home, Mr. Jackson goes with the Fawley & Holdermann dry goods firm, with whom he has held the position of a confidential clerk since their starting in business in this city. He will hold the same position with them in their new business relations. Mrs. Jackson has for the past three years until recently been with the Warren Hill & Co. dry goods house as cashier. Both young people are honored by an exceptionally large circle of friends, who feel sincere regret in having them sever their social relations here, but at the same time congratulate the young people of Wabash upon gaining them in their circles. They are among the most popular of Elkhart's young people and have the united congratulations and well wishes of old and young alike.—Elkhart Daily Truth.

A GOOD CHANCE

MAIL BOX FACTORY

The Concern is now Employing 40 Men and Increasing all The Time.

The Mail Box Factory, at Adrian, will move to Tecumseh without a bonus if an amount of capital stock is subscribed to buy out the present stockholders in Adrian and now the question is, will Tecumseh take this stock? The firm has not enough room in Adrian to do the present work let alone the increase which is coming every day and Tecumseh men who have investigated the plant, claim all it says regarding the business is true and in fact the report of the manager is conservative in every way.

A meeting of business men will be held this afternoon, at which time the proposition will be decided. Now is a chance for capitalists to secure a good per cent on their money at once and it would be well for them to investigate before investing in cement stock and other things of which nothing here is known. No doubt the stock will be sold and the factory located here as a number of our moneyed men said they would assist in any way possible.

The beauty thief has come to stay,
Unless you drive the pimples and blackheads away;
Do this; don't look like a fright;
Take Rocky Mountain-Tea to-night

SWICK-RETAN-HATT

Reunion Held at the Home of Mr. And Mrs. John Cadmus in Raisin Wednesday, Aug. 14.

The 14th annual reunion of the above named families was held at the pleasant home of Mr. and Mrs. John Cadmus, near Tecumseh, Wednesday, Aug. 14, 1901, and although the weather was so dry and the roads so dusty, about one hundred and fifty were present, many of whom had driven long distances in order to attend.

The president, C. F. Southworth, called company to order and asked Rev. D. H Yokum, of Ridgeway, to offer prayer. Frank Davidson in a few well chosen remarks gave a hearty welcome to all and M. E. Swick responded in behalf of the company. The historian for the year, being absent, his report was read by M. E. Swick, giving a concise record of the births, deaths and marriages that had occurred during the year.

At this point dinner was announced and soon the happy crowd was seated about the well laden tables spread under canvas on the spacious lawn and judging from the way the victuals disappeared, we conclude that each one had been saving his appetite for several days.

The president again called order and announced music by an orchestra composed of Harlow, Wilford, Lloyd and Theda Schomp. Their selection so pleased the audience that they were compelled to respond to an encore. Officers for the next year were chosen as follows:

Pres.—C. F. Southworth
Vice Pres.—Wm. B. Swick
Sec'y—C. I. Swick
Treas.—J. R. Vine
Historian—M. E. Swick.

This completed the regular business, the remaining time being given to visiting.

Ice cream was served during the afternoon and at about four o'clock the company began to depart for their homes Mr. and Mrs. Cadmus were model entainers and to their efforts the company are indebted for the success of the reunion. It was decided to meet next year at Fruit Ridge.

LITERARY NOTES.

In the August Review of Reviews Dr. Shaw discusses the great steel strike in its aspects and comments on many other matters of current interest at home and abroad. M. de Bloch's recent address at Paris on the lessons of the Boer war is reviewed, and its application to the military situation in the Uuited States, as well as in Europe, is pointed out.

* * *

The Pilgrim for August begins a thrilling story of love and political conspiracy in Spain, entitled "The Velvet Glove" by Henry Seton Merriman, author of "The Sowers," "The Isle of Unrest." and other successful romances. Byron W. Holt, the statistical expert of the New York Reform Club, writes of the Billion Dollar Steel Trust, Rev. Jenkin Lloyd Jones describes The Congress of Religions and Samuel E. Moffett tells of some interesting incidents in the Strenuous Newspaper Life. The culmination of the yatching season is recognized by a brilliant cover, and a strikingly illustrated article by Ducan Curry. The home departments, short fiction and art features of the number show a distinct advance over its predecessors.

* * *

The illustrated articles, which commonly formsuch a feature of The Critic, are not in this issue in any way lacking. The most engaging of these are Mr. Clive Holland's "A Pilgrimage to Wessex" and a series of portraits of the Marchioness of Grandy with introductory note by Mr. Christian Brinton. Mr. Holland knows the Thomas Hardy country from end to end, and his article, which describes the scenes of "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," "Far from the Madding Crowd," "Two on a Tower," "The Mayor of Casterbridge," and other novels, is not only illustrated by many photographs, but bears the further endorsement of Mr. Hardy's personal approval.

A MATTER OF FAITH.

Our religious opinions are, as a whole, a matter of faith. Whatever denomination or sect we follow we pin our faith on the words and teachings of our pastor. His sincerity is never doubted; that he thoroughly believes his adopted creed is unquestioned. The opinions of the clergy on any subject carry well deserved weight with all classes of people. Many reverend gentleman in Michigan are testifying for the little conqueror, their praise is not given lightly and only after personal experience. Gratitude and a desire to promote the welfare of the public brings such testimony as follows:

The Rev. F. A. Smith, of 829 First street, Kalamazoo, Mich. says: "When I procured Doan's Kidney Pills I was, at the time, and had been considerably troubled with my kidneys. Backache was quite pronounced, being especially severe when I sat or stood in a stooped position for any length of time. Other symptons usually attending disordered kidneys plainly indicated what caused the difficulty. Doan's Kidney Pills corrected the annoyance in a very short time and I have not noticed, up to date any indication of a recurrence. As I took no other medicine there can be no doubt but Doan's Kidney Pills were the direct means of curing me. I am most favorably impressed with them.

Doan's Kidney Pills for sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

THREE SIMPLE QUESTIONS.

And the Librarian Could Not Answer One of Them.

One day two well dressed young women approached the desk of the reading room of a big library. One of them took a memorandum from her pocketbook.

"Can you tell me how many yards—oh, that's the wrong list!" she said, hastily bringing forth another slip of paper. "Here it is. Will you please tell me who is Rudyard Kipling's favorite author?"

"I am unable to tell you, never having heard that he had one," admitted one of the librarians.

"Dear me!" said the young woman irritably. "It is one of the questions for our next club meeting. Well, which one of Thackeray's books brought him the most income?"

"That you can probably find out by consulting a book, the number of which I will give you," said the official.

"Oh, I can't stop to look it up!" she said hurriedly. "I thought you could tell me at once. Well, there's one more thing. Bessie Cummock, my cousin in Manchester, had a splendid book when I was there last year for anecdotes of famous people. I can't remember the name of it or who wrote it, but it was about so big"—illustrating with one finger on the desk—"and it has a dark green cover. Now, can you tell me what it is? Some day when I have time I would like to get it out. Of course you must have it in the library?"

For the third time the official was obliged to confess his inability to give her direct information. She looked at him with a piercing gaze and turned away, saying audibly to her companion:

"There, that just shows what all this talk about their being examined for positions in libraries amounts to! Three perfectly simple questions, all on literary subjects, and he couldn't answer one of them!"—Savings Journal.

Fidgety

people are lacking in nervous strength. The weak, care-worn, melancholy, headachy, and low-spirited men and women are easily excited, impatient, fidgety, and unable to sleep at night. Worn-out nerves must be built up, and the vitality of the whole system replenished before relief can come.

"The least bit of noise or sudden jar would nearly drive me crazy, and I was just too fidgety for anything. I was so nervous that I could not rest or sleep. The first dose of Dr. Miles' Nervine brought me sleep, and after that I got well fast."

Abraham Lincoln.

This Lincoln of the black loam, who built his neighbor's cabin and hoed his neighbor's corn, who had been storekeeper and postman and flatboatman, who had followed a rough justice round a rough circuit, who had rolled a local bully in the dirt, rescued women from insult, tended the bedside of many a sick coward who feared the judgment, told coarse stories on barrels by candlelight (but these are pure beside the vice of great cities), who addressed political mobs in the raw, swooping down from the stump and flinging embroilers east and west—the physician who was one day to tend the sickbed of the nation in her agony, whose large hand was to be on her feeble pulse and whose knowledge, almost divine, was to perform the miracle of her healing.—Winston Churchill's "The Crisis."

A Chinese Joke.

There was a man in Ch'ang-an who was very fond of giving dinners, but the food given was atrocious. One day a guest threw himself on his knees in front of this gentleman and said, "Am I not a friend of yours?"

"You are, indeed," replied his host.

"Then I must ask of you a favor," said the guest, "and you must grant it before I rise from my knees."

"Well, what is it?" inquired his host in astonishment.

"Never to invite me to dinner any more," cried the guest, at which the whole party burst into a loud roar of laughter.—North China Herald.

Not Fordable.

During one of his expeditions in the Philippines General Lawton came across the trail of a party of Filipinos, which he followed for several days with a small body of troops. One day he and his staff reached the top of a small eminence and saw a river stretching below them but a short distance ahead. Turning to one of his aids, the general said, "Lieutenant, ride ahead and see if that river is fordable."

The lieutenant put spurs to his horse and soon entered the river. A few feet from the shore the bottom shelved off suddenly, and the horse was soon floundering in deep water. The lieutenant disengaged himself and swam to the shore, which the horse also reached in a short time. After a brief chase, to the amusement of the general and the staff, the horse was recaptured, and, mounting him, the lieutenant rode back. His khaki uniform was soaked and bedraggled, and the water spurted from the tops of his military boots at every jump of his horse. Riding up to the general, he gravely saluted and said, "I have the honor to report, sir, that the river is not fordable."

Lawton looked at him a moment trying to maintain the dignity of his position, but the situation was too ludicrous for him. He burst into a hearty laugh, in which the staff joined at the expense of the young lieutenant, who, however, tells the story on himself.

A Fish With Teeth on His Tongue.

The biggest of fresh water fishes, the "arapaima" of the Amazon, in South America, which grows to six feet in length, has teeth on its tongue, so that the latter resembles the file and is used as such. Some kinds of trout also have the same peculiarity. Fishes that swallow their prey entire have their teeth so supported on flexible bases as to bend backward, but not forward, in order that their victims shall not escape after they have been once seized. In ages gone by there were ferocious sharks such as would make a mouthful of you without blinking, 70 feet in length.

Plenty of their teeth have been found which are five inches long, whereas the biggest of the teeth belonging to sharks that exist at the present day are 1½ inches long. Speaking of extinct creatures reminds me to say that all of the early birds—those of early geological times, that is—had teeth, with which they captured the early worms of the same period. Being descendant from reptiles, it is natural that they should possess a dental equipment, but when they ceased to be carnivorous they had no teeth any longer.

Tell the world that you are tired of life, and immediately the world is tired of you.

How It Is Done.

The first object in life with the American people is to "get rich;" the second, how to regain good health. The first can be obtained by energy, honesty and saving; the second, (good health) by using Green's August Flower. Should you be a despondent sufferer from any of the effects of Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Appendicitis, Indigestion, etc., such as Sick Headache, Palpitation of the Heart, Sour Stomach, Habitual Costiveness, Dizziness of the Head, Nervous Prostration, Low Spirits, etc., you need not suffer another day. Two doses of the well known August Flower will relieve you at once. Go to John J. Orr and get a sample bottle free. Regular size, 75 cts. Get Green's Prize Almanac.

A Rat Showed Him a Mine.

The action of a rat led N. R. Ingoldsby to the discovery of a rich gold mine in Arizona. He named the property the Rat Hole mine.

Mr. Ingoldsby had been spending several months near Mammoth, on the San Pedro river, in Arizona. His purpose was to enjoy the hunting and make a collection of the animals and [redacted] This was usually a bit of stone or wood. The culprit he found to be a large rodent of the species known as the trading rat. The habits of the animal made an interesting study for Mr. Ingoldsby, and he often lay awake at night to watch for his visitor.

A silver spoon was missing one morning and in its place was a piece of quartz carrying free gold. This still more excited Mr Ingoldsby's curiosity, and, after several attempts, he succeeded in following the animal to its home. Near by was the ledge from which the gold bearing quartz had been taken. Mr. Ingoldsby made an examination thorough enough to prove that his discovery was of considerable value.—Mexican Herald.

Moral Effect of Pistol Toting.

When a man carries a pistol constantly, slipping it into his pocket every morning and taking it out at night, feeling its constant pressure against his person, these things tend to familiarize his mind with the idea of killing and lowers his conception of the sacredness of human life. What does a man carry a pistol for? To shoot some other man with. The miserable thing is, made expressly to kill human beings. It has no other earthly purpose. What a hardening effect it must have, then, upon the conscience and heart of a man who carries it constantly in his pocket and lives in daily contact with it and with the idea it constantly suggests to his mind! Let us warn young men and old ones not to carry pistols, and then you will avoid doing a rash act.—Marietta (Ga.) Journal.

A man often imagines he has done with a woman when, if he only knew it he is not yet passed through stage I.

SAPOLIO

A Baby's Birth

is very much like the blossoming of a flower. Its beauty and perfection depends entirely upon the care bestowed upon its parent. Expectant mothers should have the tenderest care. They should be spared all worry and anxiety. They should eat plenty of good nourishing food and take gentle exercises. This will go a long way toward preserving their health and their beauty as well as that of the little one to come. But to be absolutely sure of a short and painless labor they should use regularly during the months of gestation. This is a simple liniment, which is to be applied externally. It gives strength and vigor to the muscles and prevents all of the discomforts of pregnancy, which women used to think were absolutely necessary. When Mother's Friend is used there is no danger whatever.

Mother's Friend

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

Set a small box of lime in the pantry, and it will help to keep it dry and the air pure.

Soda should never be used for flannels, and if they are kept in good condition they should be neither mangled nor ironed.

Mud stains can usually be removed from silk by rubbing with a piece of flannel. If the stain proves obdurate, rub with a piece of linen saturated with alcohol.

If your window glass is lacking in brilliancy, clean it with a liquid paste made of alcohol and whiting. A little of this mixture will remove specks and impart a high luster to the glass.

To render feathers white immerse them for a short time in naphtha or benzine. Rinse in a second dish of the same and dry in the open air. Then bleach by exposing in a box to the vapor of burning sulphur in a moist atmosphere.

Good clear starch is easily made. Wet the lump starch with cold water, stir till smooth, pour on boiling water and cook till clear. It takes a quart of boiling water to "clear" two tablespoonfuls of lump starch. If too thick, thin with blued water.

Including the Frame.

His indulgent friends had praised his attempts at painting and drawing to such an extent that the youth really imagined himself to be an artist. His wealthy friends even bought his pictures for considerable sums of money "to encourage him," as they said.

Recently in walking along the Strand in London he was much delighted at seeing one of his pictures, finely framed, in a dealer's window, especially as he was walking with a pretty lady before whom he wished to appear in the best possible light.

And the two entered the shop.

"My good man," said he to the keeper of it, "what is the price of that picture in the window here?"

"Three shillings."

"Great Scott!" cried the artist recoiling.

The shopman, thinking the exclamation to be one of surprise at the high price, added:

"Well, it includes the frame!"—Exchange.

HUSBAND SHOT HER

Then Ran Two Miles and Drowned Himself

WAS HIS SECOND ATTEMPT

Jacob Hense Bought a Revolver at Holly for the Purpose of Killing His Wife—Chased by Officers—She Will Recover.

Fenton, Mich., Aug. 20.—In a fit of temporary insanity, Jacob Hense attempted to shoot his wife yesterday afternoon and started bareheaded for Long lake, where he jumped from a boat and was drowned in about 10 feet of water.

Hense and his wife had quarreled frequently of late, and he attempted to take her life with a revolver, the bullet just grazing her head. She will recover. He left his screaming wife and ran nearly two miles to the lake, closely pursued by the officers.

He entered the thick bushes that line the shore and spectators soon heard the report of a revolver. Hense was next discovered in a row boat some distance from the shore, but refused to return. However, he yelled for help when the boat was overturned. The body was soon recovered. This was the second attempt made by Hense to murder his wife. Several years ago he tried the razor methcl. He also jumped into a lake at that time, but was more fortunate, as he had companions near at hand who effected his rescue. Hense was 40 years of age, a carpenter by trade, and leaves a widow and one daughter.

Killed by Electric Shock.

Lowell, Mich., Aug. 20.—Scott Fox, an employe and assistant to Superintendent Carl S. English of the Municipal Electric Power & Light plant, was killed by an electric shock yesterday morning, received while trimming the arc street lamps. Mr. Fox was about 22 years of age.

There seems to be a fatality in the Fox family. His two brothers have died from accidental and sudden deaths. One fell off a load of dirt, the wagon wheel passing over him, and the other by breaking through the ice and drowning. His parents formerly owned a farm just north of town, but are now residents of Grand Rapids.

All Good Indians Now.

Petoskey, Mich., Aug. 20.—The local railroads have been making good Indians at a lively rate. The G. R. & I. ran over and killed John Kobegish near Bay View and later in the afternoon crushed the life out of Mitchell Nanago at Wequetonsing. Nanago was a young man afraid-of-paying-his-fare, and being put off one train ran in front of another. The Pere Marquette got into the game near Bay Shore about the same time, and sent Joseph Mitchell to the happy hunting grounds. Much criticism is heard of the recklessness of the railroads.

Six Weeks Without Sleep.

Iron Mountain, Mich., Aug. 20.—A strange case of going without sleep was discovered at Quinnesec. Wm. Turgeon, aged 24, came from Crystal Falls to work in the Cundy mines. This was six weeks ago. Since then he has not slept a wink. He says: "I feel tired and sleepy all the time, but cannot sleep. I ache all over, but can get no rest. Doctors have given me drugs, but they have no effect."

Turgeon is from Cornwall, Eng., and has been in this country only three months.

Cherry Pickers Shot.

Alpena, Mich., Aug. 20.—Ludwig Foreking, one of the most prominent German farmers in Alpena county, was arrested charged with shooting three boys. The boys claim they were in his field to pick choke cherries. He appeared and ordered them off. They say he deliberately shot at each one of them. Their wounds are of a serious nature. Foreking put up a strong story of his innocence, but for a time sentiment was strong against him. He will have his trial today.

Preacher Gets Warning.

Owosso, Mich., Aug. 20.—Rev. J. P. Varner, pastor of the First M. E. church, has been prominent in the agitation against the recent harvest festival and against the saloon keepers. Within the last few days he has received two threatening anonymous letters, warning him to desist from attacking the saloonists or he will be roughly handled. Mr. Varner laughs at the letters and says he will keep on. Some of his friends, however, fear for his safety.

Shy on Funds.

Owosso, Mich., Aug. 20.—The coal mines of Shiawassee county are having hard sledding. The miners' labor organization put the Corunna mine permanently out of business and now the Owosso Coal Co. is in straits. The miners have not been paid for several weeks, as it is claimed a sum of money due the new manager, J. C. Edsall of Fenton, was not turned over. Mr. Edsall says he has pacified the miners, who quit work a week ago and that the mine will start up at once.

Will Tell Next Time.

Pontiac, Mich., Aug. 20.—Charles Crofoot, proprietor of the Glinton hotel, was arrested charged with hindering the work of Deputy Factory Inspector A. B. Glaspie. Glaspie tried to ascertain the number of employes at the hostelry and the average wages paid and was refused. Crofoot pleaded guilty and was fined $5.

Plenty of Deer.

Iron Mountain, Mich., Aug. 20.—The county clerks have received the first consignment of blank deer licenses for this year. There are 600 resident and 50 non-resident licenses. The woods are full of deer, and the hunting will be on a big scale this year.

Give Everybody a Chance.

Emerson's dictum that we should treat every one as if he were all he ought to be is an excellent rule to practice in daily life. It is human nature to rise to the level that is expected of it. It is not necessary to waste time upon uncongenial people unless you are bound to them by strong family ties, but it is important that all with whom you come in contact be studied, with the desire on your part to give credit for all that is good in them and that nothing in their outward circumstances or appearance be allowed to prejudice you against them.—Ada C. Sweet in Woman's Home Companion.

TOLEDO FIREBUG

Arrested for Stealing Corn, He Confesses to Being an Incendiary.

Adrian, Mich., Aug. 20.—Daniel J. Finn, arrested here last Friday on the charge of stealing corn from his brother-in-law, proves to be a more valuable arrest than was at first anticipated. Finn was placed in the sweat box and made a partial confession to the officers that he is responsible for the numerous incendiary fires that have taken place in this vicinity of late. The last of these fires caused a $20,000 loss to the Washington Milling Co.

Finn has a record of setting fires at Toledo, among them being the Woolson Spice Co. fire in 1899. Finn was arrested there and proved to be insane. He was committed to an asylum but later released. Finn directed suspicion to himself here by turning in many of the fire alarms and being one of the first to reach the spot. He operated between 11 o'clock and midnight.

Killed by P. M. Train.

Traverse City, Mich., Aug. 20.—A stranger was run over and literally ground to fragments by a Pere Marquette train about seven miles from here. The remains were found yesterday morning by people returning to Grawn from church at Beitner. The fragments were gathered up with a shovel and placed in a small box and taken to Grawn. Letters were found indicating that his name is Edward Makin of Loomis, Mich.

Fond of Horses.

Owosso, Mich., Aug. 20.—Frankie Rourke is the youngest horsethief on record in this part of the state. Frankie, who is 12 years old, was working for A. J. White, a farmer living east of Owosso. He got up at 5 o'clock Sunday morning and left with Mr. White's horse and buggy, but was arrested at noon here. He will probably be sent to the reform school, as he has been in trouble before.

Will Take Up Land.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 20.—A party of 30 farmers from Ohio and Indiana left on the D. & C. boat last night in charge of A. R. Code, and commissioner of the Au Sable & Northwestern railroad to secure land along that line of railroad. The most of these have friends already located there in the past couple of years.

Fifth Victim Dies.

Calumet, Mich., Aug. 20.—Cemnut Jacobson, the fifth of the men who was injured in the accident at the Tamarack mine last week, died at the hospital yesterday. There were five funerals here Monday, the result of the mine accident. A hanging wall fell on the men while they were at work nearly a mile underground.

Truant Thrashed.

Lapeer, Mich., Aug. 20.—The story of Lester Oviatt, the newsboy who told his father about being kidnaped, turns out to be a joke pure and simple. The lad weakened yesterday while at dinner and his father gave him a severe thrashing with a horsewhip. He had been playing the truant act.

How Is This?

London, Aug. 20.—"Sir Ernest Satow has notified the Chinese peace plenipotentiaries," says a dispatch to the Times from Pekin, dated Aug. 19, "that unless the decrees for the punishment of the authors of the Chu-Chaw massacre are carried out forthwith, Great Britain will reconsider the arrangements for the withdrawal of British troops."

The Times, recalling editorially the circumstances of the Chu-Chau massacre, says: "The fact that it occurred in the British sphere of influence justifies Sir Ernest Satow's demand and menace, the significance of which will be comprehended by the Chinese plenipotentiaries and the absentee court."

Negro Lynched.

Pierce City, Mo., Aug. 20.—Will Godley, a negro, was lynched by a mob composed of 1,000 armed citizens shortly after dark last night for the murder of Miss Caselle Wild, whose dead body was found in the woods near here. The mob went to the jail about 9 o'clock and battered down the doors and threw ropes around the necks of Godley and Jean Carter, another suspect. Godley was hanged in front of the Lawrence hotel and his body riddled with bullets. Carter's guilt was not clearly established and he was taken back to jail.

Kruger Specially Invited.

London, Aug. 20.—It is asserted in Boer circles in Brussels that Emperor Nicholas specially invited Mr. Kruger to send a representative to attend the wedding of his youngest sister, Grand Duchess Olga, to Duke Peter of Oldenburg. According to the Lokal Anzeiger of Berlin it was the presence of this representative, M. Van der Hoeven, that prevented any member of the British embassy attending, the czar having ignored the British ambassador's protest against the presence of M. Van der Hoeven.

MILLS WILL START

U. S. Steel Corporation is Gaining Daily

STRIKERS ARE SATISFIED

Great Fight Expected at Duquesne Mills of Carnegie Company—Both Sides Working Carefully and Hard to Win.

Pittsburg, Aug. 20.—The United States steel corporation has made a series of gains in the restoration of properties crippled by the strike of the Amalgamated association and its sympathizers. The steel mills at Monassen, after a long period of inactivity, were partly put in motion by strike-breakers gathered in some of the southern states, two more mills in the Painter plant were also started up and another large mill at the Clark property was also operated for the first time. There was some disorder in the streets of Monassen during the day, but the local police never lost control of the demonstrative crowds, and there was no serious trouble. The reopening of the Monassen mill is believed to be the first of a series of aggressive moves on the part of the steel corporation. Preparations are known to be in progress for reopening the Star tin mills in this city and for increasing the force at the Lindsay and McCutcheon mills, and it is thought to be only a matter of time before the strongholds of the strikers, like Newcastle, McKeesport, Wheeling, Bellaire and Mingo Junction will be invaded. The strikers deny that any real progress has been made at either Monassen or Painter and that they are not to be frightened by the burning of a lot of coal and the mere operation of machinery. They say that skilled men cannot be secured outside of their ranks and that none of their men are deserting despite claims to the contrary. The managers of the Painter mills, which now has four mills on, claim that part of their two new crews is made up of old employes who have come back to work. At the Clark mill, where the 10-inch mill was started for the first time yesterday and where everything except a small 8-inch mills is now being operated, it is asserted that more skilled men are offering their services than can be accommodated. Fifty men were taken on there, bringing the total force up to 600. It was claimed that there were 200 men at work in the Painter mills and that 50 of them were skilled.

The greatest fight in this district is for mastery at the Duquesne mills of the Carnegie Co. Both sides are working secretly, the Amalgamated association to extend its organization and strength among the workers, and the steel company to block any plan to get the men out.

Assistant Secretary M. F. Tighe returned from the west Monday and was closeted for several hours with President Shaffer. He was given a very enthusiastic reception by his associates and returns a stronger figure in the organization than when he departed. Discussing his report, Mr. Shaffer said:

"All that Mr. Tighe told me was in the papers last week, and there is nothing aside from this. The Chicago mill men who remained at work are now no longer members of the organization. They are not entitled to a trial, and will have none. They are at liberty to act as they see fit now, but if they go out they will do so on their own responsibility. We will do nothing about the matter from this time. On the whole, the strike is going on very well. We are getting out more men every day and will continue to do so. The fight is hardly begun yet. There will be plenty of trouble for the trust before long if they keep on in their present course. There has been no effort on any one's part toward peace, and there will be none on our part again. The situation in Duquesne is, that there has been no strike ordered in that mill as yet. I said last week that when we were ready the mill would be attended to."

Excited Italians.

New York, Aug. 20.—The disaster to the steamship Islander off the coast of Alaska was the cause of a tremendous commotion in Newark, N. J. Early in the morning the Columbian Guards of that city, with 1,200 other excursionists, left Newark on the steamer Isabel and her barge for a trip up the Hudson river. Many, if not the majority of the excursionists, were Italians. When the news of the disaster to the Islander was bulletined in front of the Newark newspaper offices a report spread through the Italian settlement that it was the Isabel which had gone down with all on board.

Five minutes later the police had their hands full. Hundreds of men, women and children from the Italian quarter rushed screaming to the docks. There the excitable foreigners wept and prayed, kneeling in the pools of water and mud caused by a heavy rain which was falling. It was necessary to call out the police reserves before any semblance of order could be obtained. Meanwhile telephone and telegraph were kept busy, and in two hours it was learned that the Isabel had reached her destination safely, and at the urgent pleadings of the better informed Italians the great crowd was prevailed on to disperse.

Columbia Government Weak.

Kingston, Jamaica, Aug. 20.—The British steamer Rosneath has arrived from Central American ports and brought advices from Colon of continued and persistent attacks by the rebels on the outskirts of Colon and Panama. The repeated efforts on the part of the government to repulse the rebels have failed and the belief is gaining ground that the Colombia government is weakening. When the Rosneath left Colon, Aug. 15, the French cruiser Suchet was there and the arrival of British and American war vessels was anxiously awaited. Business generally was crippled.

The Successful Doctor.

The king of purgatory sent his lictors to earth to bring back some skillful Chinese physician. "You must look for one," said the king, "at whose door there are no aggrieved spirits of disembodied patients." The lictor went off, but at the house of every doctor they visited there were crowds of wailing ghosts hanging about. At last they found a doctor at whose door there was only a single shade and cried out. "This man is evidently the skillful one we are in search of." On inquiry, however, they discovered that he had only started practice the day before.—Giles' "History of Chinese Literature."

RESCUED ALIVE.

Had Been Buried in Tunnel for Five Days.

Cleveland, Aug. 20.—It is believed that two men, Adam Kest and John Eugene, who were supposed to have perished in the water works tunnel last Wednesday, as the result of the destruction of a crib by fire, are still alive. Men working at the crib were startled late yesterday afternoon to hear some one rapping on the pipe through which air is forced into the tunnel. The knocks were answered by the workmen and responsive knocks were heard. Preparations were at once made to pump air into the tunnel and to send down a rescuing party.

Subsequently the two men were rescued alive and taken to a hospital after being confined in the tunnel five and a half days.

Up Against It.

New York, Aug. 20.—The Rev. Frederick Bruce Russell of the New York Law and Order league and editor of its organ, the Up State Sentinel, was arrested last night on a charge of extortion preferred by James H. Lawrence, a reporter for a morning paper. Russell was taken to a police station house, where he was bailed in the sum of $500. The complaint charges that Lawrence, under an assumed name, approached Russell and attempted to pay money for "protection from raid by agents of the Law and Order league," Lawrence pretending that he was about to place a number of slot machines in resorts in this city. Russell denies the charge.

Currency in Philippines.

Ithaca, N. Y., Aug. 20.—Prof. Jeremiah W. Jenks of Cornell university, who will leave soon for a trip around the world for the purpose of investigating monetary conditions existing in various countries, has also been commissioned by the government to make a special report on the question of currency in the Philippine islands. He will spend much time in the far east, giving special attention to China and India, and from facts gained on the tour will make recommendations to the department. Prof. Jenks has for some time been engaged in the work of investigating the trust question for the government. He has also for years been making a special study of the monetary question.

Sixteen People Drowned.

Paducah, Ky., Aug. 20.—The steamer City of Golconda, plying between this city and Elizabethtown, Ill., was struck by a squall during a storm about 7 o'clock last night as she was en route to Paducah. She turned over in 10 feet of water, six miles above the city, as she was going into Crowell's landing. Sixteen persons are reported drowned. The disaster occurred as supper was served and many of the 75 passengers were in the cabin. The wind struck the boat without warning and there was no time for those on the inside to escape.

Our Navy All Ready.

Washington, Aug. 20.—It was stated at the state department that the North Atlantic squadron would be ordered to Hampton Roads even if there had been no disturbances in South America. It said that the target practice can be conducted much better at Hampton Roads than at any other place and that the headquarters of the squadron would continue to be Hampton Roads unless the ships should be required in South Atlantic waters.

Three People Killed.

Philadelphia, Aug. 20.—About 12:30 this morning a benzine tank exploded at the Atlantic Refining Co.'s plant, where a fire has been in progress since yesterday afternoon. It is reported that three persons have been killed and about a score injured. The tanks of benzine and petroleum have already been destroyed by fire. The loss will probably reach $500,000.

Must Have New Music.

Warsaw, Ind., Aug. 20.—Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman gave the opening address at the second day's session of the Winona Bible conference. Taking as his subject, the "Song of the Lord," he called attention to the weakening of churches and lack of interest in church work by church people. As one means of increasing interest he advocated the adoption of new songs.

Unprofitable Strike.

Watertown, N. Y., Aug. 20.—Today will witness a break in the machinists' strike in this city. The strike of 300 men has been on since May 20. The New York Air Brake Co. has offered to reinstate its employes, and about 30 will go back under the same conditions that prevailed when they struck. They are not debarred from belonging to the union.

Killed While at Lunch.

Chillicothe, O., Aug. 20.—Robert Rutter and Jefferson Rutter, two farmers, were instantly killed at Vigo by a Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern train. The men were eating lunch in their wagon as they crossed the track and did not observe the moving train. The wagon was torn to pieces.

SANK IN 20 MINUTES

Passengers Were Asleep at the Time of Disaster

MANY PEOPLE WENT DOWN

Frightful Experience of Survivors and Heartrending Scenes—The Steamer Struck a Floating Iceberg While Running at Full Speed.

Port Townsend, Wash., Aug. 20.—The steamer Queen has just arrived from the north, bringing news of one of the most appalling marine disasters on the Pacific coast. The steamer Islander, sailing from Skagway Aug. 14, when nearing the southwest end of Douglas island at 2 a. m. Aug. 15, and running at full speed, struck a floating iceberg and in less than 20 minutes went to the bottom of the deep channel, carrying men, women and children to watery graves.

The Islander had 108 passengers and all were in bed when the vessel struck. The shock was so severe that many were thrown from their berths, and the wildest excitement prevailed. Word was soon passed that the vessel was doomed, and a general scramble for the life boats ensued, many jumping overboard and attempting to swim to the shore, the distance being short. In the scramble to get into the boats many were hurled headlong into the chilly water, which, according to the passengers arriving from the scene, seemed alive with human beings. Before all the passengers had left the vessel she gave a lunge and went down, bow first. It is known that 67 lives were lost.

It will be some time before their names can be definitely learned, for the purser lost his passenger list.

A number of passengers of the wrecked steamer tell of their thrilling experiences during the disaster. M. Blumanton of Portland found a satchel with $14,000 worth of Klondike gold and rushed upon the deck as the vessel was sinking, and Capt. Foote told him there was no immediate danger. Later there was another rush, and he was afraid to throw his satchel of gold down from the deck into the boat for fear that the weight of the gold would stave a hole through the lifeboat and cause the loss of lives of those in the boats as well jeopardizing his own chances for safety. When he dropped the satchel from the deck he slipped into the water and was hauled to the boat thankful to save his life. One man who had just come from the Klondike, his name could not be learned, is reported to have taken his portmanteau from the care of the purser, Mr. Bishop, and with the grip containing dust amounting to $40,000 in value grasped firmly in his hand, jumped from the sinking steamer into a boat close by and failing to reach the boat he went down with his treasure.

Pilot LaBlanc said that many of the passengers acted badly attempting to jump into the boats before they had been launched. Had it not been for this crowding and rushing he thinks all would have been saved, with the possible exception of thise who did not get out of their state rooms. Among these were Andrew Keating and his two sons, Arthur and Julius, of Los Angeles.

N. A. Belcourt, M. P., and Gen. C. Ray of Ottawa, were traveling companions on a trip to Dawson. Mr. Belcourt said the steamer was running at full speed, and while possibly no fog had been encountered up to or immediately preceding the collision, a dense fog prevailed when the accident happened.

The case of Mrs. Ross is a peculiarly sad one. She left Victoria a short time ago to join her husband, who was recently appointed governor of the Yukon territory. It is only a few days since she left her parents in this city to take up her residence in the Yukon territory, and a letter received a few days ago told of her plans for the future. She left five of her children in Dawson, but brought the youngest, an infant, with her.

According to stories told by some of the passengers, the proportion of the women saved was small. When the survivors were brought ashore, some of them were so numb and disheartened and had so little life left in them that they begged to be left alone, or left to their death.

What Are His Intentions?

Havana, Aug. 20.—A meeting was held yesterday, attended by a number of revolutionary generals and politicians representing all parties, to ascertain the practicability of agreeing upon Senor Estrada Palma as a candidate for the presidency of the republic. It was convened at the request of Gen. Maximo Gomez. Gen. Sanguily and Juan Gualberto Gomez contended that, before they could give their support to any candidate, they must know his political program. The former pointed out that Senor Palma's recent letter to Senor Figueredo was very brief and that he ought to be invited to set forth his intentions more clearly.

Ultimately it was decided to appoint a committee empowered to address a communication to Senor Palma, asking him to state more fully his intentions and purposes if elected president. Gen. Gomez was appointed chairman of the committee.

Minister Conger at Pekin.

Washington, Aug. 20.—It is not known here whether Minister Conger, who arrived at Pekin Saturday, will take up the Chinese negotiations at the point to which they have been brought by Mr. Rockhill, thus leaving the latter free to come home, or will leave the negotiations in Mr. Rockhill's hands until the final signing of the protocol. However, the state department will not send any specific instructions on this point, but will leave it to Mr. Conger and Mr. Rockhill to arrange plans to their mutual convenience.

Awful Work of Exploding Shell at Fort Riley

[illegible]ESTIGATION IN PROGRESS

The [illegible]er's Body Left Standing Erect—[illegible]ounded Given Prompt Attention [illegible] the Post Hospital—Three Will Die.

Junction City, Kan., Aug. 20.—While at target practice about 9 o'clock yesterday morning on Fort Riley reservation, half a mile north of this city, a seven-inch 107-pound shell exploded as it was being placed in the breech of a section gun of siege battery O, Seventh artillery, commanded by Capt. Vandusen. Casualties:

Henry C. Watson, killed instantly.
John J. King, wounded fatally.
Murray Sykes, wounded fatally.
Charles Dugan, wounded fatally.
Henry Logsdon, wounded seriously.
Dennis Mahoney, wounded seriously.
Roos Duck, wounded slightly.
James Brady, wounded slightly.

The big siege battery of four guns has been on the target range north of this city since Wednesday of last week. Monday morning the usual practice was in progress. The 107-pound shell had been put into the third section gun, and Private Watson was ramming the shell home when there was a terrific explosion and the headless body of Watson was seen standing perfectly erect for almost 15 seconds. Then it moved as if to step and fell, alighting on the back with the shoulders toward the gun. Watson has a father in Texas and a brother and sister in South Carolina. He enlisted at Savannah, Ga.

Private Joe King had both arms torn off and lost both of his eyes. He is from New Jersey. Private Murray Sykes had a portion of his skull torn off and his right eye badly injured. Charles Duncan was badly bruised about the head and blinded in both eyes. Henry Logsdon is from London, Ky. His body is badly hurt and he may be blind from powder burns. Sergeant Dennis Mahoney, a native of Boston, was hit in the mouth with a fragment of shell and lost several teeth. Recruit Lloyd, who recently joined the battery at Jackson, Tenn., had his left forearm blown off and [illegible] eye badly burned.

The wounded men were taken at once to the post hospital, where prompt medical attention could be given.

CLAIMS MALICIOUS MOTIVES.

C. F. Cockran Says Suit Is Brought to Shield a Relative.

Baltimore, Aug. 20.—Receivers were appointed here for the Parkton Lumber Co. of Baltimore county and the Chesapeake Lumber Co. of this city on the application of Chas. F. Cockran, who asserts that he is the principal stockholder in both concerns. The petitions in both cases allege that the companies are insolvent because of the misconduct and mismanagement of a former officer of the corporations interested. The proceedings taken form a sequel to the suit entered on Saturday last in the courts of Baltimore county on which a receiver was appointed for the Minor Lumber Co. on a petition of Benjamin Cross of Cincinnati, who alleged that the Minor and other similar companies were organized and used by Cockran in furtherance of a plan to defraud certain banks by means of worthless commercial paper. A sweeping denial of these charges has been made by Cockran, who claims that Cross, in bringing suit, is actuated by malicious motives and a desire to shield an accused relative from punishment for the commission of frauds in connection with [illegible] of Cockran's ventures.

Ten Years' Trial

The Story of a Soldier's Struggle

By Brigadier General

scandalized that he should tender them elsewhere. The Sun couldn't say much now, because it was down on the rifles anyhow and catered to the farmers; The Banner wouldn't say much, because Armstrong was ashamed of what he had said, and this happened to be a matter that didn't bother the Seattle. But The Examiner, which had done what it could to make Langdon friendless in his new position at the yards, now duly and frequently expressed its abhorrence of the man who could turn traitor to his own people and work against the best interests of the community in whose midst he had found a home and the livelihood denied him elsewhere. Appeals were written to Channing to compel his subordinate to remain at his post. Channing answered that his post now included Gunnison. Efforts were made to stir up a cabal against him among the Grays, but he had had a two weeks' start and had won their good will; besides, there was now that $1,000 prize hanging up for all comers, and companies from Minnesota, Iowa and Kansas had entered the list. So the Grays stood firm. Then the Brentwoods strove to hedge and to limit the contest to companies that "had not received professional assistance," but that reacted upon themselves. Then The Sun was inspired to see what it could do to stir up a strike against Langdon in the yards of the Big Horn, where there must be men who rebelled against the supervision of a strict, soldier bred overseer. There were, but they were in the minority, and the three who started and circulated a paper calling for Langdon's dismissal or a strike were suddenly, by Channing's order, hauled up before the superintendent and "given the sack." Then anonymous letters began to rain in on the superintendent at Brentwood and higher officials in Chicago. Langdon was drinking again, Langdon was gambling, Langdon was speculating through a broker in Omaha, and these, investigated unbeknown to Langdon, fell flat. He had won the respect of the better class of men; he had become an expert trainhand; he minded his own business, yet was full of sympathy and interest in the affairs of the operatives and the crews of the trains. In March the superintendent of the Seattle offered him a similar berth at bigger pay provided he would move to Sioux City, and the offer was declined. In April the great drill came off. The flag of the rifles was trailed in the dust. They were not even "placed" by the judges, and the great prize was won in almost a walkover by the Gunnison Grays.

Time and again Langdon had received warnings from the police that there was a gang on the south side ever watching for a chance to "do him up" and from mine host of the Brentwood that there were influential men on the north side, potent in the councils of the Big Horn, who would hurt him if they could. One day there came a curt summons from a local lawyer to the effect that bills to the amount of $350 had been placed in his hands for collection and calling upon him to take immediate steps to meet them. Langdon called to inquire and was curtly, almost insolently, received. He learned enough, however, to convince him that two of the bills were those of dealers at Pawnee to whom he had regularly and conscientiously been paying $10 a month apiece. The inference was plain. Nathan had bought in the balance of the claims and sent them through Perrigo's bank for collection. In his trouble Langdon wrote to Channing, but no answer came. Twice the latter had written him that the president and certain directors had spoken to him about Mr. Langdon's debts. It was evident that some enemy was hounding him, but so long as Channing was "on deck," as he wrote to Langdon, he could count on his support.

But Channing was no longer on deck. The incessant brain work, the strain, the immense labor devolving on an active official of the road whose business outdid its resources, had finally told. Nervous prostration and collapse had ensued, and Channing was downed at last.

It was the first week in May and with all nature sweet and smiling about him. Eric Langdon came up from Gunnison on the early morning freight, his heart heavy as lead. He had spent the early hours of the previous night, Friday, working hard with the Grays, for their ambition was boundless now, and they had entered for a competition in an adjoining state. The night itself he had spent trying to sleep under the roof of his friend, the station agent, but sleep would not come, and twice he arose and went out and walked the platform under the glistening stars. On Monday, said the lawyer, that money must be paid. Langdon had no appetite for breakfast. He took a cup of coffee at the station restaurant on reaching Brentwood and, though it was barely 6 o'clock, went to his office. Janitor and watchmen noted his haggard face and wondered at his early hours. Early as they were, some one had been there earlier. The safe door stood open—the cash was gone.

CHAPTER XI.

There are two kinds of men who deserve to be held in abhorrence—those who are forever saying mean things about their fellows and those forever hearing them. The first are active mischief makers, the second passive. The first are generally regarded as the more dangerous and objectionable. But as the result of some 20 years' study I am constrained to believe the second the worst. The first has at least the courage of his convictions and says what he is mean enough to think. The second lacks even that degree of personal pluck and, not daring to say the slander himself, gives it birth under the cloak of "I heard." How many of you who read have failed to meet the man who draws his chair close to yours and confidentially begins: "Say, what's this about Jimmy Rush? Now, I was told last night by a man in position to know," etc. Ask him who the man is, and he shirks and becomes mysterious. "He's a— Well, I promised not to mention his name, but he's a gentleman. It was told me confidentially." The source is always intangible, but in nine cases out of ten you can safely bet your last dollar the informant never existed and your hopes of eternity that if he did he wasn't a gentleman. Gentlemen do not circulate slander.

But cads who have fallen below the plane of their fellow men and cannot climb back seek to restore their social equilibrium by pulling others down. Captain Nathan got back to Pawnee to find himself in bad odor. Torrance, who would gladly have done a soldier's duty had he been permitted, was involved, through his intimacy with Nathan, in Nathan's growing unpopularity. Santley, who had had to serve as Nathan's adjutant, now had unjustly to shoulder a section of Nathan's obloquy. Woodrow escaped because Nathan accused him of rank insubordination, and the youngster, with Rodney May and others to back him, as much as told Nathan he hoped he would prefer charges and have him tried by court martial. A most unhappy state of affairs was sprung on the batteries at Pawnee, and the politely veiled compassion of the cavalry was something that made the gunners swear. Two or three troops under Channing and Stryker had done tiptop service during the riots. Infantry from Omaha and Leavenworth had saved hundreds of thousands of dollars in property and covered themselves with credit for cool, even tempered, forbearing but resolute work. Everywhere had the regulars won unstinted praise from all law abiding citizens except that one mishandled little battalion at Brentwood, and nothing prevented a court of inquiry but the feeling that, for the sake of the cloth, the whole thing were best ignored or forgotten. "An error of judgment" was laid at Nathan's door, but nothing more serious. And old "Cat," who secretly sympathized with Woodrow, was instructed to release the lad from arrest, with the caution to hold his tongue and temper in the future. Then Melville was sent south at the urgent advice of the doctors, and by tacit consent Pawnee ceased discussion of Nathan's failure.

But great was the glorification among the guardsmen of Nebraska, and widespread was the story of Mr. Langdon's prowess; and keen was the ridicule at the expense of the Brentwood rifles and the rejoicing over the triumph of the Grays. Great was the applause that greeted Langdon's soldier pupils when they bore away the prize and Langdon on their shoulders and greater still the grief with which, a few weeks later, it was learned that the Big Horn had held that gentleman accountable for the robbery of its safe at Brentwood and discharged him from the service of the road.

And this takes us back to "hearers" at Pawnee. "I heard," said Captain Nathan confidentially to the new post commander six months after the riots and not six days after the receipt of the latest news from Nebraska—"I heard from a source that can't be questioned that the real reason was that he had been peculating for months, and the robbery was to conceal his own stealings." "I heard," whispered Torrance in the confidences begotten of Burgundy to Major Snicker of the staff, "that he had blown in over $2,000 in a bucket shop in Chicago, and detectives had been on to him for weeks." All manner of things detrimental to Langdon had Nathan and his few satellites heard in the same way, and all they did hear and much more they did not was duly communicated to such as would listen, who were, fortunately, few. It was Nathan's insidious stories that turned the local shopmen against the absent and the exile and incidentally a pretty penny for their informant, as the tradesmen sold their claims to him for 60 cents on the dollar, and so confessed to Melville long weeks later.

"I heard," said Torrance, "that old Sharp ordered Langdon away from Sheridan and sent the sergeant of the guard to see him off the reservation."

"I heard," said Nathan, "that Dr. Armistead gave him warning that if he wasn't off the post before morning gunfire he'd give the whole story of his maltreatment of his wife to the papers, and that's what started him."

And now there was no Melville to stand his friend at Pawnee, for the major was summering at the seashore, slowly regaining health and strength, and lads like Rodney May and Woodrow had neither rank nor years sufficient to carry influence. And now, worse luck, there was none to befriend him at Chicago, for Channing, a sorely stricken man, had been taken to a sanitarium in the mountains. Summoned to the offices of the general manager and hauled up before a new king who knew not Joseph, Langdon could only sadly say he could throw no light on the robbery whatever. Two clerks, one of them the son of the division superintendent, knew the combination. One of them knew there was upward of $600 in the safe when Langdon went down to Gunnison, as usual, on Friday evening.

"Had he gone on railway business?" was the question.

"No; not this time—solely to instruct the Gunnison company," was the frank reply. Mr. Channing's secretary told of Langdon's letter appealing for aid to meet the payment of $350. The station master at Gunnison described Langdon's nervousness the night of the robbery; told of him twice leaving his couch and going out and pacing the platform, and Langdon was informed by a curt note that he need not return to Brentwood—his services would no longer be required.

And now there set in a revulsion of feeling at Brentwood as the summer wore on. The rifles found that Perrigo's money and social position had failed to compensate for the loss of Langdon's skill, experience and guiding hand. The company was falling to pieces. The Grays at Gunnison held a meeting and passed resolutions of sympathy and confidence and, going down into their shallow pockets, sent Langdon a check for $100 and a letter that he read with swimming eyes. The Brentwood Banner, that had abused and wronged him in the winter, came out in a vigorous editorial, penned by Armstrong, wherein the base ingratitude of the Big Horn was heralded throughout Nebraska, and marked copies were sent to Langdon, who was seeking a clerkship in the quartermaster's department at Chicago, for the Gray Fox had been promoted to the double stars and the command of a division. But the one vacancy that occurred was demanded by half a dozen influential politicians for needy henchmen, and the desk was given to a rank outsider. The selection was made in Washington, and the general could not help himself. There had been malicious rejoicing among the lower elements about the Brentwood yards that the division superintendent did not seem to deprecate. His son had stepped into Langdon's place, but wise heads and old hands among the men declared that he'd never fill his shoes. Then came a queer thing—a note from the general superintendent of the Seattle, asking Langdon to call. He did and was again tendered the office at Sioux City.

"A proof," said the superintendent, "of Mr. Barclay's magnanimity. He tendered it in spite of the rumors affecting Mr. Langdon's integrity, not to mention Mr. Langdon's open discourtesy. In fact, Mr. Barclay wished to see Mr. Langdon and talk it over."

Langdon went. He had sent most of his hundred dollars to pay off pressing debts and was in sore need. He waited full two hours before the magnate would see him, and then Barclay, tilting back in his chair and tendering neither hand nor seat, but in very distant and patronizing tone, informed Langdon that if he saw fit to make a written application for the position and could furnish bonds the Seattle "might be disposed to consider it." Two or three directors were with the airy manager at the moment and were curiously studying the pale faced, thin cheeked man who had balked the mob and saved the Big Horn. They stared after him in amaze and then in silence at one another as Langdon made his brief reply, turned on his heel and left the room.

"Pray do not strain yourself in the effort, Mr. Barclay. I will not make application and should not furnish bonds if I did."

That was one offer declined. Then came another. The managing editor of The Palladium sent for Langdon and asked him if he had ever done any newspaper work, and Langdon said that he had not, but he would be glad to try almost anything. The Palladium had begun a crusade against the officers of the army in general and at Sheridan in particular. Facts to substantiate its theories being necessary, The Palladium had drawn upon the repertory of certain discharged and disgruntled soldiers ever to be found about the saloons and upon the imaginations of its reporters, to the end that many sensational stories were published, which, while delighting the enemies of the army among the turbulent and unruly element in Chicago, succeeded only in disgusting the educated and the thinking men among its readers. The Palladium lost caste and subscribers in the clubs, the professions and business circles generally. The management saw and pondered. It could not change its policy or drop the matter at its present stage without tacit admission of defeat. They perhaps could find a man who knew whereof he spoke, who could tell of many a discreditable thing at the expense of officers of the army—things that, unlike almost everything it had asserted in the past, could not be disproved and denied. In the interests of the Seattle and the hope of winning friends and subscribers among the officers of both roads it had vigorously abused ("roasted" was the technical term) Mr. Langdon and published several letters from its own correspondent at the scene of the riots (who happened to be the editor of the Brentwood Sun), in which poor Eric was held up to public obloquy as a drunken desperado, a reckless murderer, etc. The Sun people found especial delight in the repetition of that assonant if not alliterative headline, "A Kicked Out Captain," and The Palladium had taken it up until one of its own reporters, a gentleman from top to toe, who had known Eric in happier days at the Point, made vehement personal appeal to the management and succeeded in having it stopped. It was The Palladium's policy [illegible] with earnings; but the hearts of their people with discontent. On account of hard times the previous year a 10 per cent cut had been ordered in all wages and brought on the disastrous strike. The roads had won. The hands had lost and sadly accepted the inevitable on the promise that when business warranted the old rate would be restored. Business couldn't be better than it was when September came and had been all summer, but a deaf ear was turned to all hints as to the restoration of the rates. Winter would soon come. Coal, clothes, groceries and provisions were commanding high prices. Everybody had prospered except the operatives of the railways, and they and their families made up nearly half the population of Brentwood. Then came the walking delegates, conferences with local officials, responses that expenses exceeded receipts, vast sums were needed for extension and repair, then much talk pro and con in the papers, frequent meetings, fiery speeches and then threats.

Another kind of meeting was held in Brentwood one night. Bankers and business men with large interests at stake saw in the situation the exact symptoms which preceded the fierce outbreak of the previous year. The police reported tramps and toughs again gathering in force from all over the west, and this time, said the orator of the day at a vast open air concourse of the employees of both roads, "when we strike it will be with no such faltering, misguided hand as in the year gone by. The blow will be instantaneous. The scab will find his occupation gone. There will be no engine left for him to run the bread from our hungry children. There will be only smoking ruins to greet the coming of those hireling butchers, the despised soldiery of either state or nation." Certain few of the railway men who had joined the Brentwood rifles in the days of Perrigo's popularity were warned by anonymous letters to themselves or to the timid wives and children to drop that association at once or take the consequences. Most of them applied for discharges and were refused. Nothing remained for them but to deliberately absent themselves fr[illegible] drills, refuse to pay the fines and [illegible] the laws be

The Resin Eaters.

"Resin eating," said a south Georgia doctor, "is a habit acquired by the Cracker settlers who live in the neighborhood of a turpentine still. The resin they use isn't the hard, shiny resin of commerce, but has been dipped out of the cooking caldron at an early stage of the process, and when it cools it can be kneaded between the fingers like wax. The backwoods resin eater will bite off an immense chunk and chew it placidly until it disappears. The heat of the mouth keeps it fairly soft, but if the chewing becomes too deliberate it is apt to 'set,' as they say, and cement the victim's jaws together in a grip of iron.

"On one occasion a big, rawboned backwoodsman who used to hang around a still I operated came rushing into my little office, clutching his face in both hands and making a horrible gurgling noise in his throat. 'What on earth is the matter?' I asked in alarm. 'His rosum's sot,' said another Cracker, who brought up the rear. I was nonplused at first, but finally grasped the fact that the man had been chewing a monstrous slab of resin and had thoughtlessly suspended operations long enough to allow it to solidify and clamp his teeth like a vice. We finally pried his mouth open with a chisel and broke a couple of molars in the operation. Next day I saw him chewing again."—Exchange.

The White Shark.

The shark of sharks, the real "man eater" and the one most dreaded, is the white shark. This variety reaches a length of 35 feet and a weight of 2,000 pounds. Its head is long and flat, and the snout far overhangs the mouth. Its six rows of teeth are sharp as lancets and notched like saws. Its mouth is very large, so that one has been known to cut a man's body completely in two at a single snap of its cruel jaws and another to swallow one at a gulp. Near Calcutta one of these sharks was seen to swallow a bullock's head, horns and all.

From the stomach of another a bull's hide was taken entire, and the sailor who made the discovery insisted that the bull had been swallowed whole and all except the hide had been digested. From the stomach of another was taken a lady's workbox, filled with the usual contents, scissors and all. It is commonly the white shark which follows the vessel at sea day after day and week after week.

BASE BALL.

All pitchers look alike to the Tecumseh boys and Thomas, of Blissfield, was batted all over the field last Friday. The special from Blissfield brought four cars well filled. They came up with their horns and megaphones to roast and beat Tecumseh, but alas, their boys were not onto Harris' curves and only six hits, one being a two base hit was all Harris allowed them. The feature of the game was the heavy hitting on the part of Tecumseh, the eight two base hits and two three base hits and a pretty triple play. Harris received excellent support and he pitched good ball striking out ten men, while Thomas struck out five. When the Blissfield rooters started for home, not a sound was heard except the ringing of the car bell. Megaphones and horns were out of sight, but they carried home in their score book nine great big goose eggs. Following is the score:

Tecumseh	Ab	R	H	PO	A	E
Patterson	5	3	4	5	3	0

On account of the rain the game between the Malta Vistas and Clintons that was advertized for Saturday at Clinton, did not materialize.

The Malta Vistas and Monroe teem did not agree last Thursday as to the umpire and in the fifth inning when the score stood 1 to 1, the captain of the Malta Vistas took his men off the grounds, for the umpire called one of his men out on second, when he was safe. Thus according to rules, the score was 9 to 0 in favor of Monroe.

FATALLY BURNED.

Last Friday night while Preparing for a Picnic to be held at Sand Lake on Saturday

MRS. NELLIE BAILEY

Was Fatally Burned. After 3 hours Of Intense Suffering Death Relieved her.

Mrs. Arthur Bailey, of Adrian township, met with a terrible accident at 3 o'clock Friday afternoon, which caused her death at 6:30. Mrs. Bailey was preparing to attend the grange picnic in Putman's grove, Sand lake, Saturday. She had finished her baking and was getting ready to do some ironing. On a shelf over the kitchen stove where she kept the irons stood also a can of kerosene oil. In reaching for the irons she knocked the kerosene oil can down, the oil striking on her shoulders and falling onto the hot stove. In a moment she was a mass of flames.

Her screams aroused her sister-in-law, who went to her assistance. She also telephoned for Dr. Rice, of Tipton, and Dr. Treat, of Adrian, who did all they could to releive Mrs. Bailey's sufferings, but only death could releive her, which came after the patient had lingered a ittle over three hours.

Mrs. Bailey was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Burns, of Tipton, and was born in December 1876, thus making her 25 years of age. At the age of 21 she was married to Arthur Baily, son of Nathan Bailey. Two children, a son and daughter, were born to them, aged 3 and 1 years respectively, who with the father are left to mourn the untimely death of a loving wife and mother.

The funeral was held at the home Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock, Rev. Blair, of Tipton officiating. Interment at North Adrian cemetery.

Mrs. Will Chiverall.

Mary Ann Warner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Warner, was born in Pennsylvania, July 15, 1845. She departed this life Saturday, Aug. 17, 1901. aged 56 years. When 41 years of age, she was married to Will Chiverall, of this place, and has since that time made Tecumseh her home.

Mrs. Chiverall had been ill for some time, her death being due to cancer of the liver. The deceased was a highly respected lady and she will be missed by a large number of friends.

The funeral was held from the house yesterday afternoon at two o'clock. Interment at Tecumseh. Rev. Blatchford officiated.

EMILY WHELAN.

Born Dec. 8, 1809, Died Aug. 10, 1901.

Mrs. Emily Whelan died Aug. 10, 1901 surrounded by her remaining children The funeral services were conducted from her late home by Rev. Louisa Haight, Aug. 11, 1901.

Emily Joslyn was born in Oneida county, N. Y., Dec. 8, 1809. She was the fifth in a family of nine children, six sons and three daughters and was the last survivor of her family. In 1815 her parents moved to Monroe county, N. Y. Jan. 1, 1829, she was married to Wm. Whelan and in 1833 the family moved to Michigan and settled on the farm, where they have since resided. Seven children were born to them. Eliza Ann married Geo. W. Allen second died May 22, 1888; Sarah, now Mrs. P. F. Beebe, Nancy, now Mrs. Frank Erskine; Arletta, died October 27, 1870; Emeline, now Mrs. Wm. E. Wisner; Jane died April 16, 1874 and Rosetta, now Mrs. Lorenzo Billington, who lives on the old farm and who has taken care of her mother for so many years past.

Her husband, Wm. Whelan, died Dec. 3, 1888. Twelve children and sixteen great grandchildren survive her. For many years Aunt Emily Whelan was an invalid and for eight years or more was totally blind and very deaf. For about four years she has been confined almost wholly to her bed, but she has born these afflictions with a patience and cheerfulness that has been very touching. Her mind has been clear and strong to the last. Often lying alone she would sing in a voice very well preserved.

With her has passed away the last of the old folks that settled this section of Franklin. May the memory of her wholly honest and honorable life, her love and devotion to her children and children's chilcren, her patience and kindly thoughts for all, long remain to us.

IN OLDEN TIMES.

Many Things were Different Nowadays the Public Profit by Experience.

When the striped pole or sign which now indicates a barber shop was employed to let the public know where cupping or blood-letting was professionally performed, close shaves were of daily occurrence, not the easy removal of the hirsute or hairy adornment of the head and face, but close shaves from entering eternity. More than one unfortunate entered the barber surgeon's doorway to leave it a corpse or so weak that weeks were required to get the victim of malpractice on his feet. Blood-letting was used for everything from a heart ache to a corn, and a pain in the loins was invariably treated with two incisions, one on each side of the spine. Like plasters and liniments, these helped from the counter irritation they created, and we may presume that had Mr. Calvin Wilson, proprietor of the leading shaving parlor, of Niles, Mich., lived in the time of George III, of England, in place of taking the coursehe did a short time ago with his back, blood-letting would have been resorted to. Read how he treated his trouble:

Mr. Wilson says: "My occupation has very likely much to do with the cause of my backache from which I have suffered considerably for a number of years. Standing on one's feet some days 18 hours is hard on the best of backs, but when you have pain across the loins, with lameness and soreness, everytime you move the muscles of the arm, long, long before your daily task is over you often wish you could go to sleep. I tried everything to better my condition but was unsuccessful until I used three boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills The relief they brought to a man who has worked hard all his life and is now past the three score and ten is much easier to appreciate than describe in words. Doan's Kidney Pills perform what they promise."

TIMING YOUR TRAIN.

Ways In Which to Learn How Fast You Are Traveling.

"There has been some picturesque fiction written about the ease with which railroad men and drummers are supposed to tick off the miles as the train speeds along from things they can see from the car windows," said a railroad conductor to a reporter.

"There is only one strictly accurate way, and that is to seat yourself on the side of the train from which may be observed the white mile posts that line the road and hold your watch on them. If you have a split second watch, it will prove interesting to note that while you made one mile in 60 seconds the next was covered in 53 and the third in 70 seconds, and so on, as the speed of the train increases or slackens. You may also follow around the little second hand on an ordinary watch. It kills time.

"Some pretend to say that they can tell the speed of the train by counting the telegraph poles. If there were an exact number of telegraph poles to every mile, this might be done by a little figuring, but there is a difference. The number of telegraph poles to a mile vary from 33 to 40, depending upon the straight stretches and the curves in the track, the latter having more poles than the former. So, you see, it is not as easy as the drummer would have the other passengers believe.

"If the poles are planted 33 to the mile, they are 160 feet apart, and every 11 passed represents a third of a mile. If placed 40 to a mile, they are 132 feet apart, and every 20 represents half a mile.

"These are easy figures to remember, and by applying them on a journey a passenger may obtain an idea more or less accurate of the speed of the train.

"Another way is to attempt to count the clicks of the wheels of the truck of your car as they pass over the rails where joined. The rails of the roads as placed today are too evenly joined to arrive at an exact determination by this method, because if you miss two or three joints your calculations are thrown out as to accuracy.

"However, there are railroad men who cannot tell you the number of rails to the mile of their own roads, and rails vary in length, the average being 30 feet, some 33 feet and some 60 feet. At 30 feet there are 176 rails to the mile, and if you can count 176 consecutive clinks as your train flies along you may determine its speed and not otherwise."—Washington Star.

The Landlubber Ducks of Sahara.

"The proverbial fondness of ducks for water would lead one to presuppose that of all the world the most destitute of ducks would be the Sahara desert and that if a stray 'springtail' happened to drift into that region he would either vamoose or turn up his toes with briefest delay. Well, not at all," said a Frenchman who was formerly a resident of Tunis.

"There are parts of the desert where ducks abound, flourish and multiply with every evidence of perfect satisfaction. The fowl is slightly different from any of the varieties we know in this country, but it has the same flat bill, extensive breast and web feet, showing that it was once a water bird, though now it scarcely finds enough to drink and has become too provident to waste any of the precious fluid in ablutions. Like the other good Mussulmans of the country, they take their prescribed bath in the sand, and their web feet come in very handy as snowshoes to walk upon the deep yielding dust. It is claimed by an eminent French ornithologist that the Saharan ducks are the remains of a race of aquatic birds which frequented those seas when the present desert was a part of the Atlantic ocean."

Changed His Tune.

It is said that when President Polk visited Boston he was impressively received at Faneuil Hall market. The clerk walked in front of him down the length of the market announcing in loud tones: "Make way, gentlemen, for the president of the United States. The president of the United States! Fellow citizens, make room!"

The chief had stepped into one of the stalls to look at some game, when the clerk turned round suddenly and, finding himself alone, suddenly changed his tone, and exclaimed: "My gracious! Where has that darned idiot got to?"

Washington, Aug. 16.—Admiral Winfield S. Schley arrived in the city from his home in New York last night on business connected with the coming court of inquiry asked by him in regard to the Santiago campaign. He was accompanied by Mrs. Schley. The admiral did not register at his hotel, and it was not generally known that he was in the city. He remained in his room during most of the evening. He smilingly declined to make any statement bearing upon the work soon to be begun by the court. During his stay here the admiral will consult with Hon. Jeremiah Wilson and his other attorneys as to the conduct of the case. It is expected his presence will be required here for several days.

COUNTERFEIT GOLD.

GILDING POWDERS ARE MADE OF COPPER AND SPELTER.

How the Material That Gives the Shining, Metallic Finish to Mirror and Picture Frames Is Produced. Gold Leaf Without Gold.

How many persons who see the shining gold in colored printing and on mirror and picture frames know that gold does not enter at all into the composition of the stuff that produces these golden effects?

The shining metallic effect is produced by a fine powder made from a mixture of bronze and spelter. This offers the cheapest and best means of giving the rich surface demanded in wall papers, printing, lithography, frescoing and in a vast range of manufactured articles of wood, paper and iron.

The material used is so called Dutch metal, an alloy of copper and spelter. The relative proportions are varied to produce different colors. The larger the percentage of spelter the lighter or more yellowish will be the tint of the alloy.

The copper and spelter are smelted in graphite crucibles containing about 400 pounds of metal, which, when completely fused, is run off into molds, forming half round ingots two feet long by half an inch in thickness. After cooling these are bound into bundles and sent to the rolling mill, where they are passed cold nine times through a double set of steel rolls under enormous pressure. This flattens them and draws them out into thin ribbons from 50 to 60 feet long and something more than one inch wide. Cold rolling under such extreme pressure makes the metal brittle, so it passes to the annealing furnace, which is heated by wood fire, as the sulphur in coal or coke would be injurious to the ribbons.

Having been softened and rendered ductile by annealing, they are cleansed in an acid bath, cut into lengths of about three feet and collected in bundles of 40 or 50 strips each. They are laid between sheets of zinc and passed under hammers which beat the metal strips to the thinness of tissue paper. This requires six successive beatings, and great skill must be exercised to produce a uniform and unbroken foil. After the third beating the metal strips are taken from between the sheets of zinc, loosened from each other and cleansed by immersion in a bath of tartrate of potassium. The cleaning is repeated after the last beating, and the sheets are hung on lines to dry. In the beginning the rolled strips are a dull gray metallic color, at the fourth beating the yellowish color begins to show, and after the sixth they are clear and bright as gold.

The defective leaves are then thrown out and the perfect ones cut into small squares, which are laid together by hand in packets of several hundred each and inclosed within an envelope of sheet brass. The packets return to the annealing furnace, where they are softened by heating and slow cooling, and then go to the beaters, where they are reduced under flattening hammers to the thinness of real gold leaf, so thin that it can be blown away by the breath.

The manufacture of bronze powder consists in grading, clipping and pulverizing the various bronze foils to an even, impalpable powder and is an industry of comparatively recent date. It began as a means of using up and utilizing the imperfect leaves which came as waste from the beaters of gold, silver and bronze. These were cut by hand into fine clippings and then ground to powder in hand mills of simple construction. With the lapse of time and the spread of artistic industries the uses of bronze powder increased until the demand far outran the supply of waste, and the leaf metal is now made on a large scale.

The beating process flattens out a pound of copper and spelter alloy to an area of about 500 square feet, and in this condition the square sheets as they come from the brass envelopes are sheared into small fragments and rubbed with olive oil through a steel sieve having ten meshes to the inch and then passed to the stamping and grinding machines, where they are pulverized by steam or water power to the bronze powder of commerce. The grinding occupies from one to four hours, according to the grade or quality of the powder to be produced, which is of four grades, from coarse to superfine. The superfluous oil is removed by heating under pressure, and the powder is then carried into centrifugal clarifiers, or grading machines, which, turning at a high speed, expel the powder through fine orifices in the form of dust, which settles on inclosed shelves, according to weight and fineness, the finer particles at the top, the coarser below, and in this way the powder is divided into its various grades.—New York Press.

Mother—Sir, I hope my little boy doesn't worry you by his fretting and crying. He isn't well, or he wouldn't act so.

Eggshell Flowerpots.

Eggshells may be used to advantage in starting delicate plants for transplanting. The half shells are filled with earth and set in a box also containing dampened earth. A hole is made in the point of the shell to allow drainage. A single seed is then planted in each shell, which is easily broken when transplanting is done without the slightest disturbance of roots. This use of eggshells is the discovery of a French gardener, who claims that they are vastly superior to the little pots generally used for the purpose by florists.

HARD ON THE NERVES

RUNNING TRAINS OVER MOUNTAIN ROADS IS RISKY WORK.

It Takes Youth and Strength and Courage to Hold an Engineer's Job on One of These Brain Whirling, Nerve Racking Runs.

"One of the greatest difficulties of the real mountain roads, like the Colorado Midland, the Rio Grande Western and the Denver and Rio Grande, is in getting engineers," said the city passenger agent of the Rio Grande Western road. This gentleman is familiar with all the intermountain roads, where the trains have to all but fly to reach some of their destinations.

"One might suppose that all roads would look alike to the experienced engineer, but they don't. Along some of the prairie roads an engineer can take a run on any new track almost as well as on one he has traveled for years and knows with his eyes shut. But here in the west it is different. Down in Colorado, where are some of the greatest monuments to the railroad builder that have ever been erected, an engineer has to travel over the roads sometimes for weeks with old, experienced engineers who know the track before he will be trusted with a train. It isn't a question of engineering ability; merely one of experience.

"It is enough to take a fellow's nerve to sweep around some of those mountain curves and passes for the first time. Some good men never take more than their first ride. I have seen engineers come from the east, men of gilt edge character and ability, who lost their nerve with the first trip and took the first train for a flatter country. Dizzy reverse curves, trestles that seem to totter in the wind, precipices that seem to yawn for a fellow's life and grades that are a revelation of horror to the newcomer crowd in bewildering confusion on the view, and unless a fellow is as stolid as an ox or nervy as the mischief he is apt to lose his head.

"You would be surprised at the number of young engineers who are on the mountain roads. For one thing, a man does not last there as he does on a less picturesque, more prosaic run. It takes youth and strength and courage of a rare order to stand it all. The companies are the most appreciative in the world, for they realize how hard it is to get a good man, and they treat a good man right royally. But even this does not attract a surplus of the right sort.

"The principal dangers are in the heavy grades and in the sharp curves, though landslides are far from unknown. One must know his train and his road like a book to get through with his life on the Marshall pass, for instance, where you seem to plunge headlong down the mighty hill. A rock on the track, a broken wheel, a runaway car or a failure of the brakes to work would end in a smash up that would startle the whole country. The hill might be a glare of ice or frost, it might be wet or snowy, and if you set the airbrake too hard so as to start the wheels to sliding down the hill you go like a gigantic toboggan, with death and destruction at the end of the ride. The management of the airbrake and knowing where the curves and dangerous places are is the greatest part of an engineer's education in the mountains.

"For my own part, knowing the dangers as I do, I feel nervous after riding 100 miles over the wildest parts of the roads even as a passenger. I rode through the Royal gorge on the engine a few weeks ago and was glad when the ride was over. It makes a fellow feel trembly like to think what might be, though the worst rarely happens. Such is the care taken in equipment and in getting the best men that the mountain roads have as small a proportion of losses as the dead level roads of the plains. But it takes a man of nerve to pilot a train through some of the wilder regions.

"A freight train is the worst, in that it is much heavier than a passenger and is expected to make almost the same time. All the heavy stock trains going east, 25 to 30 cars, make passenger schedule. A freight is so loosely coupled as to be, very unmanageable at critical points. The stock trains are the terror of the engine drivers and all the trainmen.

"A fellow isn't necessarily a coward when he throws up his job as engineer over the mountain roads, after seeing what the dangers are. Not one passenger in 10,000 would assume the same danger. The position calls for absolutely steady nerve, and one who feels that he is likely to get rattled is dangerous to himself, to the company and to all who ride behind him. A man must think and act like lightning in the face of so many dangers that he must be sure of his ability to stand the strain. No one stays any great number of years. It is beyond one's power to do so and be safe. A man may be brave and willing and all that, but these are not enough. He must be sure and proof against stampede. Such a man is worth everything to the companies, and they treat him like a prince."—Butte Inter-Mountain.

A Black Flower.

Fame and fortune await the ingenious horticulturist who can suceed in producing a flower that is entirely black, a problem that has hitherto defied the efforts that have been made in that direction for more than three centuries past, for, notwithstanding the sensational novel of Alexandre Dumas, entitled "The Black Tulip," there is no such thing as a really black flower in existence, although almost every color and shade of the rainbow is present in flowers and blossoms.

Deceitful.

"But she looks so confiding."

"That's just what makes her so horrid. When you get to know her, you find that she has nothing to confide."

Mary's Fractious Sister.

"I suppose your baby sister cries some?" asked one of the neighbors. "Cries!" said Mary. "Why, she just seems to look on the dark side of things all the time!"—Youth's Companion.

THE OLDEST ORNAMENTS.

Beads, First Used by Savages, Are Still In Vogue.

Beads are certainly the most ancient of all forms of the bedecking of the body unless we except the field and forest blossoms.

Nobody knows who first invented beads. Perhaps it was some primitive savage who found nuts or oak balls in the forest, drilled by the wood worm, and threaded them together on a stalk of grass. Anything and everything with a hole in it served at the beginning for beads—cowrie shells, fish teeth, claws of beasts, striped and spotted seeds and the like. But the great age of beads began with the invention of glass, and the Egyptians, Carthaginians and Phœnicians generally were skilled craftsmen at beadmaking. Their methods were much the same as may be seen today in Venice or any other chief seat of the art.

It would astonish many new wearers of beads to learn how immense is their production and how wide their distribution. Venice alone has long been accustomed to send forth every ten years 320,000 quintals of beads, worth 65,000 lire, and in many other spots a steady manufacture is always proceeding to supply the insatiable demands of Zanzibar. The dusky belle must have her ornaments substantial, since they will pass through many a rude proof in cave and kraal. And your well made venetian bead will practically last forever, unchanged in beauty. There must be plenty of beads worn at this day in Africa which were left there by the traders of King Solomon, who trafficked to Ophir, or those more daring mariners of Tyre and Sidon who sailed for trade to the land of Punt and perhaps even to the Zambezi river.—London Mail.

For Whooping Cough

"Both my children were taken with whooping cough," writes Mrs. O. E Dutton, of Danville, Ill. "A small bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar cured the cough and saved me a doctor's bill. J. J. Orr.

The Toothpick Habit.

"I'd like to know what my customers do with all the toothpicks they carry away," remarked a restaurant proprietor the other day. "Few men take a single toothpick. Most of them take half a dozen and many a whole handful, and when they come in here again for the next meal they take as many over again. They don't need them. It's all due to the toothpick chewing habit, which seems to be growing. There isn't anything particularly pleasant about chewing a wooden toothpick, and it may be injurious if a piece of the wood lodges in the throat or gets down into the stomach, as it is very apt to. But the toothpick chewing habit is becoming a rival to the gum and tobacco habits. The only reason I can give for it is that the toothpicks are free and gum and tobacco are not."—New York Sun.

Mr. Daniel Bantz, Otterville, Ia. says: "Have had asthma and a very bad cough for years, but could get no relief from the doctors and medicines I tried, until I took Foley's Honey and Tar. It gave immediate relief, and done me more good than all the other remedies combined. J. J. Orr.

The Celebrated "Leaf Ant."

One of the oddest little creatures in all animal nature is the "leaf ant" of Central America. Although different species of this oddity are known to inhabit the American continent from Brazil to Mexico, the real home of the true leaf ant is in Nicaragua. To all outward appearances this little insect is a common ant, but one of gigantic size, it must be admitted, when compared with the ants of our temperate regions, being on an average over an inch in length. The habit for which these ants are so celebrated, and one which we could hardly believe were it not for the testimony of reputable naturalists, is that of carrying a leaf for a sunshade, just as our women and men carry parasols and umbrellas for the same purpose.

When at work, the leaf carrying ants look like a little army in which each individual member is protected from the sun's rays by a little banner of green. Another remarkable fact in connection with the leaf carrier is that only those at work carry the little leafy protection. When a long file of burden bearers have deposited their budgets, they discard their parasols and return for a load without the leaf which made them such conspicuous objects when on the "up trip."

Probably every child cherishes it against his parents that they once gave him a calf, and kept the money when they sold it.—Atchison Globe.

A GENTLE HINT.

In our style of climate, with its sudden changes of temperature,—rain, wind and sunshine often intermingled in a single day,—it is no wonder that our children, friends and relatives are so frequently taken from us by neglected colds, half the death resulting directly from this cause. A bottle of Boschee's German Syruy kept about home for immediate use will prevent serious sickness, a large doctor's bill, and perhaps death, by the use of three or four doses. For curing Consumption Hemorrhages, Pneumonia, Severe Coughs, Croup, or any disease of the Throat or Lungs, its success is simply wonderful, as your druggist will tell you. Devastating Power of Locusts.

A swarm of these insects stopped the advance of a Russian army. They filled the air and blinded both officers and men, so that the former could give no orders, and even if they had done so the men could not have obeyed them. The horses would not face them, and they lay on the ground many inches thick. Every man and horse in the army was incrusted with the insects, and their clothing was literally eaten off the men as they stood helpless and blinded. The railways were useless, as the locusts covered the rails, and the oil which exuded from their bodies when crushed prevented the driving wheels from "biting." After they had settled whole regiments were detached for the purpose of trampling them to death. Trenches were dug across their path and filled with burning coals, but the crowding swarms actually smothered the fire, so vast were their numbers.

Even in a little island like Cyprus in one year one-fifth of the entire revenue was spent in destroying the locusts, and especially their eggs. When these eggs are laid, they are inclosed in a horny envelope called a "pod," each pod containing 35 eggs. In seven months 1,330 tons of pods were destroyed. Now, a single ton of pods contains 60,000,000 eggs, and yet, in spite of this almost incredible destruction, the locusts are still a dreadful plague and show little if any symptoms of diminution in numbers.

Expenses of a Yacht Owner.

There is no question that modern luxury has reached its most extravagant pinnacle in yachting, which, in the elaborate profusion of its expense, brings us very close to the latter days of the Roman empire. Take a single case. A boat like Colonel Payne's 650 ton yacht Aphrodite carries a company of 60 men—captain, first and second mates, carpenter, chief steward, assistant steward, 2 bedroom stewards, pantryman, chief cook, 2 assistant cooks, chief engineer, 3 assistant engineers, 3 oilers, 15 firemen and 19 men before the mast. —Leslie's Monthly.

FOND OF THE GIRLS.

The Love Affairs of the Father of His Country.

George Washington's love affairs began at a very early age, and he was to the day of his death "fond of the girls." The first sweetheart was one Mary Bland, with whom he fell in love when he was only 14 years of age. This is ascertained from an entry in one of his diaries, where he refers to her as his "lowland beauty." Having tired of Mary, he wrote to a friend that he had decided to "bury his chaste and troublesome passion," which, having done, he soon found himself enamored of Lucy Cary, a sister-in-law of Colonel Fairfax. His affection for this young lady lasted for some years, being only interrupted now and again by his natural Virginia passion of making love to every pretty girl whom he met.

In 1752 his first serious love affair was shattered. Having fallen in love with a certain Miss Betsy Fauntleroy, he determined to ask her to become his wife, but the fates had destined him to marry another, for she rejected his proposals. He afterward came back to her, but found that she had not changed her mind on that score.

His next heartache was caused by a girl in New York after he had become a colonel. She was the heiress Mary Phillipse. His business called him away from her; but, having finished this, he returned to New York and proposed to her, but was here, as before, disappointed by her refusal.

In 1758 at Waynes Ferry, while traveling to Williamsburg with dispatches, he met his future wife, Mrs. Martha Dandridge Custis, the widow of Daniel Park Custis. We learn from history that she was young, pretty, intelligent and rich. He had been with her all of an afternoon and was to ride away to his home the next morning. On his way he stopped at her home and then and there told of his love and asked her to become his mate for life.

This time, contrary to his previous proposals, he was accepted.—Chicago Times-Herald.

His Test.

A dealer in pictures who makes it his business to find as many new painters as possible, both in this country and abroad, was asked in regard to his methods of selecting pictures to buy. He was very frank in his talk, and one thing which he said is shrewd enough to be worth quoting.

"Of course," he said, "with my experience I am able to judge whether there is promise in a painter's work, but I never buy with any idea of putting the painter on my list until I have seen the man and talked with him myself. I always watch him closely, and I never buy his pictures unless his eye lights up when I talk to him about his work and about his profession."

The artist whose heart was really in his work could not discuss it without kindling, and the man who did not paint from the heart was not the one whose pictures the dealer wanted.

HEAD-END COLLISION.

Smashup on the P. M. at Flint and Another at Reed City.

Flint, Mich., Aug. 23.—Passenger trains Nos. 10 and 1, on the Pere Marquette, met in head-end collision at 5 o'clock yesterday near Thread Creek, Mich. No. 10, from Detroit, is due here as No. 1 leaves Flint for Detroit. The former was delayed at Grand Blanc 20 minutes by a freight. Engineer O'Brien, for 38 years on the road, misread his order, which was to meet No. 1 at Thread Creek. O'Brien read it to meet No. 1 at Flint. He had five minutes for a run of nine miles. Engine No. 55, of No. 10, was derailed and the pilots of both engines smashed. No one was hurt. Yard engines took the trains on.

Reed City, Mich., Aug. 23.—A rear-end collision occurred yesterday morning on the Pere Marquette railroad between an extra train with two coaches and an eastbound freight, smashing one engine, one caboose and six freight cars, breaking one rib of the passenger engineer, J. Schmidt, and cutting a bad gash in the forehead of the train boy, T. H. Postal. Both trains were in motion, the extra going about 25 miles an hour, and the freight starting east. The freight train ran to Evart before learning of the collision. It is claimed that the rear lights on the caboose had gone out.

Valuable Relic Recovered.

Howell, Mich., Aug. 23.—The 34th annual reunion of the 22nd Michigan infantry was held here yesterday. About 100 were present. Owosso was selected for the next meeting. Officers elected were: President, T. M. Wiley of Owosso; second vice-president, Geo. W. Button of Flushing; secretary, Wm. Dailey of Detroit; treasurer, Hiram Daniels of Birmingham. The veterans were delighted to get back the historic cow bell taken at Pontiac, and carried through the war. It was captured at Chickamauga by the rebels and recaptured. Since the death of Warren Baker his widow, near Howell, has kept the bell. It is now the property of the regiment.

Vacation Will Do Him Good.

Owosso, Mich., Aug. 23.—The official board of the First M. E. church has granted Rev. J. P. Varner, pastor, 60 days vacation, and he will soon start west. The reason for going is given as recuperation. Mr. Varner is the preacher who has upheld the mayor, and on several occasions sensationally attacked the saloons during the recent harvest festival, the city attorney and other officials from his pulpit. Recently he received an anonymous letter threatening him with a horsewhipping and tar and feathers if he did not desist from mixing in city politics. Last Sunday's sermon by Mr. Varner was not sensational. His many friends deny that he is leaving because of the letter writers.

M. E. Conference.

Adrian, Mich., Aug. 23.—The Southern Michigan conference of the Free Methodist church is being held here this week, with Bishop E. P. Hart of Armada, Cal., in charge. Over 50 delegates and about as many more visitors are in attendance. The district includes the two lower tiers of counties in Michigan, and much interest is being taken in this work. At the business meeting yesterday Rev. L. H. Mulholland of Kalamazoo and Rev. W. C. Muffit of Pioneer were appointed traveling elders. The appointments for the conference will be made Saturday.

Ypsi's Colored Population.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Aug. 23.—A report from the census bureau shows that in Ann Arbor city 12,190 persons were born in this county and 2,329 were born in foreign lands, making one out of every six to be a foreigner. In Ann Arbor one out of every 39 is a colored person, while in Ypsilanti one out of every 12 is of African descent. In the entire state the proportion is 1 to 110, showing that this section is a haven for the negroes. An odd thing about Ypsilanti is that there are exactly 307 males and 307 females in the colored population.

Man Hunt at Niles.

Niles, Mich., Aug. 23.—Robert Hughes, ex-convict and desperado, is being pursued by a posse, headed by Chief Francis. He is reckless and daring, and the officers anticipate trouble. He is wanted in Mishawaka, Ind., for robbing a till of $18 during the street fair last week. Hughes was sent to Jackson for 11 years, six years ago, for sandbagging and robbing an aged farmer at Berrien Springs, but after serving five years was pardoned by the late Gov. Pingree.

Should Have Tar and Feathers.

Niles, Mich., Aug. 23.—Much indignation has been aroused here by the action of an ananymous letter writer, who has been sending letters to the Berrien county commissioner of schools, under-rating the character of local school teachers. A coat of tar and feathers would doubtless be applied to the party could his identity be discovered. The commissioner has sent the letters to the maligned teachers.

Cigar Factory Strictly Union.

Owosso, Mich., Aug. 23.—George H. Graham, proprietor of one of the largest cigar factories here, has notified the trade that after Monday he would conduct a strictly union factory. He was the last manufacturer in the city to hold out. Unionism has been very strong in Owosso since a branch of the American Federation of Labor was organized here a few months ago.

Upper Peninsula Veterans.

Marquette, Mich., Aug. 23.—The sixth annual reunion of the Upper Peninsula Veterans' association was held here Thursday. A. C. Mead of Negaunee was elected president, and Ishpeming was designated as the next meeting place. About 100 old soldiers from all parts of northern Michigan attended the meeting. A campfire was held in the opera house last evening.

Noblesse Oblige.

"What are you staring at, Nellie?"

"Oh, please, ma'am, with your hair like that and your diamonds you do look so like Lady Plantagenet Gingham that I was own maid to! Are you any relation, ma'am?"

"No—at least no near relation. But you can have that pink silk shirt waist of mine, Nellie."—Life.

ITALIANS AND AMERICANS FIGHT.

Shooting of Italian Laborer May Lead to Complications With Italy.

Texarkana, Ark., Aug. 23.—An Italian named Ginggotti was killed near Ashdown, 20 miles north of here, yesterday, and the killing is likely to develop into an international affair. For some time the Kansas City Southern railway has had a large force of Italian laborers at work on its line near Ashdown.

The trouble began with a fight between the Italians and an American crew. One Italian was knocked down with a club by an American. The Italian drew a knife and stabbed his assailant. Subsequently an Italian foreman was attacked and badly beaten. Later a crowd of armed men, between 50 and 60, ordered the Italians from the cars, telling them to "line up." It was then that some one fired a Winchester, killing Ginggotti instantly. The dead man had nothing to do with the first fight and the Italians are greatly incensed. The Italian ambassador at Washington has been notified and further developments are expected.

FELL FROM HIS BALOON

New York, Aug. 23.—Benjamin Benjamin, an aeronaut, fell from his balloon while making an ascension at the Hoboken, N. J., Scheutzen park. Failure of the parachute to work caused the accident. Benjamin fell possibly 300 feet into the Hackensack meadows and probably saved his life, as he landed in mud and water, sinking up to his neck. A boatman rescued him. His injuries arose not only from shock of the fall, but from the onslaught of myriads of mosquitoes, which attacked him as he was stuck in the mud and whose stings made his features unrecognizable.

Oil Fire Cost Half a Million.

Philadelphia, Aug. 23.—The fire which started at the works of the Atlantic Refining Co. at Point Breeze, on the Schuylkill river front in southwestern section, burned itself out yesterday. Vice-President Lloyd of the company estimates the loss at about $500,000. Four tanks containing about 200,000 barrels of oil were destroyed. One pumping station and thousands of feet of pipe were rendered useless, but the most important machinery is intact. It has been definitely learned that the two employes of the company said to have lost their lives in the explosion early Tuesday morning are safe. This reduces the death list to three firemen.

Lockout on a Newspaper.

Columbus, O., Aug. 23.—The Press-Post printers refused yesterday to set news furnished by a local news bureau, and the paper appeared in the evening filled with miscellany. The news department of the paper having been abolished, the News Writers' union has declared a lockout at the establishment, and last night the printers decided that hereafter they will set nothing but editorials and advertisements until the trouble between the proprietor and the News Writers' union shall be settled. The action of the printers is approved by the local typographical union.

Big Fight a Sure Go.

San Francisco, Aug. 23.—James J. Jeffries and Gus Ruhlin have signed articles with the Twentieth Century Athletic club for a 20-round contest in the early part of November, the date to be fixed later. The club guarantees the fighters 62½ per cent of the receipts. The selection of the referee was left open.

Archbishop Keane Sick.

Dubuque, Ia., Aug. 23.—Late advices from Archbishop Keane are that his home-coming would be delayed a month or more. The archbishop is slightly indisposed in Germany, and he has been advised not to come home until after the hot season. He has a slight attack of stomach trouble.

Only Two Killed.

El Reno, O. T., Aug. 23.—The latest dispatch from Anadarko states that only two persons, W. T. Tevis of Weatherford, Tex., and Felix Antone of Lamar county, Texas, were killed in the storm Wednesday evening. The damage to property is $4,000.

New Steel Steamer.

Cleveland, O., Aug. 23.—Messrs. H. A., W. A. and Arthur Hawgood of Cleveland has placed an order with the American Shipbuilding Co. for a 6,200-ton steel steamer to cost $275,000. The boat will be built at Lorain and will be ready for use next May.

Hog Fasted Five Weeks.

Climax, Mich., Aug. 23.—Frank Pierce, living near this place, lost a hog over five weeks ago, and when he threshed this week he found it under a mow of wheat, still alive but very poor. After giving it some water it revived and will live.

Injured by Dynamite.

Lapeer, Mich., Aug. 23.—While Seth Griffin of Burnside was blasting stumps with dynamite he lost a hand and was badly wounded in the body by a premature explosion. His injuries are critical.

Word from Baltimore, Md., announces the death of former Congressman Isaac W. Van Schaick, formerly of Milwaukee. Paralysis of the brain was the immediate cause of death. He was 84 years old.

A FIGHT FOR LIFE

Small Posse Give Battle to Mob of Four Hundred

TWO MEN FATALLY INJURED

He Had Accidentally Caused a Pile of Rails to Topple Over on Him, Pinning Him to the Ground—His Faithful Dog Stayed By Him.

Asheville, N. C., Aug. 23.—One man was killed and another fatally wounded in a battle here yesterday to save the negro Jim Brown from the vengeance of a mob after he had been tried and sentenced to be hanged on Sept. 20 for rape.

Killed: Walter Blankenship.

Wounded: Arthur Blankenship.

A small boy, the son of James Hanley, slightly wounded.

The Blankenships were brothers, and are said to have been in town since Monday trying to stir up trouble. Walter died within two hours after being shot, and the other is in a precarious condition.

The judge tried to cool the anger of the crowd after every detail of the crime was told by the witnesses for the state. There was no evidence for the defense. Brown said afterwards in his confession, there was nothing the witnesses he had summoned could say in his behalf.

The clash with the sheriff came in half an hour after Judge Pelham had pronounced the sentence. By a ruse the court room was cleared of half of its angry occupants. The remaining half was surly and seemed bent on mischief. At the request of Judge Pelham, J. L. Garrett, the father of the girl outraged by Brown, mounted a table and spoke, counselling peace. He said he hardly addressed the assembly as his friends and neighbors before he broke down in tears. In concluding his appeal he said:

"If you have any respect for my feelings, if I can have any weight in your hearts, let me urge you as good citizens to go home and obey the law, and I will never cease to thank you from the bottom of my heart."

After some difficulty the court room was cleared. The sheriff thought it unwise to attempt to take Brown to the jail, a few blocks away, for the crowd was rapidly increasing around the front door of the court house. Twenty-eight deputies armed with pistols and shotguns, were stationed in the front hall and at the windows of the court room. The first sign of an outbreak came when one man from the outside, with a pistol in his hand, started to mount the stairway. He was followed by two or three others. Several shots were exchanged and the mob leaders retreated to the outside when two members began firing into the windows. Arthur Blankenship was hit first and his brother was shot while emptying his revolver in the direction of the windows above.

A hard rain began falling. The bodies of the wounded were removed and the crowd scattered about in front of the stores across the street. The officers took advantage of this lull and spirited the negro away in charge of two special deputies. He was gotten safely aboard a freight train for Birmingham.

The crime for which Brown will hang was committed on May 7 near Springville, within a quarter of a mile from the house of the Garretts. Brown left the vicinity at once, first going to Birmingham, and then to Anniston and Atlanta, and finally to Charleston, S. C., where he was captured.

Referee for the Big Fight.

San Francisco, Aug. 23.—A hitch has arisen in the arrangements for the proposed Jeffries-Ruhlin fight. When the fighters' representatives met today those of the local clubs, no stated bids for the fight were in evidence. It was announced that the clubs had agreed not to put in bids until certain clauses of the agreement made by Ruhlin and Jeffries Tuesday should be modified. The clubs wish to have the $2,500 bond clause eliminated, also the one pertaining to the referee. The clubs object to George Siler for referee, on the ground that the supervisors will not issue a permit for the contest if a referee shall be chosen outside of the state.

It also developed that the clubs have an understanding with each other and are willing to give up 65 per cent of the receipts. Madden and Delaney are holding out for 65 per cent and $500 training expenses.

Rise of the Colored Man.

Chicago, Aug. 22.—Interesting testimony as to the gradual but certain rise of the colored man in business and industrial pursuits was given yesterday at the second session of the National Negro Business league. The keynote of the entire meeting was the ability of the negro to overcome obstacles and to lead a successful and satisfactory career. Some of the men who took part in the discussions were slaves 35 years ago; others were of a later generation and had received a business or special education. All told how the negro, with the exercise of fortitude, patience and by use of honest methods, can surely succeed. Officers will be chosen today and resolutions adopted.

Killing Was Justifiable.

Pittsburg, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Robert Lees, who was held for the killing of the Hebrew peddler, Robert Nogler during a quarrel at the home of Mrs. Grace Woods, was exonerated from all blame in connection with the stabbing of the man at the coroner's inquest yesterday. The jury was out but 10 minutes. The verdict stated that Nogler was killed by the woman in self-defense, and the killing was justifiable.

Crying and Groaning.

According to a French physician, crying and groaning in pain are nature's own methods of subduing the keenness of physical suffering. He thinks that men should freely relieve their sufferings in this way and that crying in children should not be repressed, as in doing so serious consequences may be engendered.

Lycurgus being asked why, in his laws, he had set down no punishment for ingratitude, answered, "I have left it to the gods to punish."

STATE TREASURER IN TROUBLE.

Jackson, Miss., Aug. 23.—Gov. Longino has issued a statement of the condition of the state treasury, showing that on Aug. 15 he found, by actual count, $677,846 when the books called for $840,468, a shortage of $162,621. Treasurer Stowers was, however allowed cridit for due bills, drafts, etc., amounting to $55,000, leaving the shortage $107,261.

The governor then states: "I indulged the hope that the shortage would be replaced if opportunity and time were given before the result of said count was made public, and that the state might thus recover the money without further trouble, explanation or loss. I, therefore, in the interest of the state, enjoined secrecy on those present in the whole proceedings and agreed with Mr. Stowers that I would make another count of the money on Tuesday, Aug. 20. On the date fixed I made the count. It was then found that cash and drafts on hand balanced with the books, which called for $905,914. The governor closed the statement by saying:

"The condition of the funds in the treasury when said count is made, as required of me by section 1335 of the constitution, and in my opinion the books of the treasury show a correct statement of the amounts which should have been in the treasury on the said 15th and 20th days of August, 1901, respectively, and before doing or saying anything more on the subject I suggest that Mr. Stowers (the treasurer) be given full opportunity and time for explanation in the matter as he may see fit."

The publication of this report created no end of excitiment. Mr. Stowers declined to make a statement.

NO WAR IN COLOMBIA

Washington, Aug. 23.—The Colombian minister, Dr. Nartinex Silva, discussed the dispatches received by the Associated Press from President Alfaro of Ecuador. "The point to be noticed," said Dr. Silva, "is that they do not treat war as existing. The message from President Alfaro expressly states that war between Colombia and Venezuela is improbable," and he adds that such conflicts as have occurred growing out of the union between the conservatives in both republics are of a transitory character.

"The dispatch from Gen. Castro's secretary also indicates clearly that no war exists. It states that the conservatives of Colombia have resolved to assist in a revolutionary move against Venezuela and her government. From this it would be observed that the basis of the affair is revolutionary movement against Venezuela, and of course such a movement is an internal affair of Venezuela with which Colombia has no concern. Altogether, the messages seem to be reassuring as to the fact that no actual war in the sense accepted by international authorities, exists or is probable. I am perfectly sure that in the revolutions in Venezuela there is not one Colombian."

Peculiar Tax Question.

Washington, Aug. 23.—A peculiar internal revenue tax question has arisen in the case of Louisa A. Chance, who, by her father's will, was left the income on $20,000 for life. Mrs. Chance died a short time after her father, and before she had received any benefit from her interest, when the whole amount passed absolutely to three grand-daughters as reversionary legatees. The question involved was whether under these circumstances the life interest was taxable. The commissioner holds that it is and says it is the life tenant's expectancy of living, as shown by approved tables, which determines the value of the life interest.

Strike Helps England.

London, Aug. 23.—The writer of an article in the Standard today, reviewing the British iron trade, considers that there is every prospect of a considerable revival in the autumn and winter. This revival, he thinks, will be helped by the heavy reduction in the prices of coal and coke and by the activity in shipbuilding. Moreover, in consequence of the Pittsburg strike, American consumers of finished goods, he asserts, are placing orders in Great Britain on quite a large scale.

Power Without Heat.

As we watch the world famous plunge of Niagara we are offered an impressive lesson as to the small value in heat of much motive power. In so far as the descent is perpendicular, so that the water leaves the foot of the falls with comparatively little current, the effect of the concussion is simply to warm the water through but one-sixth of a degree F. To heat the water as much as one degree the falls would have to be 777 feet in height.—George Iles in Everybody's Magazine.

The Day Was Quiet—Strikers Have Been Educated to Knowledge That Silence is Their Strongest Weapon —Steel Men Pleased.

Pittsburg, Aug. 23.—Aside from the partial equipment of the Star plant of the American Tinplate Co. and the preparation for its immediate resumption of the work, there was no special development in the strike situation in this city. No further trouble occurred at the Pennsylvania tube works, and at all other strike points quiet reigned. The Amalgamated people point with pride to the conduct of their members in restraining themselves from violence when they see non-unionists being marched into the mills to take their places. The incident at the Star plant yesterday morning is given as an example of especial significance, and to use an Amalgamated official's expression, shows that the men have been educated to the knowledge that their strongest weapon in such cases is silence and submission until it is demonstrated that the mills cannot be operated successfully without the aid of the skilled men now on strike. The steel men, on the other hand, are highly pleased with their success in manning the Star plant and say that if the men they secure are not molested it will be but a short time until all of their mills will be in full operation and doing good work. While the strikers claim that four of the new men at the Star plant have deserted the company and say that others would leave if they could get out of the mill, Supt. Harper maintains that he has 100 men at work; that none have deserted and that the men can go and come from the mill as they please. Mr. Harper says the plant will be in smooth running order today and he apprehends no further difficulty in its operation.

The Painter mill has 250 men at work and the management expects to be running full handed by next week. Two mills are being operated at the Lindsay and McCutcheon plant, one of them the 10-inch mill. No sign of a break in the Carnegie upper and lower union plants made its appearance. McKeesport is still completely tied up, but an attempt may be made to start the Demmler tin works with men secured from outside points. The strikers are still vigilant as pickets, but are keeping quiet and making no threats.

At Irondale the tinplate company gained another victory by the successful start of one set of rolls. There are said to be enough men in the plant to man one mill one turn and the company officials say now that the break has been made, they will get the men back.

A delegation of strikers from Wellsville have gone to Irondale with the intention of having a talk with the men at work and try to persuade them to quit.

At Amalgamated headquarters in this city the day dav devoted almost entirely to routine business and nothing of unusual importance occurred. President Shaffer says that no movement has as yet been made by either side looking to arbitration or mediation. No hint had come from the steel people on the subject and none had gone out from the workers. There was, however, a tendency among many of the labor leaders to discuss the possibility of arbitration, and on every side was heard mentioned the name of Gov. W. A. Stone as an arbitrator or conciliator, and it is said he will be asked to tender his good offices in this direction.

New York, Aug. 23.—The reported visit to this city of a delegation representing the commercial interests of Pittsburg for the purpose of effecting a settlement of the steel strike is received with much interest by the United States steel corporation. From what could be learned, neither President Schwab nor Chairman Gary will receive representatives of the strikers until they receive positive proof that such representatives are empowered to act for the strikers in any argument that may arise.

Three Million Acres for Sale.

Helena, Mont., Aug. 23.—Montana's auction sale of three million acres of state lands will commence in Carbon county, of which Red Lodge is the seat of government, on Sept. 18. Flathead county sales will begin Oct. 22. There are 55,000 acres in this county. Whether any intervening sales will be held has not yet been decided. The state land office is being flooded with inquiries as to the character of the land and terms of sale which are, briefly, that no land will be sold for less than $10 per acre, and if not sold will be leased to the highest bidder.

School Teachers Arrived Safely.

Washington, Aug. 23.—Col. Edwards, chief of the division of insular affairs, expressed his satisfaction today upon learning of the arrivel at Manila of the 500 teachers who sailed on the transport Thomas, as it practically marks the completion of the work of selecting American teachers for service in the Philippines. The great flood of inquiries and applications continues, but all are informed that Prof. Atkinson, the general superintendent at Manila, has cabled that no more appointments will be made.

Petition to Release Earl Russell.

London, Aug. 23.—In response to a largely signed petition recently forwarded to the home office asking for the release of Earl Russell, nationalist, serving imprisonment of three months for bigamy, Mr. Ritchie, the home secretary, writes that he can see no reason why he should interfere and that the health of the prisoner is satisfactory.

Astounded the Editor.

Editor S. A. Brown, of Bennettsville, S. C. was once immensely surprised. "Through long suffering from Dyspepsia," he writes, "my wife was greatly run down. Caused the Engineer of a G. T. R. Train to Investigate

NATHAN COLE THE VICTIM

The Court Had Passed Sentence and the Victim's Father Councilled For Peace—The Mob Were After the Prisoner, But They Missed Him.

Pontiac, Mich., Aug. 23.—Nathan Cole, a 14-year-old lad residing on a farm with his foster parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Cannon, north of this city, is dead as a result of being severely crushed under a pile of rails on the D., G. H. & M. railroad tracks Wednesday. Cole was awaiting the arrival of the morning train, when a pile of rails which he displaced in some manner, toppled over on him, pinning him to the ground. The barking of a shepherd dog, which accompanied young Cole to the rail pile, caused the engineer on the morning train to stop. Cole was taken from his precarious position and taken to Drayton Plains, where he was attended by a physician, who stated that he was internally injured. Later he was removed to his home, where he died of paralysis. The boy, who was the son of Charles Cole, formerly of this city, who died some years ago, it is said, was heir to a large estate, of which fact, however, he was not aware. The funeral will be held from the home Saturday afternoon.

Farmer Fooled Himself.

Owosso, Mich., Aug. 23.—Several months ago Josiah Steffes of Laingsburg loaned a neighboring farmer, Joseph Freeman, $200. He became anxious over the prospects of payment, and a month before the money was due swore out writs of attachment for about everything Freeman owned, including horses, binder, mower and wagon. He also cut Freeman's oat crop preparatory to hauling it away, when Freeman brought suit before Justice Rowley of Laingsburg for his property. Steffes's lawyer advised his client to settle, which he did by paying Freeman $25, returning all the latter's property and paying $35 fees and costs. He also left Freeman's oats neatly stacked, so that besides the money the latter is ahead the harvesting of his oat crop. Freeman says he will pay the $200 when he gets ready.

Of Interest to Business Men.

Jackson, Mich., Aug. 23.—Bartlett A. Nevins, representative from the first district of Allegan in the state legislature, is here in the interest of the State Business Men's association, which was behind Nevin's garnishee bill, and other bills of interest to business men in the last legislature. Jackson has a local organization.

"Michigan's exemption laws should be amended," Nevins says, "so that in qualified degrees, man and wife should be co-responsible for debt contracted by either. The present law was framed when the state was new, and evidently was intended to protect settlers, permitting them to stay here whether they paid their debts or not. This exemption law revision is a matter for the State Business Men's association to take up at the next session of the legislature."

Had a Long Walk.

Flint, Mich., Aug. 23.—Wellington Calhoun, a 14-year-old boy, reached the city Wednesday night on his way home from Ontario, where he was visiting, to Grand Rapids, his mother being sick. He had walked from Toronto, where his pockets were picked, to this city. His father was telegraphed to from here, and the boy started on the last part of his journey by rail. The boy said he had made the trip from Toronto to Flint in seven days.

Painful Accident.

Carleton, Mich., Aug. 23.—Benjamin Hall, Jr., a lumber dealer and proprietor of a brick yard, living two miles south of Flat Rock, met with a painful accident yesterday. While trying to operate a stone crusher in his brick yard he got his arm caught in the crusher, smashing his arm to the shoulder before help came. He was taken at once to Detroit by Dr. P. F. Hasley and his arm amputated.

Mine Leased for Twenty Years.

Negaunee, Mich., Aug. 23.—The owners' fee of the Negaunee mine, excepting the small portion recently sold by Samuel Mitchell to the United States steel corporation, have just given a lease, running 20 years, to George Maas, George Lonstorf and J. O. St. Clair, at a royalty of 30 cents per ton of ore mined and other considerations estimated at one dollar and upwards.

Organized Band of Horse Thieves.

Niles, Mich., Aug. 23.—The organized band of horse thieves operating throughout southwestern Michigan stole a valuable horse from the stable of C. B. Fritts. They also took a fine carriage from the stable of Charles Buts. The thieves are thought to have their headquarters in the recesses of the Kankakee swamp, just over the Michigan-Indiana state line.

Good Wheat in Genesee.

Flint, Mich., Aug. 23.—While the yield of wheat in Genesee county is slight, yet some good yields are reported. From 28 acres on his farm in Mundy, R. J. Whaley harvested an average of 31 bushels per acre and Alfred Gifford of Flint township reports an average yield of over 30 bushels from 12 acres.

when discrediting Langdon to refer to "the unimpeachable verdict of brother officers, gentlemen of unstained honor, which had cast him from the fold." Now it needed circumstantial instances with which to impeach these same brother officers of unstained honor, and who more likely to be in possession of numerous interesting facts or in readiness to part with them seriatim than the "kicked out captain," now needy, impoverished and presumably sore hearted? It was a reporter who brought Langdon the message that Mr. Manager wished to have a little talk with him, and Langdon went, silently took the chair to which he was affably waved after the preliminary tender of the handshake and smoke which the guileless Indian and the enterprising business man alike regard as indispensable to a council preparatory to mischief. Langdon listened without a word to a monologue that speedily became halting and embarrassed, for the blue gray eyes looked straight into the shifting orbs behind the steel rimmed spectacles, and under that silent, steady gaze the manager stumbled more and more, ending abruptly with: "Well, I merely suggest this. It is a line of work we thought you might care to take up. In your experience you must have encountered many and many a case that would substantiate the views we have expressed, and now that you are out of it all, and very unjustly, as we are informed, you probably wouldn't mind giving us the benefit of—of what you know."

"What I know of the officers of the army," said Langdon, rising, "is just the opposite of what you publish. In the one case out of 20 where you meet with a cad it is simply another instance of the exception proving the rule, which is that almost all their number are gentlemen—men of honor, conscience and character. I do not thank you for your offer. Good morning, sir."

"Your friend's a quixotic fool," said the managing editor to his subordinate that night. "But if you can get him to come and dine with me at the Union League do it. Bring him tonight if possible. I'd like to know more of him," which goes to show that the policy of a paper and the honor and conscience of a man are two very far different things. Eric wouldn't dine at the club. He said he could no longer get into his dress clothes, which was true, for he had sold them for one-third their value and one-tenth their cost. A yardmaster had no need of such toggery, he thought, but that was when he never dreamed that he should so soon lose that position or ever gain one infinitely higher.

CHAPTER XII.

The summer was going fast. The Big Horn was pushing on toward the wide northwest. The Seattle was grading the Sweetwater valley through far Wyoming. Brentwood shops were thronged with busy, grimy men; Brentwood elevators were bursting with grain; Brentwood streets were bustling with shoppers. Both railways were running to the full capacity every car they owned and many they didn't, but had pressed into service unbeknown to the owners as strays from the Burlington, the U. P., the St. Paul, the Northwestern and a dozen different alphabetical combinations descriptive of railway corporations in the wide west. Brentwood banks had never done such a business. Red Water farms were shedding mortgages as horses shed their winter coats. Some farmers were even clipping coupons with the wool from the backs of their sheep. An era of prosperity seemed to have dawned on the smiling Nebraska valley. All business, said The Banner, was booming. The coffers of the rival roads dishonorably expelled "for the good of the service." But the rifles had lost heart and interest. One of the officers had resigned. Most of their membership preferred paying fines to attending drills at which they learned nothing and Gunnison men came up, looked and snickered. "When that blow comes," said Mr. Banker Perrigo in excited speech at the business men's meeting, "we shall be absolutely without protection, for our sheriff has been replaced by one who is the open sympathizer of the strikers (which was true), and our one company of militia, thanks to who knows what insidious influence, is reduced to a mere handful. A vehement discussion followed, winding up with an astonishing attack at the hands of the ablest lawyer in Brentwood.

"That our one company has dwindled to a handful is as true as that its demoralization is due to no insidious influence whatever, but to the most regrettable interference of Mr. Perrigo himself, whose gold bought the captaincy for an utter incompetent and sold out the one man who deserved our whole support and gratitude, the man who alone was capable of putting and keeping that company up to the standard and whose treatment by the officials of the road he so gallantly and faithfully served and, not to put too fine a point upon it, by this community also is reproach unutterable to both."

Coming from a man who had been to congress from Kentucky and hoped to get there from Nebraska, these were bitter words. But most tonics are bitter, and Brentwood swallowed, reflected and profited. Colonel Cresswell, as he was called, in deference to the fact that he held no commission, but had served in the war, was not yet on the subsidized list of the Seattle, but as a rapidly rising lawyer he would doubtless soon find his price, railways, like other big corporations, employing only the best professional talent where the law is concerned.

Colonel Cresswell, to use his own terms, had "cottoned" to Langdon from the start. He admired his grit the day of the riots. He admired his drill when he handled the rifles. He liked what the yardmen said of him and what Boniface had told. He deprecated the language of the local press, but he was not yet firmly established in his profession and might need their aid if he ran for office, so he could not openly take issue with the papers. But he knew of the threats of the bad element among the men, the envy and jealousy of certain of the young aspirants for promotion on the road, and before that mysterious safe robbery he had been keeping an eye on Langdon, giving him occasional word of cheer, occasional hint of warning. Ever since the robbery and Langdon's sad departure from their midst he had been ceaselessly and secretly at work in the effort to detect the guilty parties. He had his theories and was bent on pushing them through.

Another gathering of business men followed within a week, called for by most alarming resolutions at the biggest mass meeting yet held in Brentwood. Bonfires had burned in the public square, and great orators of the labor party spoke in the silence of the September evening to thousands of listening, eager ears and ceased amid thunderous applause.

"Where is your Mr. Langdon?" anxiously queried the mayor in a swift aside to Mr. Cresswell that night.

"In Sioux City, slaving at a shilling an hour—teaching," was the answer.

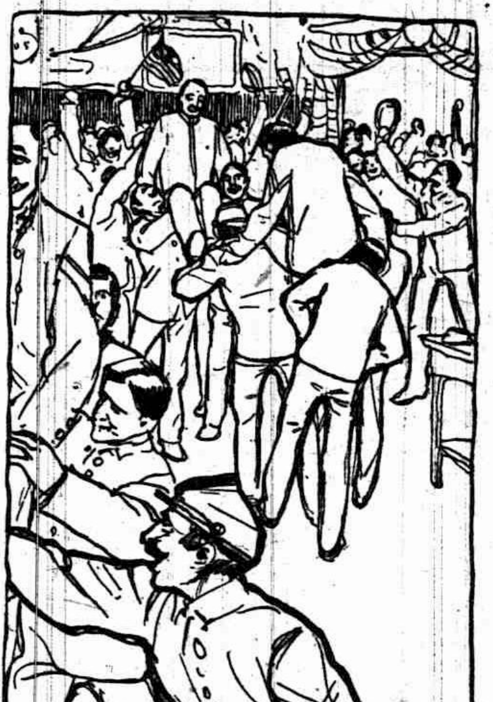
"Well, get him out here quick. I can't give him anything in my office, as you well understand, but you can, and we'll make up a purse if I have to go down into my pockets for every cent of it."

And so it happened that Eric Langdon, whiter, thinner, even shabbier in raiment than when he left, came back to Brentwood, and after a conference where only five men were present—Cresswell, Boniface, Armstrong, the editor, and Bingham, the mayor—the returned wanderer took a desk in Cresswell's anteroom and took up again the study of law, to which he had been devoting his evenings. Then Perrigo senior was advised to induce his son to resign the captaincy of the Brentwood rifles. He wouldn't.

"All right," said certain merchants. "Our money won't be safe here if the mob gets another start. We'll transfer our accounts to Omaha." Perrigo "wilted" in less than a week. The resignation went in to the governor, and amid a pounding on the floor of shod rifle butts and loud clapping of hands from the seats Mr. Langdon, clad in his old fatigue uniform, took command of the rifles by invitation and at once resumed drills. That night it was resolved to have three drills a week until the company had caught up again. The next week 40 men responded to roll call and 12 applied for membership. The first week in October a business meeting was held and a telegram read announcing that Perrigo's resignation, which had unaccountably hung fire, was at last accepted. Langdon was unanimously elected captain and the certificate forwarded to the capital. The second week came without the expected commission, but The Sun announced that as the election was held before the vacancy officially existed it was therefore illegal. Try it again, said "the boys," and then came an embarrassed adjutant general to suggest that it perhaps would be best not to insist on the election of Mr. Langdon. With the kindest feeling for him in the world the governor could not see his way clear to giving him a commission. Indeed The Sun and Examiner shrieked that the community never would stand it. A political adviser told the executive he would lose the vote of Brentwood, and an anonymous letter or two informed him his grave was dug and the corpse should be ready if ever he touched pen to parchment with the name of Eric Langdon on it. No wonder the governor sent his adjutant general to consult with "the boys." But now "the boys" had got their blood up. No Perrigo dollars were forthcoming to boil it down, and the shout went up, "Langdon or nobody," and the adjutant general left in a huff.

Then came State Senators Brent and Foster to see Colonel Cresswell, who was "opposing the administration" even though politically in accord. It was an off year for the legislature, and the eyes of many a senatorial possibility were following the tottering footsteps of a silvery haired statesman who would probably never resume his seat in the senatorial tank at the north wing at Washington. The vacancy would be filled by the governor, and who, said these gentlemen in the confidence of the executive—who so likely to succeed to the toga as the brilliant and distinguished Colonel Cresswell provided he did not kill his own chance by further embarrassing the governor? Cresswell bit. "It would put the governor in the roll of an intimidator," said the emissaries, "to openly commission Mr. Langdon. Of course we may need him and all that and have every appreciation of him, but it won't do to fly in the face of the people. Let them think they are having their way, but quietly, you understand, work things so as to have ours." And Cresswell was at least sufficiently profound a statesman to see the political wisdom of their position, especially when coupled with that hint as to the senatorial succession. So he conferred with Langdon and saw and talked with "the boys," one or two at a time. Every business body seemed to feel by this time they must have Langdon to instruct and command their company, but the few in the confidence of the administration knew that in the present condition of affairs he could never be commissioned. Langdon saw it himself, smiled and after the politicians had talked until they were tired and the boys remained obdurate arose in meeting, said 20 words and solved the problem. "I withdraw as a candidate for captain and submit my name as a recruit," said he. There was a moment of amazement and silence, then a burst of applause. Then somebody in the confidence of Langdon moved the rules be suspended, a ballot taken at once, and Mr. Langdon was declared unanimously elected to membership. He signed the enlistment papers already prepared, was sworn in and announced as a private in the Brentwood rifles amid the tumultuous cheers of that gallant organization. Then First Sergeant Potts arose and smilingly said he'd served a good while in that capacity, liked the company, liked the job and wanted to learn more about it. The best way to learn was to watch it properly done by an expert. "We've learned that by experience," he said and therefore asked as a favor to be allowed to drop the lozenge from over his chevron and fall back to a vacancy among the duty sergeants and then called upon the presiding officer of the meeting and commanding officer of the company to name as his successor the man of all others he and the company believed best fitted to fill the bill and got no further, for the boys "caught on," as they said, and further remarks were drowned in an uproar of applause, in the midst of which the lieutenant commanding, the old sergeant and the new first sergeant, Langdon, were shouldered and borne in triumph about the room, and the reporters of The Examiner and Sun rushed to their respective offices.

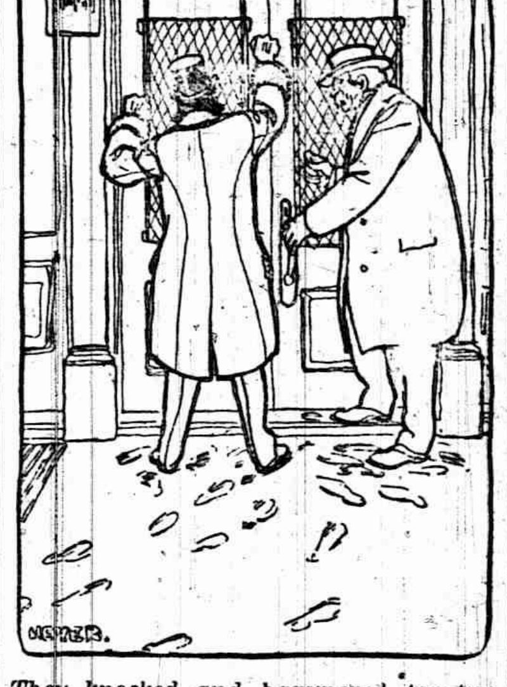
It was useless now for The Sun to hurl denunciation at the governor or at the rifles. The law was supreme. Only the governor could make Langdon an officer, but even the governor could not make him a sergeant. The law gave the appointment of sergeants and corporals to the commanding officer of the company alone, and while Governor X. would not oppose the wishes of so many citizens and voters by granting Langdon a commission neither would he interpose against the wishes of scores of others by demanding, as urged by The Sun and the strikers, "the resignation of the insolent officer who had dared to thwart the wishes of a community." The Banner rejoiced and applauded. The Examiner was silent. The Seattle might need that company any moment, and every man with mob law in view and every citizen pledged to law and order knew instantly what it meant that the rifles had failed to fill the vacancies. The lieutenant commanding would figure as head of the company, but its instruction, its discipline, the work of preparation and finally its command in the event of a fight would all devolve upon its gritty first sergeant, Eric Langdon.



They were borne in triumph about the room.

Two evenings later Cresswell, with anxious eyes, looked up at the window of the second story room over his offices on Thayer street, the main thoroughfare of Brentwood. It was after 10, but all was darkness there, and Langdon's invariable rule was to return at once from drill and go early to bed, for, winter or summer, he was an early riser. The clerk and assistant who formerly occupied those humble quarters had married, moved west to the hills and thrown out his own shingle, and Langdon thankfully had moved in. The street was still alive with people, but the lights in the rifles' armory, two blocks away, had been extinguished before the stroke of 10 at the city hall. In his hand Cresswell held a crumpled half sheet of note paper that had reached him through the mail. It contained only the words: "Your man laughs at warning and defies the people. If he hasn't left this town by midnight, he'll never get a chance again."

By midnight, and it was now after 10! Only that morning in reminding Langdon that the chief of police had not only issued permission, but advised him, to go armed Cresswell had asked him if more warnings had reached him, and the new first sergeant took from his breast pocket a little note. It was a woman's hand that penned this note. "For God's sake don't disregard this. You do not know what minute may be your last if you insist on staying here. These men are desperate." Cresswell had read it with compressed lips and advised its being given at once to the police. Far and wide the edict of the employees had gone forth. If assurance that the old wages would be restored from and after Nov. 1 failed to reach them by noon Oct. 28 every man would quit work, and no man would be allowed to attempt it. More than once Cresswell had noticed strange, unprepossessing faces among the loiterers along the block. More than once men had called on one pretext or other at the office and were furtively interested in the survey of the premises, but the police well knew the barroom blackguards who had threatened vengeance on Langdon for his interference in behalf of the soldier they were beating to a jelly, and in person at least they dare not act. "It isn't among the slums alone you have enemies, Langdon," said Cresswell. "The bitterest foes a man has to guard against are those who have done him injury, and the men I'm after are those who put up that safe robbery and gained your discharge. Oh, for an hour of Channing!"



They knocked and hammered for two minutes without response.

But that was vain.

Channing, he who commanded the respect and confidence of the yards and shops of the Big Horn, was sauntering discontentedly in the Riviera, doing as his doctors bade, utterly homesick, utterly unable to appreciate or understand what he saw and only wishing himself back in the cab of a Baldwin, whirling "the limited" over the prairie 60 miles an hour. Channing knew every mother's son in the Brentwood yards by name. The new incumbent knew not one of them. Channing argued, Burleigh bullied, and clash was inevitable. The management of both roads had announced in unequivocable terms that they would not yield to the demands of the men. The mayor of Brentwood was sorely frightened. The governor had been requested to order troops to the scene and overawe the would be strikers and very

HOAGLAND REUNION.

Held at John Curry's near Britton Aug. 17.

On August 17, 1901 occurred the eleventh annual reunion of the Hoagland family at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Curry, who reside about 2½ miles northeast of Britton. Relatives and a few invited guests began to arrive about 10 a. m. and at 1 p. m., the company numbered one hundred or more. Each came with a well filled basket loaded with good things, which the ladies know how to prepare so well. Some said they had been fasting for the past week in honor of the occasion.

On the north side of the house was erected a large canopy under which was arranged three large tables so as to seat sixteen or eighteen guests at a table. The tables just groaned under the tempting viands. Three large bouquets adorned each table, one on each end and one in the center. After all were comfortably seated, Rev. Foltz, of Britton, returned thanks for the same. Just as the first table of hungry mortals had supplied the inner man and was ready to depart and make room for others, a nice refreshing shower came down upon us, one we have long wished for, yes, even prayed for, and making our canopy roof somewhat damp, (we were not all Baptists) the remainder of the party moved into the house to finish the dinner, which had only just fairly begun out of doors. And I might just here mention that right near the north entrance might be found a twenty gallon cask filled with good ice cool lemonade, which was free to all and as they were all good "prohis" none indulged too freely, not more than four glasses at a time.

Dinner being over and all feeling in the best of good nature, the literary program was called for, Arthur Harding, of Tecumseh, presiding. First upon the program was prayer by Rev. Foltz, next was the history of the reunion for the past year read by Mrs Gertrude DuBois. This was followed by singing and recitations by members of the union, also two voluntary recitations one by Lillian Unger, of Dundee, and one by little Ellen Springer, of Rea. Rev. Foltz sang two selection, which were listened to with good attention and enjoyed by all.

Next was the business meeting and election of officers for the next year which resulted as follows:

Pres.—Henry Bachmann.

Sec.—Grace Hoagland.

Pro. Com.—Myrtie Bachmann, Gertrude Dubois, Clara Miller.

Com. on Arrangements—Ernest Hoagland, Ernest DuBois, Wm. Swick, Chas Schultz, Frank Hoagland.

Election being over, the next thing was the usual collection and as our worthy brother, Homer Miller had just retired from office, his successor being Ernest Hoagland, the honor was conferred upon him. How his cheeks glowed with animation as he passed the hat, saying "here's luck to you boys," but just how deep his pocket was will remain a secret, but as the recording angel opens the book, we wonder if his name will be on the last page, which looks to me like a blank. However, the collection was good and some six or eight dollars was added to the treasury to be used in the society for the next year.

The company then sang in unison "God be With you Till we Meet Again," followed by the benediction by Rev. Foltz. The society will meet next year on the third Saturday in August at Henry Bachman's.

This ended the program for the day and all could do as they pleased. Some played ball after the shower was over, others might be seen in groups, chatting together, while others could not resist the temptation of indulging in the second meal. As waiters were too tired to serve unless drafted, they concluded to each wait upon themselves. At about 4 p. m. each began to think of home and the many chores.

It was a day long to be remembered by all and as the last year passed without the loss of one by death but an addition of six, three by marriage and three by birth, to the union, may the next year bring its sunshine without a cloud to mar the happiness of the union. As we are all united here upon earth, and as our love and esteem has seemingly just budded here may it blossom in heaven and our union be an unbroken family with God and the angels.

His Unlucky Day.

Even the least superstitious are often struck by the misfortunes which attend some persons on certain dates. A large firm in the city has in its employ a living instance of the fact. On June 12 an employee lost his left arm by coming in contact with machinery. The accident disabled him for his then employment, and he was given that of a messenger. On another June 12 he was run over in the Strand while on an errand—result, a broken leg. The next accident was a fall on the stairs in the firm's buildings, again June 12; the right arm broken this time. The fourth mishap on another anniversary broke three ribs. The firm took the case into consideration and issued an order that in future the employee was to take a holiday on that date, an order with which he has now complied for several years.—London Chronicle.

Why She Wanted to Know.

"Is this Hazel street?" asked a young woman in one of the back seats of an East Tenth street car who was carrying a diminutive poodle dog under her arm.

"No, madam," said the conductor. "I will tell you when we come to it."

Later on she repeated the question, and the conductor answered with some show of impatience. Finally when Hazel street was reached, he rang, and the car came to a stop. "This is Hazel street," said the conductor.

"Oh, I don't want to get off at that street. I only wanted to know where it was. I go to the end of the line."

Then as the car started again she looked down at the pug and said in tones of extreme affection, "There, dearie, there's where your muddy lives."—Indianapolis News.

BASE BALL.

The game between Selling & May, of Detroit, and Tecumseh Tuesday afternoon was a good game. The attendance was small, which was no doubt, due to the rain. Susman, of the local team, made the first score in the fourth inning. Harris followed in the same inning with a two base hit, stole third and died on base. Neither side scored again until the eighth inning, when with the visitors at bat and two men on bases, Vorpagel hit the ball over the fence, a home run and two scores besides. The locals at bat in the last half of the eighth, Harris made a two base hit and scored. The score stood then 2 to 3 in favor of Selling & May. McCarty pitched for Tecumseh and did good work, striking out 11 men. Following is the score:

Stearns was as good natured as ever and all he was sorry for was, that it only took half a day to play the game, as he would have liked to have remained in Tecumseh a week, and the HERALD was also sorry, for it would like to have Stearns over here a week.

Adrian won a good game against Blissfield at Blissfield last Tuesday by a score of 2 to 3. Blissfield, who have been winning a number of games, have began to loose, and now commence to kick because every other team has hired players. They loose games fair and square and ought to shut up.

Mrs. John Osborn.

Anna E. Whittemore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Whittemore, was born in New York, March 1, 1830, but a few days before her parents had landed in America from England.

At the age of 21, she came with her parents to Michigan and December 19, the following year, she was married to John Osborn. Five children were born to them, only three of whom are living, two daughter, Mrs. Fred Osborn, of Olivet, Mrs. A. C. Bryan and one son, Wm. Osborn, of this place. She died Wednesday, Aug. 21, at her home on West Chicago street, of heart disease, from which she had been suffering for some time.

Mrs. Osborn was a highly respected lady loved by all who knew her and will be greatly missed. She was a member of the Baptist church of this place. She was converted and baptized into the fellowship of the Tabernacle Baptist church of New York by the Rev. Dr. Edward Lathrop in 1848. During all these years of clouds and sunshine she lived a consistent Christian life.

She united with the Baptist church of Tecumseh in 1850 and has been one of the most active members. She served on the sick and needy committee for fifteen years, and a great many sick and suffering ones cheered and comforted by her presence and alms deeds, will rise up and call her blessed. She rests from her labors and her works do follow. "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord."

The funeral was held this afternoon at the house, Rev. Bowers officiating The remains were placed in the vault at Brookside cemetery.

Among those from out of town who are here to attend the funeral of Mrs. John Osborn are: Susan Hart, Louis Osborn and wife, of Elkhart, B. A. Osborn and E. E. Osborn, of Saginaw, and Mrs. Wright, of Colorado.

A Narrow Escape.

Morris Adams, who is employed by Wilson Bros., had a narrow escape from death last Saturday. He was working in the gravel pit a short distance from the celery farm, when the banks began to cave in. Mr. Adams noticed it and jumped, but he was too late for the gravel buried him to his neck.

He succeeded in digging his way out but was so exhausted he could not call for help. A workman in the field near by noticed him lying on the bank and went to his assistance. He was taken home and although his injuries are not serious, they are painful, and he will be confined to light work for a few days. Had he been a few inches nearer the side of the pit, he would have been instantly killed. The gravel struck the wagon with such force as to crush one of the wheels, thus weakening the force before it struck him.

Made Good Matches.

She—I can't make out how it is that Mrs. Wise has fish for nearly every meal. It can't be for economy's sake, for she must be fairly well off.

He—She has a large family of unmarried daughters, you know.

She—Now, don't be nasty and say something about girls and their brains. That's so old.

He—Oh, no, I hadn't the slightest intention of doing so!

She—Well, can't you tell me?

He—I don't know, I'm sure, unless it's because fish are rich in phosphorus.

She—I don't see what that has to do with it.

He—Perhaps not, but still it's good for making matches.

IN OLDEN TIMES.

Many Things were Different Nowadays the Public Profit by Experience.

When the striped pole or sign which now indicates a barber shop was employed to let the public know where cupping or blood-letting was professionally performed, close shaves were of daily occurrence, not the easy removal of the hirsute or hairy adornment of the head and face, but close shaves from entering eternity. More than one unfortunate entered the barber surgeon's doorway to leave it a corpse or so weak that weeks were required to get the victim of malpractice on his feet. Blood-letting was used for everything from a heart ache to a corn, and a pain in the loins was invariably treated with two incisions, one on each side of the spine. Like plasters and liniments, these helped from the counter irritation they created, and we may presume that had Mr. Calvin Wilson, proprietor of the leading shaving parlor, of Niles, Mich., lived in the time of George III, of England, in place of taking the coursehe did a short time ago with his back, blood-letting would have been resorted to. Read how he treated his trouble:

Mr. Wilson says: "My occupation has very likely much to do with the cause of my backache from which I have suffered considerably for a number of years. Standing on one's feet some days 18 hours is hard on the best of backs, but when you have pain across the loins, with lameness and soreness, everytime you move the muscles of the arm, long, long before your daily task is over you often wish you could go to sleep. I tried everything to better my condition but was unsuccessful until I used three boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills. The relief they brought to a man who has worked hard all his life and is now past the three score and ten is much easier to appreciate than describe in words. Doan's Kidney Pills perform what they promise."

HAD NEVER BEEN ABROAD.

But For All That He Had Traveled "Fur and Wide."

"Have you spent all of your life right here in this one place?" asked a stranger of an old fellow he came across seated on a rail fence whittling in front of a log and slab cabin in one of the back counties of Arkansas.

"Not by a derned sight!" was the terse reply. "I been hyar the better part o' the time; but, la, I hev traveled fur an wide!"

"Ever been abroad?"

"Well, not eggsackly to say abroad, onless you call it goin abroad to go from here way over to Petersville. I been over thar twice in the last 40 year. It's 36½ miles to Peterville, an I been furder than that, fur my ole woman an me went clean to Hogback ridge on our weddin tower, an that's 41 mile from here. Then I been over in Pettis county to see my wife's folks twice, an that's twenty odd mile from here. Then I been over to Rocky Hill ez menny ez four times, an that's 18 mile. Ez I say, I been here most o' the time, but then I've traveled fur an wide all the same. I've seen the big four story mill over to Petersville an the engine kyars over to Peaville. I rid three miles on 'em, an it's all I want o' the pesky things. I've seen a calf with two heads an a feller that could eat fire and dance on broken glass in his bare feet. I see a man hung once an a hoss race fur a purse o' $65. Yes, sir; I been fur an wide, an I reckon I've seen the biggest part o' what there is to see in this world, an I don't lot on doin no more gaddin about."—Lippincott's.

Holes In Everything.

You are skeptical about the accuracy of this statement and ask why water does not leak from a bottle if there are holes in everything? The answer is simple enough—the drops or globules of water are bigger than the holes. Taking glass as an illustration, we find that air is about the only substance that can get through those holes.

A scientist proposes the following as an experiment: Place a bell in a bottle exhausted of air and hermetically sealed. The bell will not ring because the medium for conveying sound is not there.

Set the bottle aside for a few months, then try the bell again, and it will ring, faintly, perhaps, but nevertheless there will be a sound. That means that the air has got in. It has made its way through the holes in the glass.

The incandescent lamp is a bulb of glass exhausted of air so that the slender filament may glow when the electricity runs along it. The air works its way in gradually and the light becomes less brilliant in proportion.

Nuts as Food.

Nuts contain a large amount of nourishment, and owing to their oily nature digest easily. Eaten with salt they are palatable. Either as a dessert course or salted and used as a relish their value is the same. They are not expensive, for from the peanut through the imported varieties they can be bought in bulk at small cost.

The peanut has many good qualities to recommend it, and from its lowestate is coming to the front as an important item in dietetics. It is supposed to cure insomnia if eaten just before retiring. Salted, they are much cheaper than almonds. The small hickory nut, at a few cents a quart, can be used on the most economical table. The English walnut makes a very good salad blanched and used with celery. Filberts, almonds and Brazil nuts are more expensive, but as only a few are needed at a time the cost is not great.—Woman's Home Companion.

Called Lorillard's Bluff.

Heavy bettor as he was, Pierre Lorillard once met his match when he ran up against gray bearded James E. Kelly, who introduced bookmaking into this country. It was nearly a generation ago and at Jerome park. Kelly was laying 2½ to 1 against one of Lorillard's horses in a big stake event. The news went to Mr. Lorillard, seated on his coach on the clubhouse lawn.

"I'll just take a little of the conceit out of that sawed off Irishman," said Lorillard to Wright Sanford, Newbold Morris, John Hunter and a few other congenial spirits. They started for the ring together.

"I'll lay $10,000 on my horse at that price, Kelly," said Mr. Lorillard in his princely fashion, expecting to see Kelly wilt and refuse to take the wager.

"Certainly, Mr. Lorillard." Then turning to his sheet writer, Kelly said: "$25,000 against $10,000, Pierre Lorillard." Quickly he turned to the tobacco magnate with a polite "Much obliged to you, Mr. Lorillard; very much obliged. Would you or your friends care to bet another $10,000 at the same odds? Should be delighted to accommodate you."

"What a nerve!" was all Mr. Lorillard could say as he turned on his heel and walked away.

Jimmy Kelly won the bet, for Lorillard's horse was beaten.—New York Times [illegible] may be made beautifully white by the use of a little refined borax in the water instead of using a washing fluid.

Wash fabrics that are inclined to fade should be soaked and rinsed in very salt water, to set the color, before washing in the suds.

Silken fabrics, especially white silk handkerchiefs, should not be dampened, but ironed with a moderately warm iron when taken from the line.

Bottles.

In using bottles these two hints ought to be so borne in mind that the practice of them becomes habitual:

Always keep the label uppermost when pouring from a bottle, so that if any liquid trickles down the side the label misses it. Result—your labels keep clean and legible for much longer.

Secondly, if you want to deliver drops (or a very small quantity) of liquid just moisten the lip of the bottle with the finger.—Exchange.

How it is Done.

The first object in life with the American people is to "get rich;" the second, how to regain good health. The first can be obtained by energy, honesty and saving; the second, (good health) by using Green's August Flower. Should you be a despondent sufferer from any of the effects of Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Appendicitis, Indigestion, etc., such as Sick Headache, Palpitation of the Heart, Sour Stomach, Habitual Costiveness, Dizziness of the Head, Nervous Prostration, Low Spirits, etc., you need not suffer another day. Two doses of the well known August Flower will relieve you at once. Go to John J. Orr and get a sample bottle free. Regular size, 75 cts. Get Green's Prize Almanac.

Taking Sunday Collections.

An old and not yet obsolete mode of taking a collection in a Scotch church is by means of a ladle—a small wooden box at the end of a straight wooden shaft about four and a half feet long, the top of the box being sufficiently open to receive contributions of money. For all special collections this was the usual mode in the chief churches of Edinburgh when I was a boy at school there 50 years ago, but it has gradually gone out of fashion and is not often to be seen nowadays.

For ordinary Sunday collections the general custom has been to have a metal plate or basin on a small table at the church entrance superintended by an elder—a mode which was often called the brod. When ladies are used, they are handed round the congregation by elders after the sermon or after the last psalm, and the common Scotch phrase to "lift" the collection may have come from this custom.—Notes and Queries.

Some Queer Verdicts.

What is "a reasonable state of intoxication" apparently just missed precise definition by a coroner's jury in Mississippi which stated in its verdict that "we, the jury, find that deceased came to his death by a stroke of an east bound train, No. 204, on I. C. Railroad, at Fentress, Miss., in Choctaw county, he being in a reasonable state of intoxication."

A somewhat similar indefiniteness of legal conclusion mars a verdict of a neighboring Georgia jury to the effect that "we, the jury, find the defendant almost guilty."

Equally as uncertain and ambiguous as these statements by laymen is the opinion in an early Maryland case which "acknowledges the corn" by saying that an occurrence referred to took place "at a former sitting when the court was full."

Too Liberal.

Wife—Here's an advertisement in the paper that you'd better look into. It says a man is wanted, and he won't be worked to death, and he'll get paid enough to live on.

Husband—Says he won't be worked to death, eh?

Wife—Yes; and they promise pay enough to live on.

Husband—Some catch about that!—Pick-Me-Up.

WANTED TO DIE

A Maniac at Camp Meeting Tried to Kill Himself.

LAY IN FRONT OF A TRAIN

He Could Not Hurt Himself, Although He Jumped Into the Camp Fires—Startled the Good Brethren With His Antics.

Lansing, Mich., Aug. 26.—A maniac disturbed the Seventh Day Adventist camp meeting yesterday. He was a man of about 40 years, and it is claimed his home is in Kalamazoo. He created great consternation.

Once he threw himself in front of a moving train, and several times jumped into camp fires without apparent injury. His ravings were so wild and incoherent that the character of his delusions could not be determined, but it is believed he became insane over religion.

The efforts of five men were required to place the man in the city jail, where he emphasized his ravings with tremendous blows with a club on the sides of the iron cage.

The Warden Feels Sore.

Jackson, Mich., Aug. 26.—Charles Hewitt, who escaped from prison June 23, was captured at West Unity, O., and brought back to this city. Warden Chamberlain received a tip that Hewitt was at Hillsdale, his home. The prison officials overhauled Hewitt at West Unity, O., about 30 miles south of the Michigan state line.

Hewitt was a trusty and was coachman for the warden, when he blew away one beautiful June evening. Warden Chamberlain feels more keenly the escape of a trusted man than an incorrigible, and it will take a long while for Hewitt to regain his confidence. Hewitt is a young man and was sentenced to prison from Hillsdale county for six years for procuring the burning of a store to obtain insurance, and had been in prison about 18 months when he escaped.

Narrow Escape.

Newport, Mich., Aug. 26.—Nine laborers on the Theodore Buhl farm while going home for dinner Saturday had a narrow escape from being killed by the Lake Shore flyer. It is alleged that while crossing the road at the Buhl farm, the train bore down upon a wagon containing the men, without whistling a warning. The two horses were killed and the occupants of the wagon tipped into the ditch, severely bruising two of them. This makes six horses and one man who have been killed within a year within a mile of this village by Lake Shore trains. The crossing is a dangerous one, and it is suggested that a gatekeeper should be placed at the main

DIED LIKE A STOIC

MURDERED A FARMER'S WIFE TO SECURE TWENTY DOLLARS.

SHOT AT HER YOUNG SON, BUT MISSED HIM AND FLED.

CAPTURED AFTER A CHASE AND PLACED IN JAIL.

ENTIRE COUNTRY GATHERED IN A MOB AND BURNED HIM.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Aug. 26.—Henry Noles, a negro, was yesterday burned by a mob of citizens for criminally assaulting and shooting to death Mrs. Charles Williams, wife of a prominent farmer near Winchester, Tenn., last Friday. Admitting his crime and asking his friends to meet him in glory, he met his fate with a groan.

He was captured early yesterday morning at the water tank near Cowan, Tenn., and was taken to Winchester by his captors and placed in the county jail. Sheriff Stewart made haste to barricade the jail and protect the prisoner. Soon an angry mob of several hundred men gathered, but Assistant Atty.-Gen. Matt N. Whitaker appeared and made a speech to the crowd, urging him to assist him in allaying excitement and upholding the majesty of the law. He promised to reconvene the grand jury today to indict the negro promptly and have him speedily tried at the present term of court, assuring the crowd that his conviction and legal execution were a foregone conclusion. This appeal was supplemented by Judge J. J. Lynch, Capt. W. P. Tolley and others. No sooner had their appeals been made than several hundred citizens from the neighborhood where the crime was committed came up an augmented the crowd to thousands. They swept forward upon the jail, overpowered the sheriff and his deputies, took the prisoner and started at 10:15 a. m. for the scene of the crime, 12 miles distant.

The mob was determined, and it seemed that almost the entire population for miles around had turned out to see the fate of the wretch. The procession followed the mob to the Williams home. Arriving at a point in sight of the scene of the crime, the negro was placed upon a stump and given a chance to make a statement. He mounted to the stump stolidly and laughed as he began his statement. He said:

"Tell all my sisters and brothers to meet me in glory. I am going to make that my home. Tell my mother to meet me where parting will be no more."

He was then asked as to whether anyone else was implicated in the crime. Noles stated emphatically there was no one implicated but himself.

"Why did you kill Mrs. Williams?" was asked.

"I just done that because I had nothing else to do."

He was taken from the stump, bound to a tree by chains and his body saturated with oil.

At 1:40 p. m. a match was applied and instantly the quivering body was enveloped in flames. Fence rails were piled about the burning body and soon life was extinct. The negro made no outcry at any time and died as stolidly as a stoic.

At least 6,000 people witnessed the horrible fate of the negro. Many remained until nightfall, augmenting the blaze until the body was entirely consumed. They then departed for their homes quietly.

Story of the Crime.

Lying on the floor of the family room, her face splashed with clotted blood, Charles Williams found his young wife Friday afternoon, when he returned to his home. A bullet had gone through her head, life was extinct, and her two baby children were crying in grief and fear. The oldest boy, aged 5, told what had occurred. The young mother had been shot and killed by Henry Noles, a negro hired man on the Williams place. The mortally wounded woman sank to the floor, Noles shot at the boy, the bullet grazing the child's head. Then he fled to the woods. Williams's neighbors were stirred to the pitch of exacting merciless and summary justice. Hearing of the crime, Sheriff Stewart departed for the scene with bloodhounds. A posse of determined citizens, well armed and provided with a rope, was also on Noles's trail.

It is reported that the motive was robbery and $20 was obtained by the murderer. Mr. Williams is a farmer and well-to-do and one of the most prominent residents of his section of Franklin county. The dead woman was a member of one of the oldest and most respected families in the county. Two children, the older just 5 years old, were the only witnesses of the tragedy.

WE ALWAYS WIN.

American Company Gets the Order for Big Job.

New York, Aug. 26.—George Westinghouse, who on his return from England yesterday refused to discuss the affairs of the district underground railway of London, of which Charles T. Yerkes is in control, has changed his mind. He said that in view of some statements which had appeared in print, he thought the public might as well have the matter straight. He then went on to say that there were no differences between Mr. Yerkes and himself and that Mr. Yerkes has awarded to the British Westinghouse company the contract for 30,000 horse power engines and generators for his Metropolitan District railway enterprise, and will require much more apparatus, the manufacture of which in England will be advantageous to his interests.

On the question of a certain spirit of hostility which, according to some London dispatches, is said to have developed in that city against the American control of the Metropolitan District railroad and against the improvements on the same by American companies, Mr. Westinghouse had this to say:

"While it is true that some hostility has been displayed, this really does not amount to much. The public wants the improvements that are now under way, and while these might prefer to have them as the result of British enterprise, they are glad to have them regardless of the source."

HOLBEIN NEARLY DROWNED.

Dover, Eng., Aug. 26.—Mr. Holbein, who Saturday, the anniversary of Capt. Robbs's swim from Dover to Calais, started from Cape Gris-Nez (between Boulogne sur Mer and Calais) in an attempt to swim to Dover, narrowly escaped drowning. He covered the course to a point within six miles of Dover and then collapsed, after having been in the water 12 hours and 40 minutes.

The tug which accompanied him took him from the water and brought him to Dover. He was carried to a hotel in a semi-conscious, precarious state and subsequently, on the advice of his medical attendants, was removed to a hospital, where he lay for some time in a serious condition. It was found that his eyesight had been badly affected by the salt water.

Last night, however, he had recovered and he announced his intention to renew the attempt. His exploit was very remarkable considering the roughness of the sea and has established a record.

TEMPLARS AT LOUISVILLE.

Assembled From the Four Corners of United States.

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 26.—Commanderies of Knights Templar poured into Louisville Sunday and last night from the four corners of the United States. The city is rapidly filling with its plumed guests, although the triennial conclave will not begin until the grand parade of Tuesday morning.

Imposing religious services were held in the afternoon and these were the only formal events Sunday. The column was led by the Templars of Demolay and Louisville commanderies of this city and the entire body formed an escort for the grand master of the grand encampment, Reuben H. Lloyd, and the other grand officers.

The most striking part of the service came when the grand prelate delivered the faith of the knights who, with swords uplifted, recited with him the apostles' Creed.

Hon. W. C. P. Breckinridge of Lexington, Ky., will deliver Kentucky's welcome to the Knights Templar at the opening meeting of the grand encampment Tuesday afternoon.

FIREMAN KILLED.

Southern Train Wrecked By Sand Bank Giving Out.

Columbia, S. C., Aug. 26.—The Florida and Metropolitan limited train on the Seaboard Air Line was totally wrecked last night at 10:25 o'clock seven miles south of Chraw, S. C., owing to a sand bank giving out.

The killed and injured: Fireman Rosemond, crushed to death; Engineer Muse, shoulder and leg injured; Tom Cleary, another engineer, injured in knees and legs; postal clerk, name unknown, slightly bruised.

The passengers escaped with a severe shaking up. The engine and four front cars left the track and were turned completely over. The engine was a mass of debris. The tender fell 20 yards away. The track was torn up for 150 yards and every car was off the track. Relief came from Cheraw at midnight.

Frieght Train Collides With Suburban Electric Line

FOURTEEN PEOPLE INJURED

Luckily the Train Was Moving Slowly—Conductor and Motorman Were Badly Bruised—Passengers Greatly Scared.

Minneapolis, Aug. 26.—Fourteen persons were injured here yesterday in a collision between a Greenfield interurban car and a freight train on the belt road. The conductor of the car signalled the motorman to go ahead, and when on the railroad track it was struck by the train, which was moving at moderate speed. The car was thrown to one side but not crushed, and each of the twelve passengers was more or less injured. The conductor and motorman were also badly bruised and were taken to their homes.

MILITARY FORCE INCREASED.

Military Men Think the Guard Too Small for Safety.

Manila, Aug. 26.—In the city of Manila there are now less than 1,000 effective soldiers, and it has been decided to increase this number fy four companies of infantry. The official reason for the increase is that the guard duty is too heavy for the present force. As a matter of fact, however, there is a feeling that, although there is no apparent prospect of trouble, nevertheless in the event of an uprising in the future, such as is always possible among the Malays, it would be better to have a sufficient body of troops available for such an emergency.

General Chaffee says he considers the city of Manila to be perfectly orderly and he can see no prospect of an uprising. Commissioner Wright thinks the people "extremely peaceable." He is satisfied that, although among a certain class there is some discontent on account of the land tax, which is not yet understood, this class is not likely to foment trouble.

Many army officers express themselves as gratified at the increase in the military force. They think that, with the military guard withdrawn from the prison another uprising there might result in the release of some 1,800 prisoners. This possibility is regarded as a menace to the city by those who take that view of the case, as they regard the white guard as insufficient.

Civil officials look upon this contingency as unlikely, inasmuch as the 600 white police could mobilize at the prison before any of the prisoners could escape and become dispersed throughout the disaffected district.

DIED OF HEART DISEASE.

Robert G. Evans, U. S. District-Attorney, Died at His Home.

Minneapolis, Aug. 26.—Robert G. Evans, United States district attorney for Minnesota, died suddenly Sunday morning from heart disease on the balcony of his home in Queen avenue, Kenwood. At about 8 o'clock Mr. Evans went to the bedroom of his daughter to awaken her. He grasped the foot rail of the bed and shook it, seemingly unable to speak. Just as she awoke Mr. Evans staggered from the room and made his way with difficulty to the balcony over the front porch. There he seized the railing, gasped and sank to the floor, dead. He has been a sufferer from heart disease for a year and a half and a sudden attack of trouble carried him off. Mr. Evans was 47 years old. He was a prominent candidate before the legislature to succeed Senator Cushman K. Davis, but was defeated by M. E. Clapp of St. Paul. He entertained Senators Fairbanks of Indiana, Quarles of Wisconsin and Clapp of Minneapolis last week, and the party returned from a fishing excursion to Alexandria on Thursday. He seemingly was in excellent health up to a few hours before his death. Dr. Moore, his physician, says he does not think the runaway accident a few days ago, in which Senator Fairbanks and Mr. Evans were badly shaken up, in any way hastened the latter's death. He overworked himself in the last presidential campaign, and it is thought this aggravated the heart trouble. His wife died four months ago and it is believed that this loss hastened his own death. He leaves three children.

Accident to Ocean Liner.

New York, Aug. 26.—The Mallory liner Neuces, from Galveston, arrived yesterday. On Friday last she had trouble with her machinery and at 4:30 o'clock Sunday morning one of the couplings of the crank broke and caused some damage in the engine room, which will take at least a fortnight to repair. N. Pedro, a steerage passenger, was found to be suffering with malarial fever and was removed by the health officer to the fever hospital at Swineburne island. Three companions of the sick man were taken to Hoffman's island for observation. All four are from Vera Cruz via El Paso. After fumigation the vessel was allowed to come up to her dock.

Another Rebel Surrenders.

Manila, Aug. 26.—Word was received today that the insurgent Col. Lorell, with 17 officers and 13 men, surrendered Saturday to Capt. Brown of the Fourth infantry at Talisa. Taft is expected to return to Manila Tuesday, after having oppointed civil officials throughout all northern Luzon.

Fireman and Brakeman Badly Injured in the Wreck.

Bellaire, Mich., Aug. 26.—A bad wreck occurred on the Pere Marquette at Comfort Sunday morning. The crews jumped, the fireman and brakeman on the work train being badly injured. Several others were severely cut and bruised. The accident is said to have been due to the negligence of the crew of the work train. The collision occurred on a sharp curve, and the trains were moving at a rate of 35 miles an hour.

FIERCE WIND STORM.

Plate Glass Windows Broken and Car Service Demolished.

Minneapolis, Aug. 26.—Minneapolis experienced a fierce rain, wind and hailstorm Sunday evening which did much damage in the city and vicinity. The storm came up suddenly, and though the hail lasted but 15 minutes the high wind which accompanied it caused great havoc. In the business section of the city large plate glass windows were broken. The street car system of the city was demoralized for three hours, the trolley wires being crossed with those of the other electric companies. The evening church throngs were caught and thoroughly drenched. In many residence sections many windows were blown out, three were blown down and other havoc done. Reports from the surrounding country show that the storm covered a comparatively small area and it is probable that little damage was done to crops.

Riot at Indianapolis.

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 26.—Another riot broke out last evening in a crowd of 5,000 people at Fairview park. Four negroes were badly injured and one, named Harri had his right arm broken. The trouble was caused by the gang of white toughs from the west side known as the Bungaloos. Members of this gang to the number of 150 congregated at the park and began a determined effort to drive all negroes out. Several negroes, some with their wives, were set upon and beaten and bruised before they could be rescued. Policemen were sent from the city to quell the riot, and their presence seemed to subdue the disturbance. In a similar riot several weeks ago six shots were fired and one white man was badly injured by a bullet.

No Triumph for France.

London, Aug. 26.—Although the French papers hail Turkey's yielding as a great triumph for France—more especially as it was largely believed that the sultan's obduracy was due to the supposed friendship between Germany and Turkey—it is felt in London, despite considerable satisfaction over the outcome that there is a grave doubt as to whether France has achieved more than a paper victory. The British theory is that M. Constans really wished to force Turkey to purchase quays which are notoriously unremunerative. The sultan has avoided this, thus securing the practical results, while leaving to M. Constans the empty congratulations.

READY TO LIGHT

Fires Will Be Lighted Today at the Steel Mills.

SKILLED WORKMEN HIRED

Star Mill Has Been Greatly Improved During the Strike and Will Start This Week—Strikers on the Alert and Feel Satisfied.

Pittsburg, Pa., Aug. 26.—Some remarkable changes in the condition of the strike-ridden mills of the United States steel corporation are promised for the present week that will change the aspect of affairs considerably if carried out. It was stated on good authority today that before the end of the week those of the plants that have been operating on single turn would be run full force, and for the usual three full turns each day. Men enough have been secured for this purpose, the officials say, in spite of the claims of the strikers that the companies could not get enough men to operate their plants, and the managers of the various mills say they will be ready with all the skilled men required to start up the machinery and turn out a heavy tonnage.

The most interesting situation is in the Star mill of the American Tinplate Co. in Twelfth street. This plant was until this summer considered as doomed. The tinplate company had, it is said, decided to abandon the mill and move the machinery elsewhere. Since the strike has come on them and it was demonstrated that the operation of the mill with non-union men was possible under the protection of a well-equipped police force, the officials decided to keep this mill, make extensive improvements in its equipment and make it a permanent fixture of the company. The most significant feature of this plan has been carried out during the past week. This consists of fitting the mill in the same manner as that of the Monessen plant in Monessen, Pa. The former eight mills have been changed to four double mills. Other things have been added that will give the plant a larger capacity, increase its force of men and make it one of the most modern of all the tin plants of the company. With the completion of these improvements the company will be prepared to place a sufficient number of men in the plant to work the four double mills three full turns. This is said to be expected to take place during the present week. Before Saturday, according to Supt. Piper of the Star mills, the plant will be operated to its full extent.

Referring to the present condition of the mills, Mr. Piper said: "We received eight skilled men early this morning. Mr. J. R. Phillips of the company accompanied the men to the mill, and it was not until they were in and comfortably settled for the night that the strikers discovered their presence.

Outside the Star plant today there was a large number of strikers on picket duty. They were quiet and orderly but had their eyes and ears open for any signs of newcomers. The peculiar feature of the strike about the Star plant is the good feeling displayed between the strikers and the managers of the plant. There is no sign of bitterness up to the present time, and when Supt. Piper left the buildings early in the morning he met the strikers and laughed good naturedly at them. He said to the anxious pickets, "I had more fun in getting those last men into the plant than at a game of checkers."

When the strikers were told of the claims of the officials of the Star mill they denied there was as many skilled men at work as was claimed, and said those who were in the plant were sent there from the Monassen plant, which was being crippled in order to accomplish this work.

Everything at McKeesport is reported quiet. Pickets are around the Demmler tinplate mill in large numbers, but they are orderly and are determined to be on hand all night, as they believe an attempt will be made to start the plant. While the fires are lighted and the mill apparently in readiness for a start, it was impossible to get any of the officials to name the exact time when the attempt will be made.

WORDS WE SWALLOW

ON THE TIP OF THE TONGUE, YET WE CAN'T GET THEM OUT.

This Hitch In the Working of the Brain Is Called Aphasia In the Medical Profession—A Trick the Chinaman Uses For the Emergency.

Everybody knows what it is to have a word on the tip of the tongue and yet not be able to speak it. The word is known perfectly well, and yet we cannot for the life of us give it utterance. More often than not it is a common word in everyday use. But it will not be spoken when wanted. What is the secret of this "word forgetfulness?"

Doctors call it aphasia. They cannot explain it, but say it is a little hitch in the working of the brain or intellect. The Chinese, who have done so many quaint and clever things, recognized the difficulty thousands of years ago and invented a very ingenious way of making the best of things.

They manufactured a number of words and sentences that meant absolutely nothing, mere sound without sense. When a Chinaman in the course of conversation comes to a word that he has on the tip of his tongue, but cannot speak, he just makes use of the meaningless phrases invented for that purpose until he recalls the word he wants and goes on with the conversation.

The trick, for trick it is, is much in use in public speaking and certainly is an improvement on the "er—er—ers," coughings and throat clearings that so plentifully besprinkle our own after dinner orations. The speaker preserves his dignity and gives himself time for thought.

Very often the greater the desire to speak the missing word the greater the difficulty or sheer impossibility. The man in the Arabian story could not remember the words "Open sesame," although he was in danger of his life. There are many cases on record of soldiers, even officers, forgetting the password and being shot down by their own sentries. At the critical moment the all important word that they thought they knew as well as their own names escapes them. They struggle to recall it, but the very effort makes it more difficult, and they pay with their lives.

A man may sometimes be tortured and yet be unable to speak the word he most desires to utter. Spies have been captured and have gone to their death in silence not because they have not been eager to betray their comrades, but because under the stress and excitement of the situation they have totally forgotten the information they would convey. A celebrated case of this kind was made the subject of a play produced in London some years ago, called "A Question of Memory."

No doubt every reader will be able to recall instances in which he has suffered from this "word forgetfulness." One can often remember the initial letter of the word, but not the word itself. It is still on the tip of the tongue, even after one has given up the struggle to recollect it.

Actors sometimes forget a word or two in their parts that no effort of their own can give back to them at the moment. But the wings reached and the strain removed they are again immediately word perfect and at a loss to explain their forgetfulness. A whole part is sometimes forgotten. This usually happens after a very long run. During the run of "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray" Mrs. Patrick Campbell one night found herself on the stage as innocent of any knowledge of her part as any member of the audience. She made desperate efforts to "find herself," but it was no good. That performance she had to read the part through from beginning to end.

Names of people are the words that slip our memories most frequently. We see a face we know, and yet we cannot fit a name to it. We are shaken by the hand or slapped on the back, and all the while we are hard at work trying to think of the name of the person who is doing it. Kings are credited with royal memories, and it is rare to find a sovereign who has not a wonderful memory for faces. But he usually has some one at his elbow who can jog his memory for names.

It is not always safe to fish for a name wanted. When Ellen Terry and Henry Irving were in America one year, they met a gentleman who, they knew, had reason to expect that they could remember his name. But this they failed to do. So Miss Terry approached him and said: "Sir Henry and I cannot agree as to the exact spelling of your name. Will you please put us right?" "Certainly," was the reply. "It is J-o-n-e-s!"

Aphasia is divided by those who have studied the subject into "word blindness" and "word deafness." A man who is "word blind" may be able to pronounce the name of letters, but cannot understand the meanings of the words they form. A man who is "word deaf" can understand ordinary sounds and music, but cannot understand spoken words. His speech is often mere senseless jargon.

But the passing forgetfulness of a word has little to do with these more serious forms of the complaint. We swallow words under the influence of excitement or more often of fatigue. People getting better from a serious illness are tormented by the loss of common words. This is particularly the case after influenza. One of our leading statesmen after an attack of this malady suddenly lost the thread of his speech in the midst of a public discourse.

"Word forgetfulness" is, however, mainly the result of careless observation or of want of training. What we never knew well we very easily forget. An experienced police detective never forgets a face or name.—Pearson's.

properly refused. For it is our good American policy in dealing with enemies or insurgents, white, red or brown, mobs, Indians or Tagalogs, never to show fight until practically forced into it. The railway companies in anticipation of the strike had gathered some hundreds of workmen across the Missouri ready to be rushed by special train to Brentwood, but neither the police, posses nor militia had been mobilized.

Pondering anxiously over the situation, Cresswell was walking slowly homeward up Thayer street. He had been talking with the mayor and certain city fathers at the Brentwood and now wished to see Langdon, but Langdon evidently wasn't home, and the town clock had struck the quarter. The office door was closed and doubtless locked, and Cresswell's keys were in his workaday pockets at the house. Confident of meeting Langdon, he strolled on toward the armory and became suddenly aware of the division superintendent of the Big Horn talking with two of the boys. Cresswell didn't like that official, but for reasons of his own preferred to make much of him. He stopped and held out his hand.

"Oh, good evening, Mr.—er—ah—Colonel Cresswell," stammered the railway man in some confusion. "I didn't see you. I'm glad to see you. Can you tell me where I can find Mr. Langdon? I've knocked and hammered at the office, and these gentlemen say that he went straight home half an hour ago."

"It is true," said one of the young soldiers. "I saw him go in there just before 10 o'clock."

"Odd," said Cresswell. "Suppose we walk over, Mr. Superintendent."

They did, and they knocked and hammered for two minutes without response, and then Cresswell bethought him of the rear door.

"You wish to see him personally?" queried he of the official, with doubt in [illegible] tone.

"Yes. The road sent me an important message. I may as well tell you—confidentially, of course. They want him to go to that meeting that's in full blast at this minute. They think the men will listen to him."

"I see," said Cresswell, with sarcastic emphasis. "Having kicked him out into the cold for another man's crime, they want him to help them out of another scrape. You must feel gratified at being the bearer of such a message. However, come on. We'll try the back."

An alley parallel with Thayer street divided the block, and Cresswell's office buildings covered about half the lot. Wood, coal and ice were delivered by way of that alley, which accounted for the worn path to the open cellarway, but not for the footprints in the snow on the steps leading up to the back door. Cresswell tried the knob, and the door was fast. But who left the cellar steps uncovered? "Have you a gun?" he asked, and the superintendent faltered, "Yes."

Gripping his own revolver, a faithful friend of Kentucky days, Cresswell cautiously descended the steps and felt his way through the dampness and dark. He had no match, and lighting would only reveal him to prowlers if there were any. He knew the premises thoroughly and quickly reached the lower hall and the stairway to the ground floor above him. It was dark as Erebus, and he, breathing heavily, felt his way up the creaking flight until within reach of the top. Then something fell with stunning force and danced before his eyes, and he went crashing back the way he came, bounding, rolling and sliding till he brought up senseless and bleeding at the foot of the stairs.

CHAPTER XIII.

Noon of Oct. 28 struck on the deep toned bell of the city hall, Brentwood's pride, and sharp at the sound every hand in the railway shops, sheds and yards followed suit and went out. So did the fires in the furnaces in the course of the night, for no man succeeded in getting in to replenish them. So did not the trains, freight or passenger, on either Big Horn or Seattle, for the rails were a lather of soap, the boilers a reek of foam. The casualty list in the motive power showed 23 engines "killed," and the only wheels to revolve east or west were those trundling the United States mail, the operatives, with calm sagacity, offering no objection to the running of postal cars, yet firmly opposing everything else. Following the traditions of the Big Horn, the new general manager appeared promptly on the scene, while he of the Seattle sniffed the battle from afar and staid there. Mr. Burleigh came to threaten and command, was promptly hoisted aboard a baggage car and bidden to address the meeting from the rear platform, which he essayed to do, the car speedily gliding away with him to the accompaniment of much derision and many decided catcalls, not to mention a few defunct quadrupeds and doubtful eggs. Mr. Burleigh was given a sample of the running qualities of the fast mail down the winding gorge of the Red Water and spent the night in blasphemy and bitterness of spirit at Gunnison. Not even a farmer's buckboard could he find to take him back. He wired for the trainloads of substitutes across the Big Muddy, and they were ditched ten miles from any town and had to build bonfires out of the wreck until that was used up and then kept warm with a few miles of snow fence that unaccountably went up in flames. The Seattle sent 60 Pinkertons on a special and thereby precipitated a sympathetic strike across the Missouri and the special into the shallows near the eastern shore well up to the Pinkertons' middle. When finally rescued, these amateurs were roosting on car roofs, cold, wet and bedraggled, an object of charity to the countryside. Then came the order for troops, long withheld, and before it was issued the Brentwood rifles knew there would be no first sergeant to call the roll. Somewhere about midnight of the 27th, dazed and bleeding, Colonel Cresswell had staggered into the street in front of his office, feebly calling for help. The police found a pool of blood at the foot of the cellar stairs and splashes all along from near the top, but not a sign of struggle elsewhere and not a trace of Eric Langdon. Along toward morning Cresswell managed to tell his story, and then the police went and routed out the division superintendent, who told a queer tale. When the doctors heard it, they looked oddly at each other and agreed that it were best that Cresswell shouldn't hear it until he was stronger. It might unduly excite him now. Cresswell said he left the superintendent, Mr. Betts, on guard at the cellar stairway in the back yard, revolver in hand, and that he should have seen his (Cresswell's) assailants when they made their escape at the rear, the only way they could have gone. The superintendent said he had met Mr. Cresswell casually on the street, inquired for Mr. Langdon and went with Cresswell to the office to find him. They knocked until they believed that Langdon couldn't be there, and he (the superintendent) desired to search elsewhere, but Cresswell was somewhat persistent that Betts should wait while he went round and tried the back way. Betts went just to oblige the colonel; "didn't like to offend him." The fact was he noticed that the colonel had been drinking a little, and at such times, as was well known, the Kentuckian was apt to be a bit dictatorial and to take offense rather easily. Betts said he knew the colonel had been at the bar of the Brentwood that evening, and after waiting a few minutes just to assure himself the colonel was safely within he hurried away about his own business. Had he heard no sound of fall or struggle? was asked. Not a sound of that kind. He had heard some one moving about in the hall and thought, of course, it was the colonel. In fact, sotto voce, he added he thought so still and that under the circumstances the colonel might later have missed his footing and fallen headlong. It could not be conceived possible that Mr. Langdon would brutally assault his friend and benefactor.

Now, Cresswell had taken three or four nips of his favorite beverage that evening, but Boniface swore he was perfectly himself when he left the Brentwood. That might be, said the shrewd and somewhat envious lawyer employed by the Big Horn as counsel, and yet might he be "under alien influences." One of two theories, said the railroad lawyer, could be derived from the facts, and only two. Mr. Cresswell had fallen down stairs under the influence of one of two forces, Bourbon or a blow. If a blow, who gave it but Eric Langdon? No one else was known to have entered those doors that night. In all the tense, pent up excitement attending the inevitable strike this incident was discussed with bated breath. Men who knew Cresswell and saw him that night knew he was not so far gone in liquor as to fall down stairs and therefore believed the story of assault. Men who knew Langdon swore he was incapable of assaulting Cresswell. What could possibly be his motive? The safe stood securely locked. Desk and drawers were intact. There were no reasons why Langdon should go except the threats, which he held in contempt, and every reason why he should stay. The railway lawyer hinted at renewal of proceedings by Perrigo's bank to recover certain sums with interest. The bank, however, being questioned, reluctantly testified that that incident was closed, satisfactory settlement having been made, and so it had in Langdon's behalf by the big hearted Kentuckian and his friend the mayor. No; nothing but threats against Langdon's life could be heard of as a cause of Langdon's disappearance, nothing whatever until the second day of the strike, when two people appeared who said that if guaranteed protection they would tell something. The something proved to be that an open two horse wagon drove into the alley just before 10 o'clock and drove out again about 10:40, when it had two more men in it who were bending over something in the bottom. These two jumped out when it reached the street. They went one way, the wagon the other. Then uprose the solid men of Brentwood save the few whose souls were mortgaged to the Seattle or whose notes were falling due at Perrigo's, and at a meeting held just after dark the first check was given to the widespreading sympathy felt for the strikers throughout the community. Up to this moment they had practically carried all before them. Property had been carefully guarded by the details from their own number. People had been treated with civility even if denied means of transportation. They were determined, they said, to do nothing to forfeit the good will of friends and fellow citizens. Their grievance was Brentwood's and their oppressors the rival railways. Violence of any kind, said the strike leaders, would be tolerated only as a last resort. Yet here was evidence that even before beginning the strike assault, abduction, possibly murder, could be laid at the strikers' doors. Cresswell still lay in grievous plight, and Eric Langdon could not be found. Then evidence began to accumulate. A two horse farm wagon, such as described, was seen by other citizens driving westward toward the open prairie. A farmer came in and said that such a wagon stopped at the ford close to his place about midnight. His wife woke him, saying there was something wrong down at the barn—the horses were stamping and snorting. He hurried thither and found everything secure, but could have sworn [illegible] saw a light dancing away from the barn in the direction of the ford as he issued from the house. Curiosity therefore led him to investigate, and surely enough he heard voices. Two men were talking in low tones. One of their horses had picked up a stone, and, so tightly was it wedged, they couldn't get it out. He gathered that one of them had been to the barn in hopes of finding a pick. The farmer was on the point of hailing them when the whistle of the night freight sounded away down the valley toward Brentwood, and he heard one of them say, "My God, there's No. 8 now, and we can't flag her this side of the bridge!" then, apparently speaking to some one within the wagon, continued: "Now, lie still if you value your life! Jump in, Jim, quick!" And with that the horses were lashed to a run, and they clattered away up the pike in the darkness. About ten minutes later he heard the freight rumbling along up the valley, and after it had almost got beyond hearing distance to the west there came the short, quick single whistle, the signal for brakes. That must have been somewhere about the long bridge at the big bend. That was something unusual, and, coupled with what he heard the men say, it excited his suspicion. Then when his copy of The Banner told him about Langdon's disappearance he felt sure what it all meant and therefore came in to Brentwood to tell his tale. And it was this that brought confusion to Betts and the Brentwood strikers, for it was now evident that Langdon had been spirited away.

That foul means and force had been resorted to no one who knew Langdon could doubt. That railway men were the perpetrators the words overheard by Farmer Hawley gave presumptive evidence and that the abducted man was sorely needed developed in the course of that very night.

Observant of his counsel, the rifles at the first intimation of another strike had kept a guard at the armory, and this guard was increased to a lieutenant and 20 men at noon on the 28th. Moreover, it was made up of men who would fight, and the scouts of the strikers sent to reconnoiter and report on the feasibility of again seizing the arms and equipments returned and "reported adversely." Two days later, determined to wipe out the stain of their military misadventure the previous year, fully 60 members promptly assembled at the call and awaited orders at the armory, and still, barring the banishment of Mr. Burleigh in one direction and the presumable taking off of Langdon in the other, no deed of damage or violence had been charged to the strike. The sheriff had eagerly accepted the theory that Langdon himself was Cresswell's assailant and had fled to escape consequences. This "made him solid" with the strikers and warranted a certain inaction. But now the business men had taken matters in hand. The Banner "ripped him up the back," as his friends expressed it, and the governor himself was on his way to Brentwood, coming up from the capital by a cross country spur of the Union Pacific, and matters were nearing a climax. The Grays were at the station at Gunnison waiting for the troop train, with Major McConville and four companies, feeling its cautious way over culver and trestle from the Missouri. If the strikers refused to disperse at the beck of the governor, would they flinch from the prick of the bayonet? That was the absorbing question. The mayor said yes. The men thundered no, and Brentwood held its breath and waited. Meantime the orders for the rifles were to sleep on their arms at their quarters. It was the policy of wisdom.

And now, "If no new complications arise," said the mayor, "we can hope for a quiet night, but it's the calm before the storm. I wonder if that train's in with the re-enforcements from up the road?"

"I'll telephone and ask," said Boniface, leading the way to the rotunda.

It was filled with men, talking in low, cautious tones, glancing nervously about from group to group. Many were strike sympathizers, several were law and order men, most were desirous of being considered neutral. The strong men of the antistrike party, irrespective of politics, had attended the meeting and come out in the wake of Boniface and the mayor. A little squad of reporters bore down on them at once, but Boniface begged them to wait and escorted the mayor behind the desk and rang up the superintendent of the Big Horn. A quavering voice answered that the superintendent wasn't there. "Is that train in with those people from Rosebud and the other stations?" asked Boniface, and people began edging up to the desk to listen. "What? I don't hear you," said Boniface again. "Isn't in! Why, they said they were due before dark. Where were they when you last heard? Wh-at? You haven't heard? Lines cut? Had to wait for women! What women? I don't understand."

By this time half the men in the lobby had gathered about the desk. What was that about women? No women were needed. It was no place for them here. They should be at their firesides, taking care of the children and the household, while husbands and fathers hurried down to help the cause of Brentwood. Here was the seat of war, here the heart of the battle, here must the fight be won or lost again. And the unions had summoned all who could possibly come, even from the far Black Hills, to haste by special train and join their brethren on the battle line. For over 50 miles the Big Horn paralleled the southern verge of the big Sioux reservation. Just across the Dakota boundary it lay, and half the west bound freight the road carried beyond the Red Water was for the agents or the traders at Rosebud, at Pine Ridge, Sheridan and certain other points of distribution and supply. Around those guarded lines, winter and summer, there ever hovered dozens of dissolute whites, seeking to prey on the red man. Pirates of the plains were these fellows, reckless and outlawed, and more than one hideous outbreak of the Sioux had been traced to their nefarious deeds. Whisky was their stock in trade, and many an untutored savage in exchange for a bottle had parted with robes, rifle and pony as well as his senses. Conflict was frequent. Troops were few. There had been bad blood between the Indians and certain settlers along the Chaduza all summer. In September two herders were found scalped and mutilated just one week after Spotted Elk and Iron Voice, two young braves of the Brule tribe, had been slain in a drunken row with a party of prairie tramps not ten miles from Rosebud. The agent said he could restrain and control the Sioux provided the governor would take charge of the settlers, but settlers have votes, Indians have not, and the governor would do nothing to intimidate the sovereigns of the soil. The murderers of the Indians, though well known, were still unwhipped of justice and bragging about the frontier saloons of their cowardly deed. The commanding officer of the little cavalry post not far from the Rosebud agency wired that the Indians were dancing night after night and holding big powwows. There was trouble ahead for somebody. The dispatch reached Washington the day the Pinkertons and trainloads of outside workmen were dumped into the ditch, the very day, moreover, that brought the appeal for troops to protect property and open the roads. The answer to the frontier fort was a telegram ordering the post, with its women and children, to be left "with a suitable guard" while the commanding officer, with all available men

Dickens and His Titles.

Charles Dickens had great difficulty in choosing titles for his various publications, says The Golden Penny. The following is a list of no fewer than 14 suggestions given by the author to his adviser, Foster, for the title of one book, out of which, need hardly be added, No. 6 was chosen:

1. According to Crocker.
2. Prove It.
3. Stubborn Things.
4. Mr. Grandgrind's Facts.
5. The Grindstone.
6. Hard Times.
7. Two and Two Are Four.

Sure of a Visit.

As a rule, said a prison warden, a man is in a despondent mood during his first week's imprisonment. There are exceptions, however, as this incident will show

One Saturday about dinner time I was suddenly accosted by one of the new arrivals who had served the first week of his sentence.

"I say," he remarked, "has a lady been asking for me at the gate?"

I told him that if he had been wanted the governor would have sent for him.

"Oh, very well. Keep cool," he said. "This is the first time for ten years I've put in a full week's work, and the old woman is sure to be at the gate for my wages."

And with a grin the cheerful one passed on.—London Answers.

A Little Too Faithful.

A thief in Paris, being chased by the police, threw away during his flight the purse he had stolen and was in a fair way, after being taken to the police station, of being allowed to go free for lack of sufficient evidence to hold him when his faithful dog, which he had trained to fetch and carry, trotted into the station, wagging its tail, with the missing purse in its mouth.—Paris Journal.

The Gentleman's Psalm.

A reader of the Scriptures emphasizes the Fifteenth Psalm as the gentleman's psalm because it describes as among the many who are entitled to be considered as gentlemen "one who leadeth an incorrupt life, speaketh truth from his heart, doeth no evil to his neighbor, is lowly in his own eyes, keepeth his word even if it be to his own hindrance."

Not Alike.

The Professor—Don't use that phrase, my dear. It is grossly unscientific.

His Wife—What phrase? "As much alike as two peas?"

The Professor—Yes. Examined under the microscope, two peas will present startling differences.—Puck.

BASE BALL.

Last Saturday afternoon the game between Clinton and Tecumseh, at Clinton, was witnessed by nearly 1,000 people, and our home boys brought home the scalps of the "Champion's of Southern Michigan." Clinton put up some poor ball. Martin pitched the game for them and pitched poor ball (that was on account of a carbuncle on his neck.) Clinton played Harris on third, and he was their only man, making 2 runs, 1 hit, 2 put-outs, 3 assists and no errors. Clinton got only 3 hits and none of those outside of the diamond Susman and Rikert of the home team each made a two base hit. Martin struck out 11 men, McCarthy 10.

Following is the score.

First Annual After Harvest

CARNIVAL

A WELL RUN, HAPPY EVENT

Inaugurated at Tecumseh To-day.

The sun rose as early as usual this morning and the first peep denoted that Tecumseh would have a beautiful day for its first annual carnival. And from early until late, nicer weather was never made, the temperature was not too hot neither was it too cold. Just right for sports, their enjoyment and every kind of pleasure.

It was expected that Tecumseh would see a large crowd of people, but in early morning, the crowds began to come and kept on coming until long after the passenger train came down from Clinton in the afternoon, when it seemed as if the town could not hold another person. Chicago and Evans street were literally packed with people. No teams were allowed on these streets and the people took possession of the town. This state of affairs continued until late at night, after the fire works were over.

The first band to arrive was Deerfield and the members came on the 7:45 Detroit Southern train. Next was the band from Fairfield, brought by the Lake Shore at 9:45. Then Brooklyn drove in about 10 o'clock and finally the Page Fence band, procured by the base ball association, came, on the 2:20 Detroit Southern. From the time the Deerfield band came in the morning until late in the evening, there was not a minute all day that some band was not playing good music. In fact the bands were all good, and by the amount of music made certainly earned their money.

Every event happened as advertised, from the race between Henry Jones and John Loomis with their man-mobiles in the morning and winding up with the scrub horse race in the afternoon. A list of all the events is appended at the end of this article.

Tecumseh is the center of trade for the surrounding farming community, and it has been the idea of the Tecumseh merchants for some years to give a carnival day in Tecumseh for the entertainment of their farmer friends and customers that they might all come to town to visit and mingle with the Tecumseh people, and to have a day of rest and enjoyment.

Never have the merchants of Tecumseh enjoyed a better trade than during the last year, so that it was easy for a number of them to circulate around and gather together $500.00, which amount was all expended for the entertainment of our guests for the day. Bands were hired, bills were printed to call the people to-gether, fire works purchased, and every thing for the comfort and amusement of our guests provided by the committee. The money was all raised, and on Monday previous to the celebration, every bill was paid. The HERALD has taken the liberty to name this event the First Annual After Harvest Carnival, thinking that on account of its success a like day will be given each and every year hereafter.

It is estimated that over 8,000 people were present during the day and it is notable that there was not an arrest in the village. Everyone was orderly, sober, well meaning, good natured and happy. Every event passed off as advertized and the different amusements kept everybody busy and occupied from 8 o'clock a. m. until after the fireworks in the evening, drawing for Tecumseh, perhaps the largest crowd, the people can ever remember and making, the HERALD can safely say, the best conducted and most enjoyable occasion the town has ever experienced.

We cannot finish up without making special mention of the display of fireworks in the evening, which was one of the best ever seen in Lenawee county, and on behalf of the people, we give thanks to the committee of arrangements for the good management and hard work in giving to the Tecumseh people and their guests, a celebration, perfect and successful in detail and realization

Following are the events of the day:

Carnival Notes.

The balloon ascension, by Prof. Jeremy, was perfect. He made an elegant parachute drop and landed on the top of Joe Smith's house.

Fred Waring and Albert Rector fell from their wheels to-day when they started in the race, and came back.

Martin Hatt, who won first in the potatoe race, fainted away at the finish but was brought to very quickly.

A dance was held in the armory which called a large crowd to-day. They commenced at 1:30 p.m. and kept open till early in the morning.

The crowd was so large yesterday at the carnival that the 1200 people who went to the ball game was not noticed, many people not even knowing that there was a game.

The Detroit Southern, due here at 2:20 in the afternoon, arrived here at 4 with 250 people from the south.

Don H. C. Bowen, who entered the automobile race, was unable to keep steam, owing to an accident Monday and on the last half was quite a distance behind the first automobile. Don made the trip the third time around.

Adrian People Think They Will Loose The Century Box Plant.

Without doubt the Century mail box plant of this city will locate in Tecumseh. The business men of that place held a meeting recently to decide on accepting the proposition made them. They are still working on the subscription to the stock necessary to locate the plant in that village. It is understood quite an addition to the present stock will be raised, and the plant is ready to move at once on completion of the negotiations. It is also stated by Tecumseh people that it will move without a bonus, if sufficient capital stock can be subscribed to buy out the present holders.

The assigned reason for moving is that the firm has not enough room in this city to do its present work, let alone the increase which is coming every day. Tecumseh business men are putting forth extra efforts to secure the prize, and they will accomplish it. The factory will be located in the old Heesen plant, directly across the track from the Lake Shore freight house.

As the Century mail box company will do an enormus shipping business, there is a side track for that purpose running past the property.—Adrian Times.

A New Firm.

On account of the ill health and increasing duties connected with the management of the Semi-weekly HERALD, I have rented the job printing business of the HERALD establishment to Leon Burlingame and Clarence Jackson, who will, beginning Sept. 1 under the firm name of Burlingame & Jackson, conduct it for a term of months.

Both young men have worked in the HERALD office and are good printers, besides they are bright men and good workers. Leon Burlingame has had three years active experience in Detroit and is an accomplished printer. The HERALD wishes for the new firm all success and they will no doubt receive it.

The HERALD job office is equipped with better and more material than any other in the county, outside of Adrian, and as always it will no doubt do more work than any other. I will still continue to manage and print the Semi-weekly HERALD and thank all for their liberal patronage and support.
GEO. N. STACY.

One Day Late.

The HERALD is one day late this time but we hope the subscribers will pardon the delay as it was made to give them the full account of the carnival of Tuesday. The HERALD is usually one day at least ahead of time to get the news, but in this case one day behind which answers as well.

LONGFELT WANT.

It Is Supplied in this Vicinity at Last.

It is hard to always be pleasant.

Good natured poeple are often irritable.

If you knew the reason you would not be surprised.

Ever have itching piles?

Not sick enough to go to to bed or not well enough to be content

Nothing will annoy you so.

The constant itching sensation.

Hard to bear, harder to get relief.

Keeps you awake nights.

Spoils your temper, nearly drives you crazy.

Isn't relief and cure a long felt want?

It is to be had for everyone in Doan's Ointment.

Mr. C. C. Church, of 520 South 7th street, Ann Arbor, now retired from the active duties of life, says: "I have no hesitation in recommending Doan's Ointment. To anyone requiring a healing and soothing preparation it will prove invaluable. I suffered for years from itching hemorrhoids and though I tried everything I could hear of and used remedies prescribed by scores of friends I was unable to obtain permanent relief until my attention was called to Doan's Ointment. I was somewhat surprised after the second application to notice what a different effect it had from anything I had hitherto used. Encouraged I used it strictly according to directions and in a surprisingly short length of time when you take into account the number of years I was afflicted, the irritation ceased and the inflammation was allayed. When Doan's Ointment cured me it will cure others."

Crushing a Lawyer.

De Wolfe Hopper was once a witness in a suit for slander, and the opposing counsel in the courtroom said:

"You are an actor, I believe?"

"Yes," replied Hopper.

"Is not that a low calling?"

"I don't know, but it's so much better than my father's that I am rather proud of it."

"What was your father's calling, may I ask?"

"He was a lawyer," said Hopper.

A Song Inspiration.

Chambers' Journal says the inspiration for Milton Wellings' song "Some Day" came to him while he was waiting in an agony of suspense to hear from his wife, rumor having arisen of an accident to a yachting party of which she was a member. Nervously opening a book, his eyes fell on the line, "Or are you dead or that you live," which line he incorporated in his song.

Celluloid.

The base of celluloid is common paper. By action of sulphuric and nitric acids it is changed to gun cotton, then dried, ground and mixed with from 20 to 40 per cent of camphor, after which it is ground fine, colored with powder colors, cast in sheets, pressed very hard and at last baked between sets of superheated rollers.

The Coy Coyote.

"Speaking about smart animals," said the real estate man, "I want to go on record as saying that there is no animal that can hold a candle to the coyote for smoothness. When I first went out to western Kansas, I had an ambition to kill enough coyotes to make a lap robe to send back to my friends in the east I tramped all over that country with a gun, but I never could get nearer than within a mile of a coyote. I used to drive out in my buggy and hide the gun under the seat, but it didn't make any difference. Not a coyote ever got near enough so that he could have been reached with anything short of a long range cannon. One day I started out in a hurry and forgot my gun. I hadn't gone a mile from town until I ran on to a group of four coyotes. The critters didn't even take the trouble to lope off out of sight. They just walked off two or three rods from the road and sat down on their hunkers and looked at me and yawned. It made me hot to see their infernal impudence, and I made a dive as if I were going to get the gun out from under the seat. I thought sure I would scare them away. Well, maybe you wouldn't believe it, but those cussed coyotes never moved. They just sat up there and actually grinned. They said just as plain as if they had used the words: 'Oh, you needn't try to run any bluff on us! We are strictly on to our job.' How they knew I hadn't that gun I don't know, but I have had great respect for the sense of a coyote ever since."—Kansas City Journal.

Mr. Daniel Bantz, Otterville, Ia. says: "Have had asthma and a very bad cough for years, but could get no relief from the doctors and medicines I tried, until I took Foley's Honey and Tar. It gave immediate relief, and done me more good than all the other remedies combined. J. J. Orr.

Getting Personal.

The favorite Scottish method of dealing with sleepers in church was publicly to denounce the delinquents. The Christian Leader tells this story:

When the Rev. Walter Dunlap, minister of a United Presbyterian church in Dumfries, saw a member of his flock nodding while he was preaching, he stopped suddenly and said:

"I doot some o' ye hae taen ower mony whey porridge the day. Sit up, or I'll name ye oot!"

Another Caledonian preacher, on like provocation, cried out: "Hold up yer heads, my friends, and mind that neither saints nor sinners are sleeping in the next world."

Then, finding that this general exhortation was insufficient to deter a certain well known member of the church from getting his night's rest forward, the reverend gentleman turned toward the offender and said:

"James Stewart, this is the second time I have stopped to waken ye. If I need to stop a third time, I'll expose ye by name to the whole congregation."

The Giraffe's Timidity.

A giraffe is very timid on hearing slight sounds, but is indifferent to loud ones. A writer in The Leisure Hour says: "Noisy sounds, like a man walking by with hobnail boots, it does not notice, but a lady coming in with hardly more sound than the rustling of her dress makes it start, with pricked ears and eyes distended. We remember well, after a terrible explosion of gunpowder on a barge on the canal, asking the keeper of the giraffes of that day how they had taken it, and he said he was surprised how very little notice they took. They jumped to their feet, but almost at once lay down again when they found nothing happened. "But," he added, "if I were at nighttime to creep along that gallery in my socks they would be so scared that I believe they would dash themselves to bits." They fear the lurking foe, and a bing bang scares them less than a faint, rustling sound. They are in that respect very deerlike."

The Bloodstone.

Bloodstone, which is really green chalcedony spotted with jasper, is accounted for by the following legend: At the crucifixion a piece of chalcedony lay at the foot of the cross, and on it dropped the Saviour's blood, from which time the stone is said to have borne red spots, which are supposed to increase and to deepen in color when danger is near. It is also said to revive the spirits and to inspire to great deeds, to check excessive bleeding and last, but not least, to render its wearer invisible at will.

HIS START IN LIFE.

"DOC" HARTMAN AND HIS WONDERFUL GREASE ERADICATOR.

With Soap Candles and Bottles of Rainwater He Fooled the Public and Laid the Foundations of a Substantial Fortune.

"Talk about your self made men," said an old timer among a party of horsemen gathered in one of the speedway inns, "I don't think any of 'em can equal the early experiences of Tim Hartman, who died in St. Louis many years ago, leaving nearly a million dollars to be fought over by his heirs. He made his first good sized pile on patent medicines, then he picked up a great deal more on real estate, and at last he rounded out with speculation in Montana copper, but he was known as 'Doc' Hartman to the time of his death by his few intimate friends.

"But the story that I'm going to tell, and the one which he often told himself, concerns his very earliest experiences in the accumulation of money. Tim Hartman started life with $1. He kicked around as a barefooted boy—and a pretty mean one, too—in a little town in Connecticut until he was 18 years old, and at that time he had become so fresh and so full of wind and general cussedness that his father one day told him he was no good, never had been and never would amount to a picayune. The old gentleman, just to carry out the bluff, told Tim that he had a good mind to cut him off with a dollar and make him earn his own living. Tim straightened up and called the bluff. He told the old man that he would take the dollar and get out then and there and hustle for himself. The old man handed him a crisp $1 bill and told him that he'd be glad to see him make a fortune with it.

"The first thing that cuss did was to go about in a few back yards that he knew of and gather together a lot of empty bottles which were of no use to anybody. Then, for 10 cents, he bought a large cake of a kind of white soap that was then, and still is, on the market. He melted this soap and, after borrowing an ancient pair of candle molds from an old granny in the neighborhood, made two beautiful looking candles of soap. He next filled his bottles full of choice rainwater. Then he made for himself one of those little three legged tables like the chuck-a-luck and shell game men use outside the circus, and struck out on foot for a county fair that was being held about 40 miles away.

"When he got there, he put up his little table outside the grounds, where the crowd was pretty thick, lighted one of his soap candles and began to extol the virtues of 'Dr. Hartman's Famous Grease Eradicator,' contained in the bottles set before him.

"'Now, ladies and gentlemen,' he would shout in a stentorian but plausible voice, 'this marvelous liquid, so harmless that it can be drunk with impunity by the smallest infant and yet so penetrating that it will seek out and destroy stains and discolorations from the most refractory substance, was discovered by accident by the famous scientist, Dr. Hartman, the eminent scholar, while he was wandering o'er the wilds of Patagonia. It is colorless, you see, as the waters from heaven, and yet observe the effects of its startling properties!'

"At this point Tim would reach for his soap candle and, inverting it, would smear a lot of the grease over the sleeve of his coat.

"'Now, every one of you knows, ladies and gentlemen,' he would continue, reaching over and uncorking a bottle of his rainwater, 'that there is nothing so penetrating and ineffaceable as the grease from a candle, and yet it is a stain that we are all likely to suffer almost every evening of our lives while toying with that common article of the household, the candle. You will observe that my sleeve is smeared with the annoying substance. Behold'—

"Here that country bred fakir would spill a couple of drops of his rainwater on the soap and with a rub or two would produce a beautiful lather. Another swipe and the soap would have entirely disappeared from the sleeve, leaving not a trace.

"'Now, we make this famous eradicator in such enormous quantities,' Tim would continue, 'that in order to introduce it into every home in this broad land we will dispense with it at the absurdly low price of 5 cents, a nickel a bottle. Step right up! Step right up!'

"Then, when the public was surging forward to purchase the rainwater, Tim would pause occasionally to drink a bottle of it, just to show that it was absolutely harmless.

"Well, the stuff went like hot cakes. When Tim's bottles were all exhausted, he bought more, and when the fair was over he went to another and another until he had traveled all over the country. Then, in some way or other, I don't know how, he got hold of some old patent medicine, and, being a genius, of course he made a big go of it. So that's the way Tim Hartman almost became a millionaire."—New York Times.

Evarts and the Author.

When a popular young author came to see William M. Evarts while he was secretary of state in behalf of a consulship for which he was an applicant, Mr. Evarts congratulated him on the fame which he had acquired, but hastened to add, "Although you have laurels on your brows, I suppose you can't browse on your laurels."

Making the Blind See.

Success in desperate cases by conservative treatment is the lesson often repeated and yet never quite sufficiently learned by any physician or surgeon. The infinite ingenuity behind the healing processes, the never renounced struggle toward normality, is an ever renewed source of wonder. All that is needed to elicit it is confidence in it, delay in doing anything radical, watchfulness to follow up the hints to action as they begin to show themselves.

We know of a living and happy patient who ten years ago had albuminuric retinitis from long existing Bright's disease despite what all the textbooks say as to "two years" in such cases. "Don't do the irrevocable thing until forced to do it" is the warning that has saved many organs and lives. Above all, never proceed with surgery ("the despair of medicine") until physiologic and medical methods have been exhausted.

The Wiener Klinischer Wochenschrift tells of the success of Herr Heller, director of an asylum for the blind, in educating the remnant of visual power retained by a "blind" child. There was only perception of light in a narrowed field left, but this by education was made to yield such indications to the eager mind that after 14 months of endeavor the boy has very useful vision, can distinguish colors and forms and even can read.

There are possibly thousands of blind people who have renounced vision instead of cultivating it to a degree that would render the blind types useless.—American Medicine.

SAVAGES IN JAPAN.

THE HAIRY AINOS AND THEIR RESERVATIONS IN THE EMPIRE.

Odd Customs Practiced by These Aboriginal People of Japan. Unique Styles In Baby Names. Their Resemblance to Our Indians.

The Ainus, generally known to Americans and Europeans as "the hairy Ainos," are the only aboriginal people now living in Japan. They are called "hairy" in contradistinction to the smooth faced Japanese, Koreans and Chinese. Their present home is in Hokkaido, or Yesso, the most northerly part of the empire, although it is supposed that in earlier times they occupied most of the entire country. Ancestors of the Japanese of today found them in possession and by force of superior arms and civilization gradually drove them to the north, much in the same way as the savages were driven back toward the Pacific by the early settlers in America.

The Ainus live today pretty much as the Indians on their reservations in the west. They are still for the most part half savage, and the Japanese name for them, "Yesso," means barbarian. They are very skillful in hunting and fishing, which are their chief occupations. They are under the protection of the imperial government and are entirely separated from the Japanese. The latest census showed that they number very nearly 17,000.

Among the many curious customs of the Ainus perhaps the quaintest is their method of naming their children. They observe a peculiar economy in giving names. The infant must go without a name until it shows itself worthy of bearing one. If it is sickly and not likely to live, it is not considered worth while to waste a name upon it. As each child must by immemorial custom have a brand new name, used by no one in the community, names are scarce and must be guarded. If the child should be given a name borne by some one else, the ghost of the former possessor of the name may come back from the underworld to avenge the slight.

It is customary to take a name from some incident that occurred at the child's birth or it is left to the parents afterward to choose one for it. Should the infant come into the world with a smiling face it might be called Ikishimaburu, which means a smile, or fond parents may call it Kamoissage (a pulling rope of the gods) if they wish their child to be in the special care of the gods.

From the age of 7 to 10 Ainu children of either sex have their heads shaved, but after 11 they are allowed to have long hair and wear the same clothes as grown persons. They wear no clothing unless the weather is very cold.

The favorite and almost exclusive ornament is the earring, usually made of metal. What clothing is worn is made of straw. They never wear shoes or other covering for the feet except as a great luxury and mark of distinction on ceremonious occasions.

The men carry small knives and tobacco pouches, and the women carry small looking glasses and knives. The knife is used as symbolic. The maiden wears it with the blade bare, but when she marries it is worn in a sheath. The women also paint their faces, using a kind of ink for the purpose.

The Ainus live mostly by fishing and hunting. They hunt the bear and deer, catch salmon and other fish and grow potatoes and millet. Whenever they can get it they eat rice, which they regard as the best food, though they do not raise it themselves. Both sexes smoke tobacco and drink liquor.

The marriage customs differ widely from those of the Japanese. The question is first settled between the youth and maiden, who then refer the matter to their parents through a mediator, who should be a relative of the prospective bridegroom. The man must send a present of lacquered ware, which is regarded by them as one of the most precious things in the world. This, however, is reclaimed by him if his wife afterward seeks a divorce.

Ainus live in dwellings of about the same class as those of the American Indians. The rude hut has two windows, one of them for ordinary earthly uses, the other reserved for the entrance of the gods.

Woman is fairly treated and held in deep respect. The man is not allowed to enter the house when the woman is in it alone, and he is not permitted to walk behind a woman. When a man meets a woman, he must salute first, by smoothing his beard and rubbing his hands. Then she responds by touching her nose with a finger of her left hand.

During October the Ainus hold a religious fete, which is called the bear festival, because they sacrifice a bear which has been carefully fostered for three years.

Judicial punishment among the Ainus consists of a severe beating with a stick administered to the culprit. The crimes are generally theft—stealing articles or the wife of a neighbor. As there are eight men to one woman the majority of the males are not married, and wife stealing is very common. The accused is subjected to a long examination by the chief of the community and is then compelled to resort to the ordeal of fire. He must take a stone out of boiling water. If innocent, the Ainus think he will not be injured. If the question cannot be settled in this way, the principals in the dispute must fight it out.

The Ainus are polytheists, though they limit their gods to two, a god of fire and a god of water. The first is called Kabekamoi and the latter Hatokamoi. They, also, like most peoples who have a religious system, believe in some sort of heaven and hell.—Japan and America.

Shaves and Colds.

It is not generally known among men that close shaving is apt to bring on a cold. Barbers, however, are acquainted with this fact, and it is rather on account of it than through any desire to bring their patrons back soon again that they do not, unless ordered to, administer close shaves.

A Queer Frontier Experience.

In narrating the frontier experiences of "The First White Baby Born In the Northwest" in The Ladies' Home Journal W. S. Harwood tells of a queer experience that befell the family in the first year after settling on a farm far removed from the settlements.

The winter had been unusually long and severe, and their stock of provisions ran low. It was a long distance to the nearest base of supplies, and communication with the outside world had been cut off. Indians in the neighborhood one night broke into the granary where the wheat was stored and stole a quantity. In doing this a large amount of broken glass became mixed with the wheat which the Indians left, so for many days, amid much merry story telling and many a joke and laugh, in spite of the serious situation, the family gathered about a large table in their living room and spent the short winter days picking over the wheat, kernel by kernel, in order to free it from the pieces of glass.

For this wheat stood between them and starvation, and none of its precious kernels must be lost. Their stock of flour had long since wasted away, as had most of their food supplies, so they boiled and ate the wheat without grinding. Relief reached them just in time to prevent a sad ending to the experience.

Arab and the Telephone.

We had a party of Arabs along with us and took them all over a great newspaper office. Everything was wildly astonishing to them. They had imagined that the Koran contained all the knowledge and wisdom of the world, yet here were the telegraph, the telephone, the electrotype and the printing press. The place was a veritable enchanters' castle to them. They would never have believed in the telephone if I had not called up their hotel and got one of their own party at that end of the wire.

The dervish who had come along was oold as well as pious. When he heard that his friend five miles away was talking through the instrument, he made a dash at it. He was greatly excited and yelled in a megaphone voice. He thought we were tricking him, but here was his friend talking Arabic. He rolled his eyes at me in a despairing manner and then began a search for devils, being quite convinced that the phone was an invention of satan.—Independent

The Torture of a Flax Shirt.

The most trying ordeal that Booker T. Washington was forced to endure as a slave boy was the wearing of a flax shirt. In his autobiography, "Up From Slavery," he says:

"In the portion of Virginia where I lived it was common to use flax as part of the clothing for slaves. That part of the flax from which our clothing was made was largely the refuse, which of course was the cheapest and roughest part. I can scarcely imagine any torture except perhaps the pulling of a tooth that is equal to that caused by pulling on a new flax shirt for the first time. It is almost equal to the feeling that one would experience if he had a dozen or more chestnut burs or a hundred small pin points in contact with the flesh. Even to this day I can recall accurately the tortures that I underwent when pulling on one of these garments. The fact that my flesh was soft and tender added to the pain. But I had no choice. I had to wear the flax shirt or none, and had it been left to me to choose I should have chosen to wear no covering.

"In connection with the flax shirt my brother John, who is several years older than I am, performed one of the most generous acts that I ever heard of one slave relative doing for another. On several occasions when I was being forced to wear a new flax shirt he generously agreed to put it on in my stead and wear it for several days till it was 'broken in.' Until I had grown to be quite a youth this single garment was all that I wore."

How to Button a Coat.

The art of properly buttoning a coat—any coat—is, do it the other way.

That is to say that nine out of every ten of us button our coats the wrong way. We commence with the topmost button when we should commence with the bottommost.

The frailest portion of a coat, in respect to shape retaining qualities—no matter how well made—is the region of collar and lapels. The swagger merchant tailor always cautions his customer to "wear it buttoned a few days so that the collar may set properly."

Then, this admitted, it follows that tugs and strains affecting this part of the garment tend to destroy its symmetry. Drawing the coat together by the top button and buttonhole for the purpose of fastening exerts a pull all around the shoulders and neck region, which, by repetition, in time will give the smartest coat a hang dog appearance.—Chat.

A GENTLE HINT.

In our style of climate, with its sudden changes of temperature,—rain, wind and sunshine often intermingled in a single day,—it is no wonder that our children, friends and relatives are so frequently taken from us by neglected colds, half the death resulting directly from this cause. A bottle of Boschee's German Syruy kept about home for immediate use will prevent serious sickness, a large doctor's bill, and perhaps death, by the use of three or four doses. For curing Consumption Hemorrhages, Pneumonia, Severe Coughs, Croup, or any disease of the Throat or Lungs, its success is simply wonderful, as your druggist will tell you. Unfortunate Deduction.

Sergeant Kelly of the Irish bar in the early years of the nineteenth century used to indulge in a picturesque eloquence, racy of the soil, but unfortunately he would sometimes forget the line of argument and would always fall back on the word "therefore," which generally led his mind back to what he had intended saying. Sometimes, however, the effort was almost disastrous.

One time he had been complimenting the jury, assuring them that they were men of extraordinary intelligence and then branched off into a statement of his case. With a wave of his hand and a smile on his face he proceeded:

"This is so clear a case, gentlemen, that I am convinced you felt it so the very moment I stated it. I should pay men of intelligence a poor compliment to dwell on it for a minute, therefore I shall proceed to explain it to you as minutely as possible."—Green Bag.

Cleaning Furniture.

Where a piece of furniture is very much soiled and requires to be cleaned and polished, first wash it thoroughly with warm soapy water, washing only a small surface at a time and drying it quickly by rubbing it hard with a flannel. Mix together one pint of linseed oil and a half pint of kerosene, wet a flannel with the oil mixture and rub the cleaned furniture. Rest half an hour before taking a fresh piece of flannel and then by vigorous rubbing polish the wood until it shines like glass. This will not injure the nicest wood and is an easy method of keeping furniture bright. The odor soon disappears if the windows are left open.

Where He Drew the Line.

"You don't like walking very much, do you?" inquired the farmer's horse, who was grazing near the canal.

"Oh, I don't mind it under certain conditions," replied the canalboat mule.

THEY'RE AFTER HIM

Posse Has Disbanded Because It Could Not Locate Fugitive.

TAKEN REFUGE IN THE WOODS

Francis Is Very Popular With the Colored People—Bloodhounds Put on His Trail—All Other Negroes Disarmed.

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 30.—"Bossie" Francis, the murderer of Miss Mary Henderson at Columbus, Mo., on Tuesday evening, has thus far eluded his pursuers, and last night the large posse that has been searching for him partially disbanded, discouraged over the failure of their efforts, after having been, as they supposed, at the point of capturing the negro. A pack of bloodhounds was obtained from Manhattan, Kan., and taken to the scene of the murder. They found the train of Francis readily and followed it straight to the coal mine at Blackwater, owned by a negro, whose wife is an aunt of Francis. The posse of 200 men felt sure that Francis was hidden in the mine shaft, but as he was known to have two pistols, none of the men ventured to go down. Finally A. W. Rice, owner of the bloodhounds, entered the mine, taking the dogs with him, but failed to find Francis. Late in the afternoon the men decided to disperse at night, leaving a few of their number on guard at important points. The search will be continued today.

"Bossie" Francis is known to all the negroes in the county, and is very popular among them. No one supposes that he has gone far from Columbus, and it is thought that no negro in the neighborhood would refuse him food and shelter. All the negroes have been disarmed by the volunteers and their houses searched.

There seems to be no doubt that Francis first fled to his uncle's house at Blackwater, and then took refuge in the woods. The three negroes taken to Warrensburg, suspected of having aided Francis in his flight, are in no danger, the town being entirely quiet.

APPLICATIONS FOR WORK.

The Mills Have Them—Say They Will Promote the Men.

Pittsburg, Pa., Aug. 30.—Officials of the mills of the United States steel corporation, that closed by the strike of the Amalgamated associated, state that they are receiving many applications from former employes for work. The announcement that the company would start their mills non-union has, the officials believe, caused a weakening in the ranks of the strikers, and many are seeking cover. The Amalgamated officials, however, claim that their ranks are unbroken and strong as ever. One of the steel officials said that there was a general mistake being made regarding the time it would take to train inexperienced men and make them capable of operating mill machines. This has been believed to be the case so long that few have taken the trouble to prove it otherwise. It is now determined, he said, to have new men placed in positions that will give them a chance to learn the skilled work, and many of the men who held menial positions in the union mills are to be taught skilled work, with which they are in a measure familiar through long association with the workings of the mills. It is confidently asserted that before many months pass it will be possible to produce many new men and plenty to man all the plants that are now idle and which union men have refused to take hold of. The strikers says it will take years to accomplish this.

There was little of interest about headquarters of the Amalgamated association yesterday. The cause for the absence of Assistant Secretary M. J. Tighe was intimated in a report from Chicago which says that he is engaged with Vice-President W. C. Davis in organizing a new Amalgamated lodge in South Chicago, which will take the place of the one expelled by him two weeks ago. It is said that 14 members have been secured for the new lodge out of the membership of the former lodge. The American Tinplate Co. has announced that it will start the Demmler mills of the company on Monday next week. Police protection has been asked from Mayor Black of McKeesport.

New Lightship.

Cleveland, O., Aug. 30—Owing to the fact that many groundings and disasters have been reported from southeast shoals, Point Pelee passage, since the burning of lightship Smith and post, the Lake Carriers' association has decided to purchase the steamer Kewaunee of Chicago to do lightship duty at southeast shoals.

Depositors Get a Dividend.

Cleveland, O., Aug. 30.—Depositors in the defunct Cuyahoga Savings & Bankind Co., whose president, R. S. Pollock, committed suicide in Seattle some time ago, will, according to an order issued by the court of common pleas yesterday, get 10 per cent back in a first dividend. In his report to the common pleas court the receiver of the failed institution states that outstanding claims aggregate $507,700 and outstanding assets $60,000, while deposits aggregate $338,000. It is stated that other dividends will follow.

Life Insurance Co.'s Assets.

Chicago, Aug. 30.—A settlement of the litigation which has involved the Northwestern Life Assurance Co. since last September, was effected yesterday before Judge Chetlain by the acceptance of the bid of Walter H. Lee for the assets of the company. Some time ago Mr. Lee offered to pay 40 per cent on all approved claims against the company in return for the title to all the assets. The claims which are to be settled aggregate in round figures the sum of $1,000,000.

Apple Pie Order.

To feel in apple pie order is a phrase which dates back to Puritan times—to a certain Hepzibah Merton. It seems that every Saturday she was accustomed to bake two or three dozen apple pies, which were to last her family through the coming week. These she placed carefully on her pantry shelves, labeled for each day of the week, so that Tuesday's pies might not be confused with Thursday's nor those presumably large or intended for washing and sweeping days eaten when household labors were lighter. Aunt Hepzibah's "apple pie order" was known throughout the entire settlement and originated the well known saying.

ENGINEER KILLED

Twenty-Eight Persons Injured—Two Will Die.

Newark, N. Y., Aug. 30.—The accommodation train leaving Sodus Point over the Northern Central railroad and which arrives in this village at 6 o'clock, was derailed last night at the station at Fairville, about ten miles south of here. Engineer Wm. Meagher of Sodus Point was killed and 28 persons were injured, two of whom, Howard Tubbs, local agent of the Lake Shore, and Libbie Ford of Newark will probably die.

The train was running at nearly 40 miles an hour. Approaching the station at Fairville there is a curve and gravel pit. For some unknown reason the engine jumped the track while passing the gravel pit. The force of the accident turned the engine completely around, throwing the five cars on their sides. The train load of some 150 passengers was thrown into the ditch and the engine and all the cars were badly broken up.

Help was quickly summoned from the neighboring houses and all the assistance possible was rendered. Word was sent to Sodus Point and Newark for physicians, and a special containing five doctors left Newark at 6:45 o'clock. Upon its arrival the Newark passengers were placed aboard and hastened to Newark. Five were sent to Rochester hospitals. Rev. Dr. Burgess, one of the injured, was for 20 years pastor of the Park Presbyterian church at Newark. He is 75 years old and it is doubtful if he recovers. His right leg is broken and he is badly scalded. Mrs. Burgess is also among the seriously injured. Coroner Thacher took charge of Meagher's body and will hold an inquest.

Howard Tubbs, who was badly scalded, died today in the hospital.

A BIG OFFER.

Charles W. Morse Offers to Buy Telegraph and Telephone Co.

New York, Aug. 30.—Chas. W. Morse, a director in the Garfield National bank and the Bank of New Amsterdam, has made a proposition to the board of directors of the Telephone, Telegraph and Cable Co. of America, to purchase that corporation outright for $2,000,000 in cash. This is the only formidable rival of the Bell Telephone Co. Confidential circulars announcing the offer made by Mr. Morse were mailed to the stockholders of the company, in which the board of directors recommended acceptance of the offer in view of the fact that "a large number of stockholders are not willing to advance additional funds."

At the present time the company, at an expenditure of $9,000,000, has arranged for the building of trunk lines between this city and Boston, which will probably be ready for use at the end of a year or two. Since the offer of Mr. Morse, which was made about ten days ago, the boards of directors of the various subsidiary companies of the Telephone, Telegraph & Cable Co. of America have held meetings and approved of his proposition until a day or two ago the directors of the present organization met with the result that the circular of yesterday followed.

Secretary Root is Ill.

Washington, Aug. 30.—Gen. Gillespie has been designated acting secretary by the president, under an act of 1882, which authorizes the head of the bureau to be acting secretary. A year ago the president issued an executive order designating Gen. Miles to be acting secretary in the bureau of the secretary during his absence, and assistant secretary, and in the absence of Gen. Miles then Gen. Corbin was to act. It so happens that all persons directly named to perform the duties of secretary are absent, and Gen. Gillespie therefore was selected. Secretary Root is indisposed.

Guerillas Disappearing.

The Union paper mills of Monongahela City, Pa., were destroyed last night by fire of unknown origin. The loss will be at least $50,000; well insured.

Zack Phelps, a prominent lawyer of Louisville, is dead of pneumonia complicated with heart trouble. Mr. Phelps drew the ten-year agreement of the National baseball league. He was a very prominent as an Elk. His widow and several children survive.

Dr. Nellie Poor of Chicago, who caused some excitement on an Erie train a week ago near Corning, and who with her two sons spent four days in the woods near that place, has been arrested at Buffalo. She was examined by Dr. Fowler, police surgeon, who decided to hold her and the boys until the arrival of some responsible person to take them to Chicago.

South America.

Competent authorities assert that South America has greater undeveloped resources than any other portion of the world. Any crop grown elsewhere can be duplicated there, and the country abounds in mines of coal, silver and gold, most of which have been only slightly developed.

NINE PEOPLE DEAD

Explosion of Boiler on the City of Trenton.

WORSE THAN FIRST SUPPOSED

Passengers Claim That the Steamer Was Running at Topmost Speed to Make Up Time—Pressure of Boilers Too High.

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 30.—It has developed that the result of the explosion of the boiler on the steamer City of Trenton while on her way up the Delaware river from this city to Trenton, N. J., was more appalling than was at first supposed. Nine persons are known positively to be dead, at least 19 are missing, most of whom are believed to have been on the steamer, and two of the injured still in the hospital will probably die.

The identified dead are: William Nelson, aged 67 years, a veteran of the civil war and formerly an inmate of the soldiers' home, Hampton, Va.; James McCormick, 23 years, Wilmington, Del., fireman; Elizabeth Green, 21 years, Philadelphia; Wm. Dunn, 38 years, Philadelphia; Arthur R. [illegible] Lansing, 14 years, Trenton, N. J.; Wm. H. Keen, Philadelphia; Jessie Stratton, Trenton, died in hospital.

In addition to these there are two charred bodies, believed to be those of females, in the morgue. They are beyond recognition and will be buried in Potters' field. There is a large list of missing which will doubtless add many to the death roll.

Although the searchers, consisting of a corps of city police, have been dragging the river ever since Wednesday afternoon, they have been unable to find any more bodies. That there are more victims in the river is the firm belief of the authorities, and their failure to find additional dead is supposed to be due to the strong current in the river at the point where the explosion occurred.

The water was pumped out of the hull of the burned steamer, after which a careful search was made for additional victims of the explosion, but no one was found.

As to the exact cause of the explosion, nothing is yet known, but a rigid investigation is to be conducted at once. Fire Marshal Lattimer, Coroner Dugan, the police department and the United States boiler inspectors for this district will each carry on an independent investigation, but little can be known until the survivors have been examined and a careful inspection of the wrecked steamer shall have been made.

Many of the passengers who escaped injury maintain that the City of Trenton, which was late when she left her wharf in this city, was racing at her topmost speed and that if this had not been the case the accident would not have happened. This is partly borne out by a statement said to have been made by Assistant Engineer John D. Chew. Chew told his wife that he expected to be killed by an explosion on the steamer, as the company made the engineers keep up too high a pressure of steam.

THREE SAILORS DROWNED.

Men Were Sleeping on the Deck and Slid Off.

Washington, Aug. 30.—The navy department has received a cablegram from Capt. Craig of the Albany, dated at Aden, announcing that Frank Schilz and Timothy McCarthy, while sleeping on the poop deck of the Albany last Sunday night, slid overboard during an exceptionally heavy roll of the vessel. Capt. Craig's cablegram said that he remained in the locality where the accident occurred until Sunday, but their bodies could not be recovered. On the following Monday, Geo. Perkins went overboard and was drowned. His body was recovered and will be buried ashore at Aden.

Dr. Bashford Continues.

Delaware, O., Aug. 30.—After an all-day session of the trustees of the Ohio Wesleyan university yesterday, it was announced that Dr. J. W. Bashford, president of the institution, would continue in that office. Dr. Bashford had been offered the presidency of Northwestern university of Chicago and had left the matter to the decision of the Wesleyan trustees. The question of salary was not considered.

Must Not Interfere.

Cleveland, Aug. 30.—United States Judge Francis J. Wing has granted an injunction to prevent the striking workmen at the American Sheet Steel Co.'s plant at Canal Dover, O., from interfering with the company or its employes. The petition alleges the men have coerced and intimidated the employes of the company.

Hanged for Murder.

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 30.—The steamer City of Seattle, from Skagway, brings news of the hanging at Dawson on Aug. 23, of George O'Brien for the brutal murder of Lynne Rolfe, Fred Clayson and Lineman Olsen on Christmas day, 1899. Protesting his innocence to the last, O'Brien mounted the scaffold without a tremor and hurled anathemas on the heads of those who were instrumental in bringing about his conviction. A large crowd witnessed the execution.

WRITTEN AGREEMENTS.

Mine Workers Want Strict Compliance With Present Contracts.

Hazleton, Pa., Aug. 30.—With the adoption of the report of the committee on resolutions the United Mine Workers practically finished their work. The convention will adjourn at noon today. The resolutions recommend written instead of verbal agreements with all the coal companies, strict compliance with the present contract, continuation of the card inspection system as now conducted, and instruct President Mitchell and the district presidents to confer with the coal companies regarding card inspection and violation of agreements and to arrange for a joint conference. These officers are vested with power to declare a strike if contracts now in force are not lived up to.

The resolutions call attention to the advantage resulting to miners and operators by a written contract covering the wage rate for a stated period and specifying the conditions of labor. The committee alleges that instead of agreeing to the request for written agreement the various companies posted notices of an indefinite character. In many instances the resolutions state that written notices posted and verbal agreements made by superintendents with committees have been violated under various pretexts. Employes who derived benefit of the 10 per cent increase have, it is claimed, been discharged and new men placed in their positions at the old wages. The committee states in the resolutions that if the miners are required to live up to their agreement then the coal companies should do likewise, instead of seeking to destroy the mine workers organization by intimidating the men. Hereafter the miners will insist upon written agreements, which shall be signed in joint convention before the present contract expires, and they will also insist upon the present working card being continued until the question of a general working badge for the bituminous and anthracite regions is decided upon at the next national convention.

HOLDS SHERIFF RESPONSIBLE.

That Official Left for Home When Excitement Was Highest.

Jefferson City, Mo., Aug. 30.—Adjt. Gen. Dameron, in a report to Gov. Dockery on the recent Pierce City race war, holds Sheriff Manlove of Lawrence county responsible for the lynching of the three negroes. Gen. Dameron says in his report:

"Will Godly and 'Gene Carter had been suspicioned and the sheriff and his posse went out to arrest them, but for some cause did not see fit to do so. Monday afternoon the excitement at Pierce City was intense and threats of lynching certain negroes, thought to be implicated in the murder of Miss Wild, were made openly. Under this excitement the sheriff saw fit to leave for his home at Mount Vernon. It is generally believed that had Sheriff Manlove remained there when the excitement ran high and threats of lynching were openly made and asked the aid of the militia, the trouble and loss of life would have been averted."

London, Aug. 30.—The Daily Mail publishes today an article written by Ali Nouri Bey, former Turkish consul in Rotterdam, declaring that the massacre of Armenians by Kurds, which has just recommenced, is part of a regular system of extermination. He says: "The number of Armenians killed will depend upon the outcry raised in Europe and the pressure brought to bear upon the sultan. The same horrible process will be repeated year by year until all are killed."

A BRAVE WOMAN

She Surprised Grain Thieves in the Barn

AND HELD THEM PRISONERS

Called to Her Daughter to Bring the Shotgun — Assistance Came Too Late—One Robber Shot, But Got Away.

Ypsilanti, Mich., Aug. 30.—About 9 o'clock Wednesday night Mrs. George Smith, living on the Depuy farm, two miles east, went to the barn to close the doors. She ran upon some men in the barn presumably there to steal the wheat, just threshed. The men folks were away, but, closing the doors, she held the men prisoners as she shouted for her daughter to bring her a shotgun. Her son, at a neighbor's, heard and also ran armed to her assistance.

One of the men finally sprang from an upper story and ran. Both Mrs. Smith and her son fired at him, and he dropped. But at that two others came to his aid, and kept the mother and son away with drawn revolvers. Meanwhile the others escaped from the barn.

A wagon standing some distance away was driven off by the men. It was traced as far as the gravel road, where the electric line runs, but there the trail was lost.

A few weeks ago burglars attempted to break into the house at a time when Mrs. Smith had considerable money on hand, and it is thought these men were of the same gang.

Labor Day Next Monday.

Lansing, Mich., Aug. 30.—Gov. Bliss has issued the following Labor day proclamation:

"Whereas, The legislature of the state of Michigan has appointed the first Monday of September of each year as a legal holiday, designating it as Labor day.

"To the end that the observance may be as full and complete as possible, and the hosts of labor be extended general co-operation, it is requested that on Monday, Sept. 2, A. D. 1901, all the places where labor is employed be closed, so that every workingman and woman, and all who have an interest in their welfare, may be free to take part in the ceremonies of the day.

"The mutual interests of labor and capital are worthy the most careful attention, and general participation in the Labor day observance cannot fail to bring about a better understanding, helpful in every way.

"For the general good of mankind it is earnestly hoped that this, the first Labor day of the twentieth century, may mark a new era in the material progress of all who toil."

Manistee Girl Says Soldiers Are All Right.

Ludington, Mich., Aug. 30.—People of this place are smiling at the expense of the Detroit paper which printed in red an inflamed story about a girl being killed by brutal and bestial soldiers at Manistee.

The heroine of the lurid tale is an 18-year-old Ludington girl, Ada Long, well known in the town. She was at Manistee, an inmate of a resort, and while admitting being roughly handled by soldiers who visited the place, says the men did nothing against her will and holds herself as much to blame as they.

She was somewhat disconcerted by her experience, however, and for fear she might have more at the hands of soldiers, came home to remain until they had gone.

She returned to Manistee yesterday, content to hold her peace. Before leaving she stated she never had any intention of prosecuting anybody.

The soldiers who visited the place where she stayed on the Sunday night prior to the opening of camp acted in such a manner as to create talk, and the story as it went from lip to lip grew and grew until the more imaginative, including the red and yellow papapers of Detroit, had her dead and buried in the backyard.

Folks up this way are amused at the way Gov. Bliss was drawn into the carefully worked-up agitation, his alleged remarks upon the matter, printed in glaring type, giving him great prominence.

Bessie Campbell Drowned.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Aug. 30.—Prof. Gabriel Campbell, who has been visiting in this city, received a telegram yesterday to return home immediately to Hanover, N. Curious Accident.

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 30.—In an accident due to a spreading rail on the Southern railroad four miles from East St. Louis yesterday, Frank Haefle, chief car inspector of the road, lost his wife, Elmore Drumm, fireman, was fatally and Scott Muconnery, engineer, seriously, injured.

The accident was one of the most curious known in the annals of railroading. Mr. Haefle was inspecting cars with the aid of a locomotive. A spreading rail caused the huge machine to leave the track. The jar caused the boiler to explode with terrific force, covering the men with broken iron and enveloping them in a cloud of steam.

WORK IN A LIGHTHOUSE.

Daily Tasks Performed In Keeping the Lamps Bright.

The duties of the lighthouse keeper are many and important. The top of the tower is usually a tiny room, all glass windows. The lantern is in the center of the room. It is a great prism of glass, in shape like a beehive. The lamp is set into this, and the lenses magnify the comparatively small light of the lamp and make it a great beacon seen far off over the waters. Should the luminant be a flashlight, there is machinery to be wound up every few hours to cause it to revolve. At sunset the keeper climbs the steep steps in the high tower, takes down the curtains that darken it throughout the day and sets the lamp inside the lantern. At midnight the lamp is changed. A freshly filled one is put in the place of the first lighted one.

When storms are raging or fogs prevailing, the keeper stays awake to wind the machinery that keeps the fog signal booming over the water. Many sleepless nights are thus spent by the light keepers in devoted vigil of the aids to navigation. At the gray of dawn the keeper is again climbing the steep iron ladder to the tower top. Before the red rim of the sun appears the lamp is extinguished, the fine prismatic lenses are covered, and the huge panes of glass that form the walls of the room are curtained. The large lamp is carried down the flights of an almost perpendicular ladder and when filled, trimmed and cleaned is ready for the sunset hour. The work of the keeper is not concluded with this feat. The most perplexing portion of the daily routine is now to be performed.

The light keeper must give an account of his stewardship. A record is kept of every gill, pint, quart and gallon of oil that is nightly consumed by the lamps, the fractional parts of inches of wick burned, the lamp chimneys broken and the general consumption of all supplies furnished yearly in large quantities by the government.—Woman's Home Companion.

Ten Years' Trial

The Story of a Soldier's Struggle

By Brigadier General

he had only three troops of cavalry, averaging 55 effective each), to march at once to Banner Butte, the western terminus of the Yankton road, and there take the train for Omaha. This left the fort to be held by the post quartermaster and some 23 men, when runners came, with troubled eyes, to say the Sioux would "jump" before the setting of the sun.

Much of this had been told in the local papers, but so engrossed was everybody in the strike that little attention was paid to it. Like a thunderclap from a clear sky, therefore, fell the next announcement from the lips of Boniface as he turned, with almost ashen face, upon the silent throng. "My heaven," he said, "the Sioux have swooped on Rosebud Station and scalped every soul in the place! There was no train to bring the troops from Robinson."

"How about that other train—the special with the men?" gasped a burly engineer.

"Cut off somewhere back of Rosebud. Only a few of them have guns, and they're praying for help. The rifles are ordered there as fast as cars can take 'em. The strike's off."

CHAPTER XIV.

Morn of the last day of the month was breaking, clear, keen and sparkling. The ruddy glow of the orient heaven, the paling fires of the westward stars, the serene, steady watch light of the great planet, the pilot of the sun, high perched above the sharply outlined ridge toward the turbid Missouri, all told of the speedy coming of "the king of day rejoicing in the east." Over the wide prairies of Illinois, the rolling hills of Iowa, the slanting, dazzling sunbeams broke in glory, but even such glory failed to rend the pall of gloom and despond that covered the broad lands of the Red Water. A night of terror was changing to a day of dread. The last news before the wires themselves went down long, long miles away was that the train bearing the strikers' re-enforcements—sons, brothers, comrades, of the federated workmen of the Brentwood shops—bearing, too, the refugees, men, women and children, from ranch and farm and hamlet along the Niobrara, had left Channing Station at dusk and was held up or cut off somewhere west of ruined Rosebud—God and the Indians alone could tell just where. At 7:30 "Channing" had wired that the Sioux war parties were seen at dusk coming westward at the gallop, "Good-by," and at 8:30 the wires ceased to work west of Castle Butte, an isolated station nearly 30 miles east of the ravaged settlement and full 150 west of Brentwood. For over 50 miles, as has been said, the line of the Big Horn paralleled the south border of the Sioux reservation, but farther to the west it pierced the old treaty lands along the White Earth and ran long leagues through the former hunting grounds of the Ogallalas, whose young men never lost a chance of emulating any savage exploits of the Brules. Beginning at Brentwood, the strike spirit flew east and west along the lines of the Big Horn and the Seattle. Beginning among the illicit groggeries along the Mini Chaduza, the revolt of the Brules spread with the speed of wildfire through the Indian villages upon the Dakota border until it overwhelmed the power of the agency close at hand as well as those to the west in Wyoming. The first dash of the young braves was at the originators of the mischief, the outlaws of the prairie, who discreetly fled, burying such of their stock in trade as they could not carry with them, all too easily to be trailed and dug up by the Sioux. Then, drink maddened and balked of their desires, the band had sacked the agency, released their imprisoned brothers and swooped southward on the helpless ranchers of the Niobrara. In frantic appeal for aid the station agent at Rosebud wired west to Fort Robinson, since their usual protectors were now far away along the Missouri. The answer was prompt, to the effect that the troops would start the instant a train could take them, and then, alas, too late, it was found that in making up that big "special" for the re-enforcements for the strikers they had sent away the one serviceable engine between Frayne Station at the west and Brentwood. By the time the cars sent whirling from Frayne could reach Robinson every soldier was needed there, for the Pine Ridge Sioux had risen to a man. Robinson itself was threatened, while Rosebud Station, to the east, had been reduced to ashes. No wonder a pall had spread over Brentwood. Scores of its sons and many of its daughters were scattered in little stations of the Big Horn or in farms and ranches all along that perilous borderland, and the only words to reach the sorely anxious hearts at home came from terrified refugees at Castle Butte, declaring every ranch, farm and station burned and pillaged for over a hundred miles along the road, their hapless, helpless people either massacred or fleeing to the refuge of the sand hills to the south.

And now, as Boniface had said, the strike was done. At 9 the night before the wail had come from the threatened stations at the west, and men who at sunset were blocking the way against every car that carried troops were now straining every nerve to send them on. At 1 o'clock, hurried aboard the waiting train of the Big Horn in the Brentwood yards, the rifles went whirling away through the night, followed by the prayers and tears of a whole populace and re-enforced by full a hundred stalwart men, strikers of the day before, all armed, all bound for Rosebud and rescue of that imperiled train, with not one man in fifty of the military company, not one in ten of the railway party, who had had any experience whatever in Indian fighting. Old hands of the road had had some long range skirmishes while track laying. Some of the engineers' assistants could tell stirring tales of the days of the survey, but only two or three of the rifles had ever seen an armed and mounted Indian warrior. Many hoped they might never have to. Yet here they were, 60 men who under proper leadership would give good account of themselves in action against a civilized foe, setting forth to meet the most scientific fighters in creation, and Lieutenant Hunt, lawyer and loyal citizen, frankly stated that he would be glad to hand over his sword to any one who understood the business, and he'd take a rifle and a place in the ranks. Oh, for Eric Langdon now!

Sixty, 70, 80 miles they ran without either news or warning, the silent engineer peering ever grimly forward through the night, one hand at the throttle, the other at the reverse lever. In the cab rode the assistant superintendent. In the forward cars were other officials and scores of stalwart men lately heading the strike. Hunt for a time had been with them, but a veteran conductor took him aside. "We are pulling together now," said he, "but of course brotherhood matters can't be discussed in the presence of—outsiders, and there are matters that must be talked over. We'll let you know whatever news we get at every stop." The conductor's words were significant; so were his eyes. Hunt took the hint and his leave, slipping back to the second car, where half the rifles were sprawling on the seats, the other half occupying the third. Six times the crowded train had stopped at stations and six times rushed on again. "Nothing further from any reliable source," said the conductor. "Only more horrible rumors and stories from refugees wired in from Castle Butte." Dawn came on apace, and the train slowed down in answer to a lantern signal at the bridge over Shadow creek. Two men tumbled aboard after excited hail to the occupants of the cab, and the conductor presently came back, looked in at the door and jerked his head to Hunt, as much as to say, "You're wanted." They were still 20 miles from the Buttes and had been running like mad. "There'll be a dozen old hands to join us next stop, lieutenant," said the official, "and all with Henrys or Winchesters. The train with the boys from the river," he continued, consulting certain telegrams, "is six hours behind us, and the Union Pacific has started a train with regulars from Omaha. Others from Kansas are coming by way of Fremont. There'll be soldiers enough by tomorrow, but—God help us through today!"

"Who are these who boarded us here?" asked the lieutenant.

"Some of our fellows—bridge guards, you know—in case—the other thing had to be done."

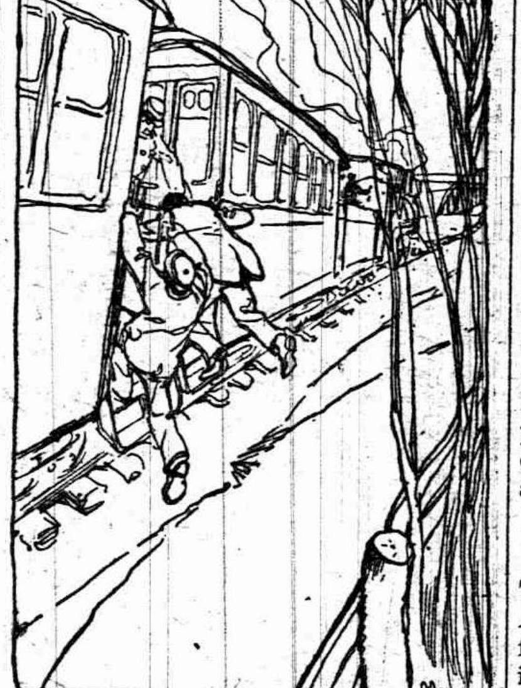
"The Lord be praised it didn't!" said Hunt piously. "If that bridge had been burned, there would have been no saving your special. We have men enough," he continued thoughtfully, "if we only had the right kind of leader."

The conductor glanced about him and nodded reassuringly to one or two who were anxiously eying him and his uniformed companion.

"Mr. Hunt," said he, drawing the officer to a corner of the swaying baggage car, "this is no time, is it, for discussing rights and wrongs? For awhile, at least, the strike's a dead issue. We've got to pull together. No good can come of stirring up—what's past and gone. I've wired ahead to have coffee ready for 200 men at the Buttes. It's a lunch station. We'll take the can right aboard and shove ahead. That'll cheer the men up a bit, won't it?"

"Sure to," said Hunt, wondering what might be coming.

"Then—if a little farther beyond that—we happen to find—just the right sort of man to run this thing don't you think your fellows would take him and no questions asked—until the whole business can be settled later?"



Two men tumbled aboard.

"By Jove, you mean Langdon!" cried Hunt in hope and rejoicing.

"Sh-h! For goodness' sake, don't shout! He's ahead all right enough and safe and sound, but he's fighting mad over this business. Some of the boys weren't advised right, and it's—kind of awkward all round," ended the conductor guilelessly.

"I should say so in view of Betts' charging him with being Cresswell's assailant and then running away," answered Hunt.

"Well, we'll fix Betts all right. But you and your boys don't want to stir up trouble now, do you? Let's pull together, as I say. Once away from Castle Butte then comes the run to Rosebud. The road's clear. The Indians have all gone westward, but God help those poor fellows in that train till we get there!"

"Amen! Amen all round!" said Hunt. "The rifles won't ask questions if that's what you want. Only give us Langdon."

And 40 minutes later, cheered and warmed by abundant hot coffee, the rifles peered from the windows at the whistle for brakes, and a shout went up that well nigh raised the roof. In the midst of a little group at the siding stood a pale faced, stern eyed man in the fatigue uniform of a first sergeant, and the rifles, yelling like mad, tumbled headlong in a surging throng from the train, a-swarming about him in eager, impulsive greeting. Without a word he grasped Hunt's outstretched hand, signaled to the conductor and broke away through the throng toward the hissing engine taking in water at the windmill tank up the track. "We haven't an instant to lose," were then his first words. "Get everybody aboard and join me forward as soon as you can," said he to Hunt, linked his arm in that of the conductor and rushed him up the roadside to the pilot.

Another 40 minutes and, the still smoking ruins of Rosebud Station left behind, the crowded train was speeding swiftly, yet cautiously, over the broad, open westward prairie. Except Lord Southey's Guillotine.

The most eccentric action of an eccentric man was Lord Southey's cool arrangement for suicide by means of a guillotine. He had a magnificent one erected in the drawing room of his house in the Rue du Luxembourg at Paris. The machine was of ebony inlaid with gold and silver, the framework carved with artistic skill, the knife, sharp as a razor, was of polished and ornamented steel. Preparing for death, his lordship had his hair cut close, and, clothed in a robe of white silk, he kneeled upon the platform under the knife before a mirror and pressed the spring which should release the knife. But the spring failed to work, and the would be suicide decided to give the guillotine to a museum instead of making a second attempt to end his life. It is said that he made an annual pilgrimage to see the guillotine until the end of his life.

Laughter Saved the Ship.

Humor has been credited with the saving of many things, but perhaps never before has a ship been saved by its judicious application. In a great storm many years ago a ship's crew were all at prayers, when a boy burst into a fit of violent laughter. Being reproved for his ill timed mirth and asked the reason for it, he said, "Why, I was laughing to think what a hissing the boatswain's red nose will make when it comes in contact with the water." This ludicrous remark set the crew laughing, inspired them with new spirits, and by a great exertion they brought the vessel safely into port.—Liverpool Post.

A Professor on Rowing.

A story is told about a well known Oxford don who knew more about the travels of Ulysses than about the boat he sailed in. He went down to the river one day to watch the eight practicing. He gazed for awhile in silence. "Yes," he said at last, "they look very nice—very nice indeed, I may say—but how extremely awkward it must be for them to learn to row backward."

Read What Grateful Patients Say

Mrs Martha Keller, of Cohoctah township, Livingston county who has been seriously afflicted with a complication of diseases for years, voluntarily makes the following statement. She says: I had been a great sufferer with catarrh of the stomach, heart failure and nervous debility. I would have peculiar nervous spells come over me and I would faint away; have been carried in the house more than once in that condition. My heart and stomach troubled me terribly all the time, having tried a number of doctors without receiving any permanent relief. I saw the advertisement of Dr. Walker in the papers, also hearing of the doctor's many cures. I decided to call at the hotel and see him. I at once placed myself under Dr. Walker's treatment. I improved right along and am now happy to say that all of the above symptoms have left me. To have my stomach, heart and nerves feel natural once more causes me to feel very grateful. I most cheerfully recommended the doctor to all afflicted ones. Signed MRS. MARTHA KELLEL.

Mrs. Chas. Maltby, of Milan, Mich., says: I was taken with Lagrippe last winter; soon after rheumatism set in, affecting my whole system; my sufferings at times were intense and intense and in a short time I had become so emaciated that I was a mere skeleton and only by the aid of crutches could I go around at all. I took less than three months treatment of Dr. Walker, who completely restored me to health.
CHAS. MALTBY.

Mr. James B. Gilday, a well known citizen, of Yargerville, Mich., says: "I had suffered with catarrh of the head, throat and bronchial tubes for several years. I had treated with several doctors and also tried the best patent medicines advertised, but found no relief until I consulted Dr. W. C. Walker, of Detroit, who makes regular visits to Monroe. The doctor's treatment produced most satisfactory results. Those afflicted with chronic diseases should not lose hope but go to Dr. W. C. Walker. I can cheerfully recommend the doctor as a thorough gentleman and master of his profession. This statement is voluntary on my part, given for the benefit of those afflicted as I was."
JAMES B. GILDAY.
Yargerville. Monroe County, Mich. June 28. 1901.

Sick all his Life. Read the statement of another well known citizen of Monroe county: Mr. W. W. Murphy, of Samaria, who had been almost a constant sufferer all his life from stomach and liver complications. He says: "I have found Dr. W. C. Walker's treatment a great help to me. I was troubled with sick headache often, as long as I can remember; am now 44 years of age. I treated with the doctor several months and have not had one attack of sick headache since I began his treatment. Had tried everything I could hear of before, with very little benefit. I heartily recommend Dr. Walker."
W. W. MURPHY.
Samaria, Monroe Co., Mich., June 25, 1901.

MAIL BOX FACTORY

it is Certain now that the Shop is Secured.

FOR TECUMSEH

And it Will be Moved Here Soon.

R. A. Heesen and others have secured capital sufficient to buy out the Adrian stockholders of the Century Mail Box Co. and will complete the deal this afternoon. The factory is now employing forty men and will be moved to Tecumseh soon as practiacble.

Great work has been done by the men in securing this shop for our town and there is still some more stock to be sold to complete the organization, which will no doubt be sold at once, if the capitalist in Tecumseh do their duty and they will. A business men's association should be organized at once and by proper and timely work secure more factories for Tecumseh. Let the good work go on.

The beauty thief has come to stay,
Unless you drive the pimples and blackheads away;
Do this; don't look like a fright;
Take Rocky Mountain Tea to-night
J. Orr.

A Serious Accident.

As Chas. Stanley and Mr. Jackson, of Adrian, were going home from Tecumseh Tuesday night on a tandem, they had a little experience they don't care to repeat. When they were out as far as Mr. Cutting's the front forks to the wheel broke throwing them to the ground and cutting their faces in a frightful manner. Mr. Stanley, who wears glasses, was cut the worst, a piece of one of the lens was taken from the flesh around the eye. They aroused Mr. Cutting's people and Alice Cutting hitched up the horse and brought them back to Tecumseh.

Struck a tree in a field on the farm of Chas. Ives. The tree is alright but the bolt killed 11 head of cattle which were standing under it. This is a heavy loss to Mr. Ives as he took great pride in his well bred cattle. Although the animals were insured, they will still be quite a financial loss.

LITERARY NOTES.

With the September number Modern Culture Magazine of Cleveland, O. begins its fourteenth volume and the second year of its publication under the present title and present management. The success which its publishers have achieved in taking over an educational journal which appealed to a limited class and converting it into a literary magazine of the very highest rank, retaining the good will of their old patrons and at the same time broadening the field and extending the usefulness of what Marion Harland calls "the best dollar magazine in the country" has been richly deserved.

The complete novel of the "New" Lippincott Magazine for September is by Clinton Scollard, known for his "Man-at-Arms" and several volumes of poems. "A Knight of the Highway" is an idyllic love-story of the hop-picking season in Northern New York. It pictures a tramp who has been a gentle man, returning to the college town where he was educated and engaging as a hop-picker among the throngs who travel thither. His regeneration is completed when he meets the girl of his heart. Adventure and romance have made a winning novel, American to the back-bone.

A great variety in fiction is offered in the September Scribners. George W. Cable, who is a supreme artist in the short story, tells tale of slavery days full of poetey and imagination entitled "The Clock in the Sky." It is illustrated by Howard Chandler Christy.

ROUND ABOUT US.

Mr. Editor: Why do so many young Blissfield couples wander about the Cemetry?—Constant Reader.

Don't know unless they're dead in love, or maybe that's the place where spirits meet.—Adrian Press.

David, the husband of Carrie Nation wishes the joint agreement between them as husband and wife, declared no longer binding, and has asked the courts to smash the joint with a divorce hatchet. —Adrian Press.

The Blissfield Advance says: Seaton Anderson, one of the leading dry goods merchants of Tecumseh, takes full page advertisements in the local papers. He gets trade from Adrian, Clinton and all around, but then he has to pay out $5 to get $25 or $50 back and of course that's $5 wasted.

Martin Howard, a prosperous farmer living in Northfield, has two sons aged six and twelve respectively. The younger one found his father's revolver, and in play pointed it at his brother when it went off, the bullet striking his brother in the back part of the head. A half hour later the lad sneezed hard and out came the bullet.

The society editor in describing the belle of the New Year's ball, concluded by saying "And her dainty feet were encased in shoes that resembled fairy boots. But he was horror-stricken the next morning in glancing down the columns to see that the blundering printer had set it up in this manner: "And her dainty feet were encased in shoes that resembled ferry boats." —Petersburg Sun.

At Tekonsha in their public schools they are short of a teacher in the grammar department. Several applications have been made but they have all been rejected because they danced. We suppose the applicant must be a member of the church, can neither dance nor play cards, look cross-eyed nor wear glasses and to smoke, chew (gum) or drink is entirely out of the question. The position is still open.

The Onsted News says that a farmer who is a prominent member of the Prospect Hill church and teacher of the bible class, was busy at work on the farm Sunday morning of last week and did not know he was off his bearings till he saw his neighbors on the way to church, and even then had to telephone to find out if it was the Sabbath. His good wife had also done the churning and was as absent minded as the husband.

A Grand Rapids lady and children ate some cookies procured at a bakery, and soon after saw snakes. The mother vomited, and recovered from her strange feeling. The children for a time went rushing about reaching for something they claimed they saw, but grasping only at space. The physician said it was something in the cookies, because the father ate none of them and saw no snakes. The opinion is that the baker used Grand Rapids whiskey for yeast. The children finally recovered, and to all appearances will sustain no serious trouble.—Adrian Press.

One of the most frightful runaways seen in this village occured early Sunday evening. Will Schaffer with his dashing rig had Miss Berger and her friend Miss Barber of Toledo out riding and when driving up Exchange Place the bolt on the whiffletree broke letting the buggy pole down. The horses sprang into a run and onlookers expected to see the whole party killed. In front of the M. E. church the pole struck the walk and the carriage and occupants went into the air. The buggy rolled over and over almost ruining it but the occupants escaped with slight bruises.

A clergyman's wife was mending clothes for her boys when one of her lady neighbors called to have a friendly chat. It was not long before the visitor's eye was attracted by a large basket, more than half filled with buttons. The lady could not help remarking that there seemed to be a very good supply of buttons. Thereupon she began to turn them over and suddenly exclaimed: "Here are two buttons exactly the same as those my husband had on his last winters suit, I should know them anywhere," "Indeed" said the clergyman's wife, quietly: "I am surprised to hear it, as all those buttons were found in the collection bag, I thought I might as well put them to some use." Before she finished speaking the visitor hastily arose and said she must be going. The story soon got about and since then no buttons have been found in the collection box.—Exchange.

CAUGHT IN AN EXPLOSION.

A Miner's Description of His Feelings When He Was Blown Up.

A miner who was blown up while blasting a rock describes his sensations thus:

"You see, it's so sudden. It's over just about the time you begin to understand that something is happening. You know, I had the cartridge in my hand and put it down. Then I got afraid of it. All at once everything was light. I don't think I saw the flash. Anyway my face was not exactly toward the explosion.

"But then everything got light, lighter than day—kind of blinding. There was an awful crash. It was just at the same time. I was terrified and wanted to get away. It was just as if I was having the nightmare. Somehow, though, I knew just what the matter was. A man can think faster than he has any idea of. I knew that some of the others were nearer the explosion, and I said to myself, 'They're blown in bits, that's certain.'

"You understand, this was all in a second—all at once, really. Then it was exactly the same as if I had been hit with a stick. I thought it was a big stick, bigger than any man could swing, and that it must be worked by machinery. It hit me on the head and all over. I went sailing into the air a long, long way. My ears roared, and the wind blew into my face. I knew when I struck the ground, for I remember saying to myself, 'Well, I'm done for.'

"I don't know just when I lost my right senses or when they came back, but when they did come back it seemed queer that I was there still. I thought I had been thrown somewhere else. I could feel fire burning me. It was my clothes. They were smoking and almost blazing. I was bruised all over and could not hear very well. My voice sounded as though somebody else were talking. That's all I can tell you about it."

Hawk and Partridge.

In "Reminiscences of a Falconer" Major Fisher describes the tactics of a partridge when pursued by a tame falcon.

The falcon was descending upon the partridge when the partridge stopped short and fell to the ground as if dead. He seemed to be lost in the short stubble of the field. He was far too knowing to trust himself again on the wing, and the hawk had no alternative but to take him on the ground, which he speedily attempted to do.

But on the ground the partridge was far more agile than he, running this way and that with great speed. The hawk would jump awkwardly up and dart after the scudding partridge, who just at the right moment jumped from the ground and over his back, descended on the other side and commenced running harder than before.

Time after time this was done. At every attempt the partridge met the hawk with outstretched neck and raised hackles, in the attitude of a fighting bantam cock, jumping up to avoid being clutched whenever the hawk struck at him. In fact, his whole action was that of a plucky little game bantam.

This went on for some time, until, as I regret to say, I ended the unequal strife by putting the partridge once more fairly on the wing, when, of course, the hawk readily overtook and captured it, not overmuch to his credit and still less to mine.

A Fish and Lizard Story.

One afternoon I thought I would go down the river and troll. I had on my hook a live minnow and in a little while had a strike, and I hooked my first fish, which seemed to be quite a large one. I reeled him where I could see him and found it was a large pike 25 or 30 inches long. I pulled him up to my boat, but when I lifted him from the water he was as light as a feather. I measured him and found he was just 30 inches long and should have weighed eight or nine pounds, while he only weighed two. He was just skin and bones. I killed him, took my knife and cut him open and found a live lizard, five inches long, in his stomach. The reptile was as black as coal and very lively, living 24 hours after I took him from his prison.—Field and Stream.

Without a Ring.

Nothing will annoy you so.

The constant itching sensation.

Hard to bear, harder to get relief.

Isn't relief and cure a long felt want?

It is to be had for everyone in Doan's Ointment.

Mr. C. C. Church, of 520 South 7th street, Ann Arbor, now retired from the active duties of life, says: "I have no hesitation in recommending Doan's Ointment. To anyone requiring a healing and soothing preparation it will prove invaluable. I suffered for years from itching hemorrhoids and though I tried everything I could hear of and used remedies prescribed by scores of friends I was unable to obtain permanent relief until my attention was called to Doan's Ointment. I was somewhat surprised after the second application to notice what a different effect it had from anything I had hitherto used. Encouraged I used it strictly according to directions and in a surprisingly short length of time when you take into account the number of years I was afflicted, the irritation ceased and the inflammation was allayed. When Doan's Ointment cured me it will cure others."

Kubelik and Paderewski.

"Oh, Mr. Kubelik," said a dazzling beauty to the great violinist after one of his performances, "you are indeed a genius! Whenever I hear you and M. Paderewski play I seem quite dazed, the effect upon me is so fascinating! Have you ever heard Paderewski, monsieur?"

"Once, madame; only once," quietly replied Kubelik. "But," and this very firmly, "I shall certainly never hear him again."

"Why not?" asked the astonished beauty.

"I will tell you," answered Kubelik. "I am conscious that I possess a certain power, a certain originality. Now, I cannot afford to lose this consciousness, for upon it entirely depends my success. I heard Paderewski once, and then I felt my 'proud consciousness' going, my faith in myself slipping. Paderewski's influence over me the only time I ever heard him play was so powerful that I felt, for the sake of my own originality, if I possess any ("Oh, M. Kubelik!" almost shrieked the beauty) that it would be safer and wiser to leave him to his own joy and genius. No, madame, there is but one Paderewski; there are many Kubeliks!"—Modern Society.

Chalk Wonders.

Few people know what a wonderful object a bit of chalk is when examined under a microscope. Take your knife blade and scrape off a little of the loose powder, catch it on a clean glass slide and place this on the stage of a good table microscope. Use a quarter inch objective lens and illuminate the field with a cone of light from the concave side of the reflector. The powder will be seen to consist of a confused mass of beautiful tiny shells, many of them of the most curious form.

A better way, however, is to rub down a portion of chalk with an old toothbrush in a tumbler half filled with water. If you desire to prepare several slides, rub on about a teaspoonful of the powder. Shake the tumbler briskly, allow the sediment to settle for a moment and then carefully pour off the milky looking water.

Repeat this until the water remains clear, and you will then have left in the bottom only perfect shells or large parts of shells. Take up a small pinch of this deposit and spread it carefully over the center of a glass slide. Dry over a lamp and, if you wish to preserve the slide for future use, mount it in Canada balsam, pressing out the bubbles of air beneath the cover glass.

A Certain Duke and an Uncertain Boy.

A certain duke, while driving from the station to the park on his estate to inspect a company of artillery, observed a ragged urchin keeping pace with the carriage at his side. His grace, being struck with the cleanliness of the lad, asked him where he was going. The lad replied:

"To the park to see the duke and sogers."

The duke, feeling interested, stopped his carriage and opened the door to the lad, saying he could ride to the park with him.

The delighted lad, being in ignorance of whom he was, kept his grace interested with quaint remarks till the park gates were reached.

As the carriage entered it was saluted by the company and guns, whereupon his grace said to the lad:

"Now, can you show me where the duke is?"

The lad eyed his person all over, then, looking at the duke, replied quite seriously:

"Well, I dunno, mister, but it's either you or me!"—Spare Moments.

Pressed Flowers.

Several methods of preserving the natural color of pressed flowers have been suggested, but the best, it is said, is that used in the New York botanical garden. After the specimens have been under pressure for a day or two they are laid in papers heated in the sun, and this is repeated until the drying is completed. This, it is said, preserves the colors perfectly.

Negro Superstition.

Many of the negro superstitions in Kentucky are quite interesting. An old philosopher told me with great gravity: "If you want peppahs to grow, you must git mad. My old 'oman an me had a spat, an I went right out an planted my peppahs, an they come right up." Still another saying is that peppers to prosper must be planted by a redheaded or by a high tempered person.

The negro also says that one never sees a jaybird on Friday, for the bird visits his satanic majesty to "pack kindling" on that day. The three signs in which negroes place implicit trust are the well known ones of the ground hog's appearing above ground on the 2d of February, that a hoe must not be carried through a house or a death will follow and that potatoes must be planted in the dark of the moon as well as all vegetables that ripen in the ground and that corn must be planted in the light of the moon.

GRA[illegible]REAT.

The General [illegible] When a Policeman's [illegible]ated the Way.

Speaking [illegible]icks reminds me of seeing General Grant in his to my mind greatest [illegible] the only time he was ever [illegible] by a policeman. I told his son, Fred Grant, of it when he became a police commissioner in the nineties, but I do not think he appreciated it. He was not cast in his great father's mold. The occasion I refer to was after the general's second term in the presidency. He was staying at the Fifth Avenue hotel, when one morning the Masonic temple was burned. The fire line was drawn half way down the block toward Fifth avenue, but the police were much hampered by the crowd and were out of patience when I, standing by, saw a man in a great ulster with head buried deep in the collar, a cigar sticking straight out, coming down the street from the hotel. I recognized him at sight as General Grant. The policeman who blocked his way did not. He grabbed him by the collar, swung him about and, hitting him a resounding whack across the back with his club, yelled out:

"What's the matter with you? Don't you see the fire lines? Chase yourself out of here and be quick about it."

The general never said a word. He did not stop to argue the matter. He had run up against a sentinel and when stopped went the other way. That was all. The man had a right to be there: he had none. I was never so much an admirer of Grant as since that day. It was true greatness. A smaller man would have made a row, stood upon his dignity and demanded the punishment of the policeman. As for him, there was probably never so badly frightened a policeman when I told him whom he had clubbed. I will warant be did not sleep for a week, fearing all kinds of things. No need of it. Grant probably never gave him a thought.—Jacob Riis in Outlook.

POPULAR SCIENCE.

Mercury's year is only 88 days, that of Venus 225 days and of Mars 687 days.

Cumulus, or thunder clouds, rarely rise over two miles. Seven miles is the outside height for any cloud.

The edge of the moon is so broken by peaks, ridges and valleys that the length of totality during a solar eclipse is affected by them.

The sun's heat raises from the earth 37,000,000 tons of water a minute. To do the same work artificially a cube of coal 200 miles deep, wide and high would have to be burned every second.

The archaic, wasteful "beehive" oven process of making charcoal has been superseded in many parts of Germany by modern methods which save all the ammonia, gas, tar and other products of the wood.

A human body contains some of the small things of nature. The blood, for example, is a colorless liquid in which little red globules are floating. Every drop of it contains about a million of the globules, and they are susceptible of division into smaller globules still.

THE OLD FASHIONED BOY.

Oh, for a glimpse of a natural boy—
A boy with freckled face,
With forehead white 'neath tangled hair
And limbs devoid of grace;

Whose feet toe in, while his elbows flare;
Whose knees are patched all ways;
Who turns as red as a lobster when
You give him a word of praise;

A boy who's born with an appetite,
Who seeks the pantry shelf
To eat his "piece" with resounding smack,
Who isn't gone on himself;

A "Robinson Crusoe" reading boy,
Whose pockets bulge with trash,
Who knows the use of rod and gun
And where the brook trout splash.

It's true he'll sit in the easiest chair
With his hat on his tousled head;
That his hands and feet are everywhere,
For youth must have room to spread,

But he doesn't dub his father "old man"
Nor deny his mother's call
Nor ridicule what his elders say
Or think that he knows it all.

A rough and wholesome natural boy
Of a good old fashioned clay—
God bless him, if he's still on earth,
For he'll make a man some day!

GOT THE POSITION.

She Successfully Played on the Weakness of the Statesman.

The New York Herald tells how a diplomatic young lady who understood the weakness of politicians secured some years ago a place in the state service.

"Is the attorney general in?" she asked timidly.

"Yes," said the clerk. "He will see you when he gets through with this long line of job hunters. Just have a seat."

In the numerous chairs, on the office lounge and standing were 20 more waiting for a turn to press some claim for a position.

The attorney general was rather a gruff looking man, and he dismissed each with the remark: "I can't do anything for you. Sorry, you know, but there are hundreds of applicants, and each officer, every legislator, has a dozen begging for each position."

When the timid girl's turn came, she handed the impatient looking officer a letter. She said nothing. She hardly looked into his face.

"I'm sorry, Miss C., that I can do nothing for you. It was foolish for you to come here expecting to get work. I'd be glad to help you if I could; but, you see, it's this way: I have no influence to get you a position. I am very"—

"We were speaking of that at home, but I thought it would do no harm to see you," she interrupted. "And we were saying what a pity it was that you had lost your influence."

The state official winced. He looked as if something hurt him.

"Brown," he said, turning to his deputy with unnecessary abruptness, "this young lady is to have a position in the enrolling department. See that there is a place for her if you have to muzzle every legislator in the building."

THE ISLAND OF TAHITI.

It May Be Rightly Termed the Paradise of the Pacific.

Picture an island set in a reef of coral of myriad hues—the lagoon of a light green, outside the white foaming breakers the vast ocean of intense blue. On shore are great bunches of cocoanut palms lifting their plumes in stately magnificence, then there are lanes of trees blossoming in red and yellow flowers, and nestling in their midst are the low thatched houses of the natives. The delightful and healthy climate of the island brings to maturity all the products of the tropics, which are nowhere found in greater fullness and perfection than here. The wayfarer is soothed by the fragrance of sweet smelling flowers and delighted with the abundance of oranges, bananas, bread fruit and cocoanut which give a perennial supply of food to the natives.

Tahiti may be rightly termed the "paradise of the Pacific" or even the world, as in no other place is there so much variety of scenery. At every turn the constant surprises keep the traveler in a delirium of delight. Sometimes the sea lies before him, the waves wreathed in a foam of white breaking the silence in a continuous roar; on the other side the high, steep mountains in forms of towers, domes and steeples pierce the clouds. Now and then a silvery band of water falls from perpendicular heights to the turbulent stream below. Then you pass under the sheltering shadows of tall interlacing trees which excel even the grandeur of our elm. Farther on you pass through lanes lined with bananas, mango and groves of cocoanut.—Overland Monthly.

Alaska Driftwood.

No trees grow anywhere on the coast of western and northern Alaska, and yet these shores for thousands of miles and the islands of Bering sea are strewn with immense quantities of driftwood, in places piled high on the beach, bearing good testimony to the work of the rivers. This drift is the salvation of the Eskimo, furnishing him with fuel and material for houses, boats and sleds. The entire northeastern half of Bering sea is very shoal, less than 500 feet in depth, while the southwestern half is mostly about 12,000 feet deep.

WOMAN

IS LIKE A DELICATE MUSICAL INSTRUMENT

In good condition she is sweet and lovable, and sings life's song on a joyful harmonious string. Out of order or unstrung, there is discordance and unhappiness. Just as there is one key note to all music so there is one key note to health. A woman might as well try to fly without wings as to feel well and look well while the organs that make her a woman are weak or diseased. She must be healthy inside or she can't be healthy outside. There are thousands of women suffering silently all over the country. Mistaken modesty urges their silence. While there is nothing more admirable than a modest woman, health is of the first importance. Every other consideration should give way before it. Bradfield's Female Regulator is a medicine for women's ills. It is the safest and quickest way to cure leucorrhea, falling of the womb, nervousness, headache, backache and general weakness. You will be astonished at the result, especially if you have been experimenting with other so-called remedies. We are not asking you to try an uncertainty. Bradfield's Regulator has made happy thousands of women. What it has done for others it can do for you. Sold in drug stores for $1 a bottle.

A STRANGE SCENE

Property Owners Look Upon Scenes of Distruction.

THE CEMETARY THRONGED

Heart Broken Relatives Searching for Departed Loved Ones—Some of the Houses Sinking Deeper in the Mud.

Cleveland, Sept. 3.—Instead of a great sea of muddy water the citizens of a large share of the east side of the city today gazed on the huge piles of wreckage and ruins and long rows of filth and dirt piled on streets, sidewalks and doorways. On every hand the marks of the terrible destructive flood could be seen.

A mass of almost indescribable stuff now lies piled up in various places behind the east end homes that were within the flooded district.

Since the flood has subsided the homes of J. W. Smith and Norton Noble have fallen deeper down into the mire and the two houses which a few short hours ago were beautiful homes now are total wrecks.

All idea of rebuilding has been abandoned and the dilapdated buildings will be hauled away and the ground prepared for new houses.

The houses occupied by Charles Wadsworth and Sergeant Joseph Farr, which were undermined by the flood will have to be rebuilt.

The houses on Winmanette court which were built remarkably well are wrecks. Barns and sheds are knocked to pieces and examination shows them to be but little better than kindling wood. The ruin inside the houses is probably heavier than in any other part of the district that was flooded. Carpets and furniture and great pieces of plastering falling from the walls tell the story.

The persons living on Deering street who were thankful to escape with their lives on improvised rafts and boats Sunday morning went back to their homes during the early hours of this morning to look upon a strange scene of destruction and almost desolation. The wings must be rebuilt, porches rebuilt, new barns built and inside the houses new furniture supplied. The damage of one small section alone will reach $40,000.

St. Joseph's cemetery, which was terribly devastated by the storm presented a scene most sombre. The grounds were thronged with heartbroken and sorrowing relatives, searching for the graves and little headstones of departed loved ones, only too often to be disappointed in their anxious quest.

WILL NOT INVITE DAVE HILL.

Jacksonian Club Have Invited Prominent Democrats to Speak.

Omaha, Neb., Sept. 3.—Considerable significance is thought to attach to the acceptance of an invitation from the Jacksonian Club of this city to speak at its annual picnic, Sept. 21, by Governor Culberson, of Texas, and McMillan, of Tennessee. William J. Bryan has also signified his willingness to address the democrats of Nebraska at that time, which is said to add to the significance of the occasion. It is not known what steps, if any, will be taken toward outlining future policies and discussing probable democratic candidates, but one or two party leaders have intimated that these matters will come up. The club had partially decided to extend an invitation to David B. Hill to be present and deliver an address, but for reasons which were not made public this was not done. Several notable democratic leaders will be present, other than those mentioned, however and elaborate arrangements are being made for their entertainment.

COMMUNITY IN MOURNING.

Funeral Services Largely Attended of Northern Central Victims.

Newark, N. Y., Sept. 3.—The entire community of Newark was in mourning today over the victims of the Northern Central R. R. wreck of Thursday. Business was entirely suspended. The funeral of Rev. Dr. and Mrs. A. Park Burgess was more largely attended than any other in the history of Wayne county. Fifteen hundred people crowded the Park Presbyterian church where the funeral was held. Twenty-six ministers from Syracuse, Buffalo, Rochester, Wayne, Ontario, Cayuga counties and other places assisted Rev. John Chester Hall, pastor of the church in conducting the services. The funerals of Frances, daughter of Mayor and Mrs. E. E. Burleigh and of Mrs. Chas. Edwards, of St. Paul, Minn., were also held. Interment was in Newark Willow avenue cemetery

Don't Be Too Early.

Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 3.—C. A. Walsh, secretary of the Democratic national committee is here on business and said in an interview today: "There is no real discussion now of the candidates for the Democratic nomination for president in 1904. Of course, a great many are talked about. There is Hill and Olney and Dockery and Dave Francis and W. J. Stone and Senator Cockrell, but its a long time until 1904. A candidate who gets into the push too early is liable to get crystallized out before the campaign is reached."

REAL HOT SPRING

Mackinac Island, Mich., Sept. 3.—Considerable excitement has been caused on the island by the discovery of, what is said to be a hot spring on the north side, where workmen are excavating for the in-take pipe for the water company.

The spring comes from fissures in the rock two feet below the lake level, has a flow of about 200 barrelsl a day, while its temperature is 114 degrees. The water company will erect a bath house and sanitarium if the spring proves to contain curative properties.

BLEW UP A TRAIN.

Boers Shot at Women—Killed Col. Vandeleur.

London, Sept. 3.—The Pretoria correspondent of the Daily Telegraph in a dispatch describing the blowing up of a train between Waterval and Hamans Kraal Saturday by Boers when Lieut.-Col. Vandeleur of the Irish Guards was killed says:

"The train carried several passengers, among them two ladies with babes and a nurse. As it toiled through a cutting a negro was seen to raise his hand. Instantly a Boer discharged two mines, derailing the train while a body of Boers poured in a heavy rifle fire.

"Lieut.-Col. Vandeleur shouted to the women to lie down under the seats and ordered his men to return the fire. As he was proceeding along the corridor a Boer burst into the carriage and fired, killing him after it is supposed his refusal to surrender. Another Boer deliberately fired upon and wounded the nurse. Bullets were flying in all directions, although the Boers were aware that women and children were there."

THREW POP BOTTLE

For Which Burchfield is Charged With Murder.

THE YOUNG VICTIM IS DEAD

The Verdict of Jury Is That the Deed Was Malicious—Funeral Services of Green Largely Attended.

Charlotte, Mich., Sept. 3.—The coroner's jury, investigating the death of Leonard Green of Eaton Rapids, returned their verdict at 9 o'clock this evening. After stating the circumstances connected with the affair the verdict says that Howard Burchfield did wilfully and maliciously kill the deceased. On or before Friday, the date set for the hearing on the old warrant, the prisoner will be re-arrested charged with the murder. Prosecuting Attorney Dann is authority for this statement. In justice to Mr. Hickey, the saloonkeeper, at whom Burchfield threw the bottle, it should be said that the affair took place directly in front of the Williams house and not in the saloon as reported and that instead of a beer bottle the weapon was a heavy pop bottle.

The funeral services of Green will be held tomorrow afternoon at his home near Eaton Rapids. A large delegation of K. P. and Elks from this city will attend.

The Devernes, Guy McIntyre, of Sherwood and Joe Deverne, of Albion, the trapeze men who fell a distance of 25 feet on Thursday, Elks' day at the carnival, have improved sufficiently to return home, although both are suffering from their injuries. A neat sum was collected for them by subscription.

Good Chance For Work.

Tekonsha, Mich., Sept. 3.—There is not a house in the place for rent, and people are driven to the necessity of either buying property or moving into the country.

As an evidence of the scarcity of labor in southern Michigan, it is worthy of note that a train runs from Jackson to Union City every day, a distance of 45 miles, to pick up men to work on the railroad. The train makes the trip night and morning, and has done so for a month.

AN IMPORTANT [illegible]

Officers of Miner's Union Will State Grievance.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Sept. 3.—President John Mitchell, and District Presidents T. D. Nichols, Thos. Duffy and John Fahey, will go to New York some day this week to confer with the presidents of the coal carrying roads relative to the settlement of the grievances complained of at the Hazelton convention last week.

Unless the negotiations prove successful it is thought the executive officers by reason o fthe power vested in them by the Hazelton convention will order strikes at several collieries in the Wyoming region where the miners claim the companies have broken agreements made with their employes.

The impression seems to prevail here that if Messrs. Mitchell, Nichols, Duffy and Fahey are successful in getting a hearing in New York they will be referred to the district superintendents of the mines. This will not be considered a satisfactory answer as it is alleged the superintendents have persistently refused to listen to any of the grievances complained of by the miners.

PERPETUAL LIGHT.

Chicago Now Claims to Have Discovered It.

Chicago, Sept. 3.—Geo. P. Magrady claims to have invented a perpetual light. He thinks the millennium of illumination is at hand. Every house will have an equipment of the perpetual lights in beautiful globes, which will burn night and day, year in and year out, and shed a brilliant glow without ceasing.

Leaking gas jets will be a thing of the past. The disagreeable duty of cleaning kerosene lamps will be only a memory and a tradition.

The secret of the perpetual light is a combination of chemicals in a vacuum. The chemicals are four or five in number, but Magrady declines to give further information as to their identity until the patent office has passed on his application for a patent. They are less than an ounce in bulk. When brought into contact with the globe they dissolve and give off strong fumes. When these fill the receptacle the globe is sealed so as to keep out all air.

The gas formed by the chemical combination glows with a dazzling intensity, the inventor says. A test has shown a strength of 30 candle power. The light is white, and it is as steady as an incandescent electric light, there being no flicker.

A Bird With Four Feet.

This little creature, still to be found in South America, is a relic of bygone ages. It is known as the crested hoatzin, and the adult bird is about as big as a peacock.

The young birds, when hatched, have four legs, the front pair being reptilian in character, and have strong claws. As they grow older these claws fall off, the legs become fattened, feathers grow on them, and they develop into wings.

These nestlings are the nearest approach to a reptile that can be found among birds, and they can climb and dive and swim with great facility.

A CLEVER FORGER

SHE RAISED A CERTIFICATE

Was Just About to Secure a Large Loan on the Forged Paper, Is Well Konwn in Philadelphia.

London, Eng., Sept. 3.—Mrs. Marie Josephine Eastwick, of Philadelphia, Pa., was arraigned in police court this morning, charged with having forged a railway certificate of the value of $500,000. Sensational testimony was brought out.

The public proecutor said she had been residing in England for 18 months and was believed to be an American of wealth.

Latterly she had removed to Hampstead, for the benefit of her health. She obtained an introduction to Mr. Beeton, a member of the stock exchange, to whom she represented herself to be the owner of securities worth roughly $2,500,000.

She wrote Beton, Aug. 15, from Stratford-on-Avon, saying she expected a thousand Canadian Pacific shares from New York and wanted a loan on them, as she was desirous of buying more United States Steel. Beeton replied that he did not think there would be any difficulty in raising the loan on such security. She received a certificate for five Canadian Pacific shares Aug. 16.

The prosecutor said that by Aug. 26 the certificate had been altered, the name of the original holder had been erased, and the name of Marie Josephine Eastwick had been substituted. The word "five" in the number of shares, and the numerals had all been altered, so that it appeared to be a certificate for a thousand instead of five shares. This was skillfully done, three kinds of ink and type being used, showing considerable preparation.

Friends of Miss Marie Josephine Eastwick, of Philadelphia, learned with surprise today, the story of her trouble in London. Altholgh she has only been an occasional visitor to Philadelphia in recent years, her charming personality and her high social position in this city have, despite her indifference to society, made her well known in local social circles.

Miss Eastwick is about 32 years old. She is a granddaughter of the late Harrison Eastwick. Her father, Edw. P. Eastwick was formerly associated with the Havemeyers in the sugar refining business and when he retired 14 years ago, he was reputed to be a millionaire.

Fond of horses, dogs and all outdoor sports, she was from the first averse to the social preferment that her family's position and wealth assured her. course of time her spirit of independence asserted itself so strongly that at frequent intervals she was estranged from the members of her immediate family and at such times she made her home with other relatives. During the last 12 years she has devoted herself to travel, making her longest stay in England. Occasionally she came to Philadelphia to visit the family of her uncle, Andrew N. Eastwick, her aunt, Mrs. Eastwick Jones. While in this country she regarded New York as her home and stopped at the Waldorf-Astoria. She made numerous visits to her brother, Spencer Eastwick, who is in the sugar business in New Orleans.

Several years ago Miss Eastwick inherited from her grandmother an interest in an estate said to be worth $100,000. About this time she and her father became estranged and the capital afforded by her grandmother's legacy the young woman sought fortune as a speculator in the stock market, but with little success, her relatives or friends did not know. Later on her health gave way and a reconciliation with her father followed She was sent to a sanitarium where she remained for several months. Upon recovering her health she again went to England and became distinguished as a whip. She did most of her coaching in Scotland and was frequently accompanied by distinguished Englishmen and Americans. Miss Eastwick left this country about 18 months ago accompanied by her father and sister Hilda. She was last heard from in Scotland.

The fact that Count von Buelow has at least succeeded in surmounting the Chun difficulty has created considerable satisfaction in the public mind. Prince Chun will now apologize without any humiliating formalities It is asserted that all the members of the government were as much surprised as was the public at the attempt to revive the obsolete custom of kotowing.

Count von Buelow has now returned to Nordeney to finish his interrupted holiday. It is understood the newly appointed Chinese to Germany who is a member of the expiatory mission was most energetic in opposing prostration, declaring that if he submitted to such a ceremony he would forfeit the right to be treated as an equal by the other members of the diplomatic corps.

Macon Postmaster's Experiment.

Macon, Ga., Sept. 3.—Postmaster Edwards of this city has been granted permission by the postoffice department to experiment with the special delivery system to the extent of using postal messengers as the telegraph companies use call boys. A telephone is in the postoffice and if a letter or parcel is to be sent anywhere in the city a messenger boy may be summoned. He takes the letter to the postoffice and records it. Then he carries it to the addressee. The total cost to the sender is 12 cents.

STRIKERS WERE AGRESSIVE.

Mobed a Man by Mistake. Took Him For Scab.

Pittsburg, Sept. 3.—The big Labor Day demonstration monopolized the attention of workmen and strikers here and in the surrounding towns, but steel manufacturers went on making preparations for the opening of the plants that are shut down by the strike and increasing the number of men at the mills already in partial operation.

Public interest in the strike itself is lagging as the contest seems to have settled down to an issue of endurance. Only the unusual incidents connected with each day's doings receive notice by those not directly affected by the struggle. Evidences of impatience are cropping out on the side of the strikers and fears that the unlawful acts participated in by the strikers last night and today about the Star tin plant may mutiply and spread to other quarters.

The officials of the Star plant claim that today the pickets about their mill held up a special delivery boy from the postoffice with a letter for the office while he was coming down Twelfth street, and inspected the letter before he was allowed to proceed. The matter will be reported to the postal authorities at once. It is also charged that the strikers stoned the company carriage on Pennsylvania avenue this morning but did no special damage to the occupants. The aggressiveness of the strikers was further demonstrated late this afternoon when a mob surrounded Wm. Jones, a colored man who was mistaken for a non-union man from the Star wors. He made a narrow escape from serious injury and possibly death by the appearance of police lieutenant Crossan who came to his rescue. Before Crossan could aid him he was almost overwhelmed by the large crowd that had gathered. The prompt arrival of a large force of officers probably saved Jones from being lynched, as the mob appeared a desperate one and many demands were made that he be strung up.

During the parade most of the pickets were away from the Star mills and the company succeeded in securing several new men. Of the lot that arrived in Pittsburg early this morning it was said that a good many of them were for the Demmler plant in McKeesport and were now in that plant where operations are to begin in a short time.

The Lindsay-McCutcheon plant in Alleghany did not start up today because as the management said the men there wanted to celebrate Labor Day. The mills will be operated as usual tomorrow. The Painter mills in West Carson street started up as usual with increased forces. There was no change in the Lawrenceville district.

The failure of the amalgamated people to cripple the Carnegie open hearth plant at Dequesne this morning is looked upon by the steel officials as the death blow of the strike in the Carnegie mills at least.

Last night the strike managers at McKeesport announced that a march would be made this morning at Dequensne and predicted confidently that the men would not go to work and the entire plant would be tied up. This morning no paraders appeared, the men went to work and the plant is in operation as usual.

It is more than probable that this latest failure at Dequensne will have the effect of making the strike managers withdraw all efforts in that direction.

While there is visible indication that the National Tube Company intends starting its plant at McKeesport in the near future, the foremen in the mill said tonight that the entire plant will be in operation next week.

A CHARGE OF TREASON.

Dr. Krauz Former Governor Arrested in London.

London, Sept. 3.—Dr Krauz, former governor of Johannesburg and a popular official of the Transval government, was arrested in London last night on a charge of high treason. He will be arraigned today at Bow street police court. For the past four months Dr. Krauz has been living in Great Britain. It is alleged that after signifying his allegiance to the British crown he secretly forwarded information to the Boers.

The warrant was issued some time ago, but the police were unable to find him till yesterday when they ascertained that he was in Inverness with his sister, Mrs. Dixon, the wife of a British officer. It was Dr. Krauz who handed to Lord Roberts the keys to Johannesburg on the occasion of the surrender

AN ATTEMPTED ASSAULT.

A Tramp Tried to Assault a Farmer's Daughter.

Weeping Water, Neb., Sept. 3.—Saturday afternoon a tramp attempted to criminally assault the 8 year old daughter of Walter Perry, living four miles west of town. A little brother 4 years old called his mother, who ran from the house to a straw rack where the tramp had the girl, and frightened him away.

This morning the father found a tramp answering the description of the one who committed the assault, hiding in the quarry here and compelled him at the point of a revolver to accompany him to his home for identification.

There are threats of summary vengance if he shall be identified.

a few famished, homeless dogs howling mournfully about the scene not a living thing remained at the station, and only the ghastly relics of one human creature had been found in the brief, hurried, two minute search. Already it was known far as the Atlantic that the first stories of massacre were grievously exaggerated, many families reported murdered having made their way in panic but safely to Castle Butte and others escaping to the south. But not a word from any source had come as to the special, the last news by wire being that the Ogallalas were dancing and howling about their agency at Pine Ridge and firing on the scouts sent out from Robinson. The Brules could only be somewhere between Rosebud and Wounded Knee. Wherever that luckless train could be found there would be the Indians in direful force and fury. Grave, set faces were those in the cab and about the engine and tender. The road ran straight for miles. The landscape was open and treeless and lay like a lazily rolling ocean turned suddenly to earth and stone. Langdon and the conductor, clinging fast each to a stanchion, were under the headlight above the pilot. A sergeant and three men, best shots of the rifles, hampered the cab and tender, but the engineer felt safer in having them there, and the hope, pluck and spirits of the whole trainload had gone up at a bound in the consciousness that that cool headed, gritty ex-regular was at the front to take command. Hunt had brought his fieldglass, and despite the jar and jolt as the huge engine clanked along over the elastic roadbed Langdon searched the prairie ceaselessly while the conductor kept track of the mileposts.

"We twist and turn every which way five miles farther on," shouted the latter into Langdon's ear. "That bluff ahead there marks the end of this tangent. Then we follow the creek a piece and then make a streak cross country at the big bend."

"Any deep cuts there?" shouted Langdon in reply, hanging to the iron bar with a hooked arm and still peering through the binocular.

"Four or five. Why?"

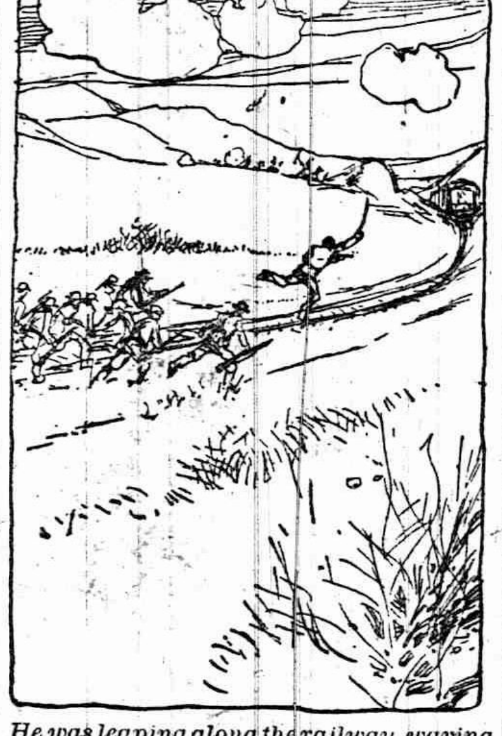
"That's where we'll find 'em. They'll run the train into a cut for protection, line the banks on both sides and stand off the Sioux till help comes if they can. Signal full speed to the engineer, will you? He can slow down again at the bend."

A moment more and the huge machine seemed rushing through space, and the two men at the pilot bent double and hung on for dear life. Five minutes brought them once more along the banks of the stream and close to the frowning bluffs. "Watch them!" signaled Langdon, pointing to the crests and leaning far out from the side of the engine, now reducing speed. The sergeant, clamping his campaign hat to his head, nodded, "I understand."

The bluffs were but the shoulder of a high ridge through which long centuries before the stream had torn its way. It hid like a curtain the spreading landscape beyond. It might be hiding hundreds of lurking warriors, but Langdon believed that though a few wary scouts would be thrown out to give warning of coming troops the main body of savages were clustered close about the beleaguered train. He had never before been brought into contact with mounted Indians, but had had long talks with comrades well schooled in border warfare and felt sure of his ground. From what he could gather he believed that several old Indian fighters from the westward stations must be on that train and reasoned that they would make their defensive stand where the cars could be sheltered and they themselves, the defenders, be partially covered by the sides of the cut. He was reasonably certain that they could there hold out for his coming.

And now as they sweep cautiously round the long curve at the foot of the bluff and see before them four miles ahead up the distant slope of the divide the jagged seam of spaded earth and the black shadows of the snow fence and realize that all that stretch of winding grade must be overcome before they can hope for sight of the besieged Langdon's heart throbs like the massive engine straining at its burden. "Hit her up again, Jimmy!" shouts the conductor, his hands forming a speaking tube. The fireman is thrusting coal by the shovelful into the seething furnace. Inky smoke jets from the stack and streams tailward over the train. "No hiding our coming, cap!" yells the conductor, with a backward and upward glance. Langdon shakes his head. "They've spotted us long before this," is the answer. Again the speed increases despite reverse curves that hug the bank like the convolutions of a snake. Jim is gathering headway for the climb. Tilting far toward the stream, the black demon in the lead, skims the shining concave of the rails under a low line of heights to the left, watched every inch of their length by the wary eyes of crouching sharpshooters in the tender. Then the steel roadway curves inboard again and whirls them around a projecting nose of bluff, and still Jim's hand never winces at the throttle, and under almost full pressure the huge drivers tear at the track; the gleaming rods flash at racing speed, spinning like fire wheels, while in the swaying car behind men cling to seat arms or are hurled from side to side in the fury of the chase. Now comes a long mile of easy grade as the line leaves the narrow river and begins the climb of the distant crest, and, like a black meteor, the Big Horn's powerful Baldwin shoots across the straining trestle over a shallow ravine and spins away in headlong dash, a dense volume of inky smoke and blinding dust whirling and billowing in its wake. Now the snow fence to the north shuts out the landscape on the right flank. Now through low waves of prairie the pilot tears away. Now into the dark mouth of half a mile of snowsheds darts the engine, and the earth an instant later has swallowed up the train. Easy would it have been for savage skill to strip a few rails from the ties and hurl the human load to death, but not a Brule dreamed of such a thing as "store soldiers" coming to dare them, with the regulars a full week's march away. Wide open now, the throttle releases every pound of steam, and all the strength of the mammoth tugs at the lagging load, for the long grade begins at last to tell, and despite all that man and steam and fire can do the dead weight trailing sternward overcomes the impetus of the initial dash, slows down to less than half speed, but still panting furiously the engine struggles on. One mile more, and the crest is gained, and then a new leap. One minute more, and from the bowels of the earth the Baldwin bursts forth into glad sunshine, and, peering instantly about him, sweeping the open slopes with eager eyes, Eric catches sight of a swift, streaming feather skimming the crest to the south and shooting out of sight in the flash of a second. A war bonnet capping the painted head of a savage scout! The Brules had got the alarm! "Back to the cab!" shouts the conductor. But Langdon motions, "Stay."

The grounds break away in a little swale or hollow to the right front, where the prairie begins its slope toward the far concave bend of the river, and over this rift there bursts upon their straining gaze a sight never to be forgotten. Away to the front there rises a billowy butte perhaps two miles distant, about one-half probably of its southward slope just visible, and that slope is thickly sprinkled with darting, dashing red riders in wild commotion. There are the Sioux in all their savage glory. There, close at hand, must be the beleaguered train. Here, closer at hand, just behind the low curtain in front, must lurk the Brule scouts. Look! A flash, a puff at the very crest, not 400 yards away now, so determined has been the Baldwin's onward rush. Look! Another! And now there is not a second to lose. The Sioux have seen and opened fire. A shriek goes up from the brazen throat. The airbrakes grip the wheels. The long train slows so suddenly that men are hurled forward in every car.



He was leaping along the railway, waving and cheering them on.

"Lie low, you in cab and tender!" yells Langdon as the conductor, ducking, scrambles to the shelter of the cab. Flash after flash, puff after puff, the ridge line blazes. Spat comes a bullet on the iron breast behind him as Langdon leaps from the pilot to the sloping ground and sprints back along the side of the train just coming to a standstill. "This way! This side, Company C!" he yells, waving his cap on high, his eyes flashing, his voice thrilling through the rare, exhilarating atmosphere. "Spread out! Open out—five yards apart! Forward—fast as you can! We've got to have that ridge before they can line on it. Come on! Come on!"

It is only a rush of a few hundred feet now. The eastward scouts of the hostiles are but a handful. The braves are closing in on every side about the weary defenders on the farther slope. The glut for blood and rapine has blinded the eyes of old Stabber, their fiery chief. The frantic signals of his scouts have been ignored in the fury of their assault, in the faith that all resistance will be over in another moment, and then, at the head of his wild warriors, he can dash in upon them in furious charge, and the train, with its helpless women, its beaten, beseeching men, its screaming children making sweet music for his savage ears, will be the prey and spoil of the Brule. In the din and crash of battle he never heeds the backward rush of the few warriors at the crest. He thinks them joining in the charge till White Wolf, his son, topples headlong from his pony, gasping warning with his last breath, till, yelling with mingled fury and dismay, a dozen braves bear down upon him at mad gallop and sweep him away to the safety of the west, for there, striding down the prairie slope, spreading out to right and left, comes the long, blue line of hated soldiery backed up by scores of fighting men all with crackling rifles. Here and there in little groups his warriors fire wildly in reply, but the defense, too, has again taken heart and, with exultant cheers, is pouring in a hot fusillade. A dozen ponies are sprawled in death agony upon the sward. Half a dozen gaudy braves are stricken, some even unto death. There is nothing for it but to scoop up the dead and dying brethren and then to dash away for council at safe distance. And five minutes later, laughing, weeping, cheering, handshaking and embracing, 500 men are mingled in joy and triumph about the bullet riddled train. Women and children are sobbing in the arms of loved ones, and scores of quivering lips are pouring praise and blessing on the name of Eric Langdon and eager voices shouting and clamoring for him to show himself and then hushing almost to silence in awe, dismay and wild anxiety. The last seen of him he was leaping along the railway far in front of his line, waving and cheering them on. Had he, too, been snatched up in the smoke and dust and swept away by the Indian band? He had utterly disappeared. He could nowhere be found.

Cleaning the Clock.

A farmer has an ambitious son, 12 years old, who, being left alone for a few hours the other day, tried to clean the clock. He easily got the clock to pieces, but his difficulty lay in putting them together again after cleaning.

At this task he was only partly successful, and upon his father's return home he eagerly exclaimed:

"Father, I've cleaned the clock and got enough works left over to make another one!"—Exchange.

Read What Grateful Patients Say

Mrs Martha Keller, of Cohoctah township, Livingston county who has been seriously afflicted with a complication of diseases for years, voluntarily makes the following statement. She says: I had been a great sufferer with catarrh of the stomach, heart failure and nervous debility. I would have peculiar nervous spells come over me and I would faint away; have been carried in the house more than once in that condition. My heart and stomach troubled me terribly all the time, having tried a number of doctors without receiving any permanent relief. I saw the advertisement of Dr. Walker in the papers, also hearing of the doctor's many cures. I decided to call at the hotel and see him. I at once placed myself under Dr. Walker's treatment. I improved right along and am now happy to say that all of the above symptoms have left me. To have my stomach, heart and nerves feel natural once more causes me to feel very grateful. I most cheerfully recommended the doctor to all afflicted ones. Signed MRS. MARTHA KELLEL.

Mrs. Chas. Maltby, of Milan, Mich., says: I was taken with Lagrippe last winter; soon after rheumatism set in, affecting my whole system; my sufferings at times were intense and intense and in a short time I had become so emaciated that I was a mere skeleton and only by the aid of crutches could I go around at all. I took less than three months treatment of Dr. Walker, who completely restored me to health. CHAS. MALTBY.

Mr. James B. Gilday, a well known citizen, of Yargerville, Mich., says: "I had suffered with catarrh of the head, throat and bronchial tubes for several years. I had treated with several doctors and also tried the best patent medicines advertised, but found no relief until I consulted Dr. W. C. Walker, of Detroit, who makes regular visits to Monroe. The doctor's treatment produced most satisfactory results. Those afflicted with chronic diseases should not lose hope but go to Dr. W. C. Walker. I can cheerfully recommend the doctor as a thorough gentleman and master of his profession. This statement is voluntary on my part, given for the benefit of those afflicted as I was." JAMES B. GILDAY.
Yargerville. Monroe County, mich. June 28. 1901.

Sick all his Life. Read the statement of another well known citizen of Monroe county: Mr. W. W. Murphy, of Samaria, who had been almost a constant sufferer all his life from stomach and liver complications. He says: "I have found Dr. W. C. Walker's treatment a great help to me. I was troubled with sick headache often, as long as I can remember; am now 44 years of age. I treated with the doctor several months and have not had one attack of sick headache since I began his treatment. Had tried everything I could hear of before, with very little benefit. I heartily recommend Dr. Walker." W. W. MURPHY.
Samaria, Monroe Co., Mich., June 25, 1901.

Moore Reunion.

The fifth annual reunion composed mostly of the decendants of Jonh and Mary (Walker) Moore met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hanley in Tecumseh, Mich., Aug. 21 1901. The day as usual was all that could be desired, which has been the case ever since our society organized. No matter what the weather had been or would be, nature gave us her bright smiles on that blest day, and a ride through the country was an inspiration to all who enjoyed the privilege of being an invited guest. Long before mid-day the house was full of bright, happy faces, greeting each other with warm hand clasp and kind salutation, none more warm or hospitable than our kind Host and Hostest, who spare no pains to add to our comfort and happiness.

A picnic dinner was served on the lawn under the excellent supervision of Mrs. Campbell, where a canvass was previously arranged. It is needless to say our tastes were more than gratified and wants well supplied we arose from the table with a feeling of greatfulness to our Host and Hostess, while at dinner it was ascertained we numbered forty, sickness preventing many who should have been present as on former occasion.

About 1:30 p. m. the president, Garrison Moore, called meeting to order, when an interesting program followed: Prayer by Uncle Richard Harkness, the oldest Quaker minister left in the state. Next were some well chosen remarks by Uncle Jacob Moore, the only surviving child, aged 75 years, to the effect that our hearts should go out in gratitude for the privilege of again meeting on this happy occasion and no matter what our religion we can all love one another and our chief object ought to be love to God and man. Secretary's report of last year's meeting in Adrian at Chester Haynes was read and accepted. Mrs. E. C. Moore, of Ann Arbor, reported two births, one marriage and four deaths, only five deaths in five years, our number being one hundred and fifty. Uncle Jacob sang one verse alone, which was very appropriate. Recitation, "Deacon Jones' Courtship" was happily rendered by Mrs. Anna Westgate. After an encore she gave the "Old Fashioned Quaker Meeting."

A letter of regret from cousin George Moore, of Pontiac, Mich., also a poem was read by his mother Hannah R. Moore, aged 72, the only surviving daughter-in-law, of Farmington Mich. Recitation, Miss Vera Westgate, of Adrian, a great great grand-child. Sweet By and By lead by uncle Jacob, and joined in heartily by the company. Letters of regret from Pennsylvauia, Kansas, Texas, Arkansas, New York and other places were read by the secretary. Recitation by Elva Moore, of Birmingham, Mich., another great great grand daugther. By invitation a number present, to large to enumerate, spoke in a very feeling manner. Programe closed by singing "Palms of Victory."

Officers were elected for the eusuing year as follows:

Pres.—Mr. Garrison Moore, Astoria,

Vice Pres.—Mrs. Hannah Ann Haight Ionia.

Sec. and Treas.—Mrs. Anna S. Hanley Tecumreh.

The time and place of meeting another year was left with the officers and we adjourned to the lawn in front of the old Quaker meeting house close by to have our pictures taken by E. L. Teeple, which we must admit was among the finest we have had taken, after which a liberal supply of Mr. Pulver's delicious ice cream was served.

The young folks enjoyed watermelons from a load, which drove on the grounds and Uncle Jacob was so overjoyed, his strength gave way and his strong arm dropped under the weight of one melon. The ice cream had a telling effect with the boys, who indulged in testing their muscles, which caused a little excitement and some of the weaker sex received a share of their innocent merriment. As the evening closed upon us, with nothing to mar our pleasure, the hearty hand shake and the word goodbye was heard. All reported a good time long to be remembered.

BASE BALL.

One of the best games of the season was played here yesterday between the home team and the East Toledo team. Twelve innings were played and it was a pitcher's battle between McCarthy, of Tecumseh, and Hoff, of Toledo. No bases on balls were given by either pitcher. Each side were retired several times with two and three men on bases. The winning run was brought in by Lowe's safe hit to. The score was as follows:

The Toledoes will return here for another game on Saturday, the 7th and a good game may be expected. The Toledoes are the strongest team that have been here this season and are coming with a determination to win the second game. A large attendance is expected.

The games played by Tecumseh and Battle Creek teams at Battle Creek were well attended and created much interest in Tecumseh. In the first game our boys played well but in the second game, they took their usual trip up in the air and stayed there while the Battle Creek boys made 17 tallies on the first floor. The scores were as follows: First game, 4 to 8 in favor of Tecumseh; second game, 17 to 3 in favor of Battle Creek. The Battle Creek paper speaks of the first game as follows:

The Malta Vistas did not find the Tecumseh team the "easys" they thought them to be and found a bunch of goose eggs trailing in their wake with the exception of the first and third innings, in which they secured two runs in each. One run made in the third and three in the fourth by the Tecumseh team, tying the score at four, where it remained until the sixth inning, when a costly error by Stutsman at third, gave the visitors two runs, after which Patterson made another giving them one score.

Harris pitched an excellent game of ball last Saturday against Napoleon and won with a score of 9 to 6. In the first two innings he was hit pretty well and Napoleon made three runs on errors, but the support Harris received was anything but good. Towards the last the locals picked up and played better ball. Napoleon used two pitchers, the first one was batted all over the field. Following is the score:

Changes in Time.

Yesterday the time of departure of trains on the Detroit Southern was so changed that the time card was broken to smash and passengers got left all along the line. No notice of the change was given, even the agent at Tecumseh was ignorant until trains came in on the new time. Of course the Detroit Southern can run trains as they desire but there is a state law that requires the railroads to give notice of the time changes, beside passengers after having been several times left, feel like riding over some other road.

Kaffir Banking.

The Kaffirs have a simple method of banking. Before setting out to trade they select one of their number as their banker and put all their money in his bag. When an article is purchased by any of those who are in this combine, the price is taken by the banker from the bag, counted several times and then paid to the seller, after which all the bank depositors cry out to the banker in the presence of two witnesses selected, "You owe me so much." This is then repeated by the witnesses. The general accounting comes between the banker and his several depositors when all the purchases have been made, after which all the natives go home.

Varying Values of Food.

Fourteen oysters are equal to only one egg. Pea soup is nutritious, but to live on it you would need a daily supply of 24 platefuls. A purely vegetable diet is too bulky, yet it may be good for the gouty and the obese. It is true that the Scottish peasantry, their country's pride, are nurtured on oatmeal, but it is liberally supplemented by milk. Rational life is a compromise. You want the happy mean "between the tiger pacing its cage and the cow lying upon the grass."—Dr. Hutchinson's "Dietetics."

The Passions.

We say of a man who has no will mastery, "He is ruled by his passions." They govern him, not he them. Centuries ago an Arab wrote, "Passion is a tyrant which slays those whom it governs." It is like fire, which once thoroughly kindled can scarcely be quenched, or like the torrent, which when it is swollen can no longer be restrained with its banks. Call him not a prisoner who has been put in fetters by his enemy, but rather him whose own passions overpower him to destruction.

WHAT'S IN A NAME.

Many Times Nothing, Sometimes a Fund of Knowledge.

It's a good old saying, and a true one too, "Know all men by their works." The public has been imposed on so many times by unscrupulous claims made for selfish means of profit, they look for something more substantial; they ask for deeds. The little conqueror has earned the reputation made in Michigan and no imposter can steal it. From north to south, from east to west, in every city, town and hamlet in the state, people stand ready to testify to merit. Gratitude for comfort brought to thousands of homes brings many emphatic rejoicings and words of praise, the like of which has not been equaled in modern times. Is it a wonder the name Doan is a familiar one in every household? Is it surprising the public appreciate Doan's Kidney Pills and will not be led astray by the ingenious efforts of would be competitors? A Detroit citizen tells here why the name of Doan is dear to him:

Mr. R. N. Elliott, of 143 High street, says: "My knowledge of Doan's Kidney Pills dates back to five years ago. I was then living in the town where Dr. Doan was located. I was tortured with kidney troubles and inflammatory rheumatism. The doctor prescribed the pills for me which have since become so justly famous. Their use quickly eliminated the uric acid from my system and with its departure came the cure of the rheumatism and the end of the kidney troubles. It took but a few boxes to accomplish this end and I feel that I owe Dr. Doan an everlasting debt of gratitude for prescribing such a valuable remedy. I have taken great pleasure in recommending this medicine to a number of my friends. I always keep a box of these pills on hand so that should I take a severe cold and feel that it is settling on my kidneys a few doses of Doan's Kidney Pills relieves all apprehension."

A Cl[illegible]

Rajah Suran, who was one of the earliest rulers of India, overran the entire east with the exception of China, killed innumerable sultans with his own hand and married all their daughters. It is said that when the Chinese heard of his triumphant progress and learned that he had reached their frontier they became much alarmed. The emperor called a council of his generals and mandarins, and upon the advice of a crafty old mandarin the following stratagem was carried out:

A large ship was loaded with rusty nails, trees were planted on the deck, the vessel was manned by a numerous crew of old men and dispatched to the rajah's capital. When it arrived—the most wonderful part of the story is that it did arrive—the rajah sent an officer to ask how long it had taken the vessel to make the trip from China The Chinamen answered that they had all been young men when they set sail and that on the voyage they had planted the seeds from which the great trees had grown. In corroboration of their story they pointed to the rusty nails which, they said, had been stout iron bars as thick as a man's arm when they started. "You can see," they concluded, "that China must be a very long distance away."

The rajah was so much impressed by these plausible arguments that he concluded he would not live long enough to reach China and abandoned his projected invasion.

A GENTLE HINT.

In our style of climate, with its sudden changes of temperature,—rain, wind and sunshine often intermingled in a single day,—it is no wonder that our children, friends and relatives are so frequently taken from us by neglected colds, half the death resulting directly from this cause. A bottle of Boschee's German Syrup kept about home for immediate use will prevent serious sickness, a large doctor's bill, and perhaps death, by the use of three or four doses. For curing Consumption Hemorrhages, Pneumonia, Severe Coughs, Croup, or any disease of the Throat or Lungs, its success is simply wonderful, as your druggist will tell you. Pingree and Mosby.

When Hazen S. Pingree was coming into prominence in Michigan politics, he was in Washington one night and strolled through the corridors of Willard's hotel, which he had not visited since war times, when it was the popular rendezvous of the city, political, military and otherwise. A friend introduced him to Colonel Mosby, the old guerrilla chieftain.

"Why, hello, colonel," said Pingree in his bluff, offhanded way, just as if he was in the habit of meeting Mosby every day. "I have not seen you for 25 years, but I remember very well the last occasion when we met."

"Ah," said the Virginian politely, "what incident recalls it to your mind? I really fail to remember you, much to my regret."

"Oh, well," said Pingree, "you would not be so apt as I to remember the day. I was captured by your men, and, happening to be wearing a very good, nearly new uniform, you confiscated it on the spot and gave me your old ragged butternuts. But that's all right. All's fair in love and war, I know. Let's have a cigar."

Without a word of protest Mosby accepted, and a long friendly chat followed.

Mr. G. A. Stillman, a merchant of Tamplico, Ill. writes: "Foley's Kidney Cure is meeting with wonderful success. It has cured some cases here that physicians pronounced incurable. I myself am able to testify to its merits. My face to-day is a living picture of health, and Foley's Kidney Cure has made it such." J. J. Orr.

DOGS.

There are nearly 200 distinct varieties of dogs.

Foxhounds give cry, but deerhounds hunt in silence.

Only in the temperate zone is the dog found perfect in courage and speed.

Skye terriers have been known to jump into the river and land hooked fish, which they take carefully by the back.

Eskimo dogs are capable of drawing a well laden sledge 60 miles in a day. Their harness is of the lightest, only a single trace and no reins.

Women Cannot Boss Each Other.

The old theory that woman is man's helper seems incorrigibly well founded, says E. S. Martin in McClure's Magazine. If the situation isn't satisfactory to her, there is no help for it, for the conditions it came out of seem to be eternal. Women may vote. They will be none the less man's helpers if they do. They never will band together to put man down and teach him his place. They will push him ahead if they can, they will pull him along when they must, they will influence him enormously, as they always have done, but they will never conspire together on any very great scale to make him play second fiddle. Some one has got to be master. Women in general will never agree to have women bosses so long as there are competent men for that use.

BIG PRICES FOR ANIMALS.

Because of the difficulty of getting it to America and of keeping it alive after it arrives a good giraffe is quoted at $7,000.

Next to the giraffe in the aristocracy of cost come the rhinoceros and the hippopotamus, worth from $4,000 to $5,000 each. If a dealer could breed these animals, he could get rich, but the big mammals rarely breed in captivity. About the only place in America where hippopotami have been known to raise their young is in the menagerie in Central park, New York.

A chimpanzee of size is worth $5,000, and when one reaches the intelligence of the late Mr. Crowley, Chico. or Johanna he is beyond a fixed price. The monkey kind are most uncertain property. The animal man says they are certain to die. But the ordinary ones can be bought very cheaply.

One can buy a nice young baby elephant for $1,000 at times, but a really good animal is worth from $1,800 to $3,000. An elephant does not command the maximum price because of the beauty of his countenance, the elegance of his figure, his intellectual endowments or his size, but because of a sweet, sunny disposition. A mean elephant is about the most evil of living things. Sooner or later he has to be killed, usually after he has slain two or three keepers and done more damage than he is worth. Of two animals of equally good disposition the larger and finer commands the higher price, of course, but the most magnificent beast with an inclination for murder isn't worth as much as a very common one that is trustworthy—that is, ordinarily so, for the sweetest tempered have days when they seem inspired of satan.—Junior Munsey.

NATURAL HISTORY.

For mountain climbing camels are very inefficient and seldom used in Abyssinia and other mountainous countries.

Sparrows begin housekeeping very expeditiously. A pair of them will build a nest and furnish it with an egg inside of 24 hours from the time when the site was selected.

The female red grouse is said to vary its dress according to surroundings. It is a fact worth remembering that the red grouse occurs in no other part of the world but the British isles.

No one has been able to give a satisfactory reason for the formation adopted by the wild duck or mallard in flight. The birds arrange themselves in two converging lines, like a huge V, the leader occupying the point.

The ostrich is a descendant of a genus of bird which in prehistoric times attained an enormous size. In the alluvial deposits of Madagascar evidence has recently been found to show that ostriches 14 and 15 feet in height once lived on the island.

Stevenson's Cup of Misery.

R. L. Stevenson, writing in 1893 to George Meredith, in an epistle quoted in a new edition of his "Letters," says, with heart touching pathos:

"For 14 years I have not had a day's real health. I have wakened sick and gone to bed weary, and I have done my work unflinchingly. I have written in bed and written out of it, written in hemorrhages, written in sickness, written torn by coughing, written when my head swam for weakness, and for so long, it seems to me, I have won my wager and recovered my glove. I am better now—have been, rightly speaking, since first I came to the Pacific—and still few are the days when I am not in some physical distress. And the battle goes on—ill or well is a trifle so that it goes. I was made for a contest, and the powers have so willed that my battlefield should be this dingy, inglorious one of the bed and the physic bottle. At least, I have not failed, but I would have preferred a place of trumpetings and the open air over my head."

The Life Line In One's Hand.

There are three prominent lines in the palm—the line of life, that of the head and the heart line.

The line of life begins on the inner boundary of the palm, about midway between the thumb and the forefinger. If we imagine the left hand to be a map, with the fingers pointing north, this line runs toward the southeast, then curves toward the south and in some hands curves finally toward the southwest. It thus skirts the base or "uprise" of the thumb, known as the uprise of Venus. If it is deep, broad, of good color and extends nearly or quite to the wrist and if the rest of the hand indicates vitality and cheerfulness, the subject may be expected to live to a green old age; he has a good disposition and the qualities which good health and good temper usually create.

Crane Island.

In Lake Minnetonka, Minnesota, there is a picturesque island which takes its name from the fact that it is uninhabited by man and given over to the cranes. Generations back these birds decided upon this spot for a summer resort. As times went on and the surrounding islands populated no man had the heart to disturb them, until now Crane island is pointed out from passing boats as one of the curiosities of the northwest.

He Hadn't Lost a Burglar.

"John," she said, suddenly shaking him, "there is a burglar in the house."

"Are you sure?" he asked.

"Positive," she replied. "Don't you hear him?"

He got up and began to dress hastily, but quietly.

"What are you going to do, John?" she inquired.

"I am going to sneak out the back way and get a policeman," he answered.

"But if you go right down stairs now," she said, "you'll find him in the dining room."

"Oh, I'll find him, will I?" he retorted sarcastically. "Well, now you just look me over carefully."

"Yes, John; what of it?"

"Do I look like a man who has lost a burglar anywhere?"

"No; of course not, but"—

"Do I have the reputation of being an impertinent fellow who is always interfering with other people's business? Do I in any way resemble the lost and found department of a daily newspaper?"

"No."

"Then why should I get tangled up with other people's property?"

"You're afraid, John."

"Afraid nothing!" he retorted indignantly. "I am looking at it from an ethical point of view. This burglar undoubtedly has been lost by the police, and if I took charge of him they might think I was trying to steal him and make a lot of trouble for me. Besides, I'm no searching party. You women don't understand the ethics of business at all."—Chicago Post.

Even Ruts Have Their Uses.

Life's monotonies are a blessing, and not in disguise, for they contribute directly to longevity, health and happiness. The long lived man is not the adventurer, the explorer, the plunger, the man who has worries, but he who takes the world as he finds it and slips along through life with as little friction as possible, forms easy going habits, sticks to them and cares not one straw for the opinions of men who say that he is in a rut. He is healthy because he has peace of mind and regularity of life; he is happy because he is healthy and in a good, smooth, comfortable rut, which he prefers to the macadam on the sides of the road. Goldsmith's pastor, who had spiritual charge of the deserted village, who ne'er had changed nor wished to change his place, is an excellent example of the man who makes the most possible out of the monotonies of life.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Peasant Costumes In Ireland.

A certain number of peasants in the wilder and remoter districts of Ireland still wear something like a national costume. About Lough Mask plenty of the lasses are to be seen in picturesque red petticoats that artists loved to bring into their sketches of Irish life. A sprinkling of the old high hats may be seen. The older fishermen wear them, but the younger school shun such antiquated headgear, as the English peasant of today does the smock frock.—London Express.

Just Like Eve's Apple.

A fruit supposed to bear the mark of Eve's teeth is one of the many botanical curiosities of Ceylon. The tree on which it grows is known by the significant name of "the forbidden fruit," or "Eve's apple tree."

The blossom has a very pleasant scent, but the really remarkable feature of the tree, the one to which it owes its name, is the fruit. It is beautiful and hangs from the tree in a peculiar manner.

Orange on the outside and deep crimson within, each fruit has the appearance of having had a piece bitten out of it. This fact, together with its poisonous quality, led the Mohammedans to represent it as the forbidden fruit of the garden of Eden and to warn men against its noxious properties.

The mark upon the fruit is attributed to Eve. Why the bite of Adam did not also leave its mark is not known, but as only one piece seems to be missing its loss is ascribed to the woman.—Youth's Companion.

Banks Ready For Emergencies.

To meet sudden and unexpected demands upon banks a large sum is kept ready for use. The average large bank—say with total assets of $20,000,000—is prepared by four lines of defense to resist sudden attack. In the vault or safe about $500,000 in bank bills is always on hand, back of that is a cash reserve of perhaps $1,500,000 deposited in various business banks subject to instant call, back of that again is perhaps $8,000,000 in United States and other gilt edged securities immediately marketable, and the fourth and last line of defense and to be retired upon only in extreme distress is $6,000,000 or $8,000,000 in bonds and mortgages, on which the mortgagers will be hurriedly called to make a payment on account if the bank is pushed to extremities. With such resources disaster would seem impossible, though it has come to the best fortified institutions.—Bookkeeper.

Monument to a Pig.

No stranger monument ever existed than that which was erected at the Hotel de Ville by the inhabitants of Luneburg, in Hanover, in honor of a pig. This, which took the form of a kind of mausoleum, contained a large glass case in which was hermetically inclosed a fine ham cut from the animal whose memory was to be handed down to posterity. Above was a handsome slab of marble, on which, engraved in letters of gold, was the following inscription in Latin: "Passersby, contemplate here the mortal remains of the pig which acquired for itself imperishable glory by the discovery of the salt springs of Luneburg."

Limewater.

Limewater has so many uses it is hard to classify. It is good to soften water, to sweeten drains, to keep milk vessels wholesome, to make milk itself sit well upon delicate stomachs, to test air for excess of carbonic acid—if there is too much carbonic acid present, the clear limewater instantly crusts over—to take out marks left by grease spots which have been removed by stronger alkalis—in fact, for so many things it should always be kept on hand. Mixed with either sweet or linseed oil to a creamy consistence, it is the very best household remedy for burns and scalds. It costs practically no more than the trouble of making. Put a lump of quicklime as big as the two fists in a clean earthen pitcher, cover it six inches deep with clean cold water, stir with a wooden spoon and let it stand six hours. Pour off the clear liquid without disturbing the lime, but let it run through double cheesecloth. Put in small bottles and cork tight. In using always pour off half an inch from the top of a bottle that has stood.

Hunting the Kangaroo.

When brought to bay, the kangaroo jumps like a flash for the hunter's chest and tries to crush it in with his fore feet. To prevent this each man wears across his breast a two or three inch thick matting. Armed with a spear, with a club attachment at the other end, they ride upon swift horses into a herd.

With the agility and equipoise of circus riders they stand erect upon their horses and use their spears and clubs.

The kangaroo is able to jump clear over a horse. As the game is bagged it is skinned, and the skin is stretched on the ground and pegged down to prevent shrinkage. The flesh furnishes meat for the camp.

Each man places his private mark upon his booty, and when they have 100 apiece they return back to civilization. There are 20 varieties of kangaroos, among them the blue, red, wallaby, black, gray and forester, the latter furnishing the best leather, as it lives mainly in wooded sections.

He Was Accommodated.

A conjuror was performing before a rough and ready audience in one of the prohibition states of America, according to an English paper. "I am now about to undertake a feat," said he, "in which I shall need the use of a pint flask of whisky." There was a dead silence. "Will some gentleman in the audience favor me with a pint of whisky?" There was no response, and the conjuror began to look blank. "Surely," he continued, "in a southeastern prohibition town I ought not to have to ask a second time for such a thing. I give my word I will return it intact. Is there no"—

"Stranger," said a tall, gaunt man as he rose slowly from a front seat, "wouldn't a quart flask do as well?"

"Why, certainly! I merely"—

But before he could finish the generous, open handed audience had risen like one man and were on their way to the platform in a body.

Sunny.

The word sunny borrowed its original significance from astrology. It described a person born under the influence of the son, this luminary being supposed to exercise a beneficial influence on the character of the individual.

Not Clipped.

A naturalist says that the squirrel tribe is increasing all over the wooded districts of England and in the Scottish lowlands. In some parts of Scotland, notably in the north, the little creature is unknown.

It is not so long ago that a Scotch judge was trying a case which had to do with the escape of a squirrel from its cage and the question as to whether it had been stolen.

"Were its wings clipped?" he asked a witness.

"But, my lord," interposed the counsel, "it is a quadruped."

"Quadruped or no quadruped," said his honor sternly, "if its wings had been clipped it could never have escaped."

Use of a Long Breath.

When chilled by exposure to cold, take a long breath, with the mouth firmly shut. Repeat this several times until you begin to feel the heat returning. It requires only a very short time to do this. The long breath quickens the pulse, and this causes the blood to circulate faster. The blood flows into all parts of the veins and arteries and gives out a great deal of heat. It is stated that a long, deep breath, held as long as possible, will close the pores of a heated skin, and the danger of taking cold on stepping outdoors may be thus guarded against.

Dug Mud, Not Holes.

"There used to be a famous character in our part of the world named Frank O'Connor," said a Cincinnati man, "and the stories of his doings and sayings still form a large part of the staple anecdotes of the country which he used to permeate.

"One of his stock expressions has passed from local to national use. If any one did a particularly clever thing or said anything that especially struck him, O'Connor would say, 'That shows almost human intelligence,' and now when far and near I hear that expression used it conjures up memories of my genial old friend.

"Up in Ontario at one time ill fortune compelled O'Connor to accept a job on a farm where a friend one day found him, the sweat pouring off his brow and a spade in his hand. 'Hello, Frank!' he unkindly called. 'Are you doing very well digging out postholes?' 'I'm not,' was the tart response of O'Connor, who was nothing if not literal. 'I'm digging out mud and leaving the holes.'"

He Wasn't Deported.

Shortly after the Chinese exclusion act was passed the secretary of state received a letter from Pennsylvania, signed by a Chinaman. The writer said that he had been interested in this legislation and that he fell within the conditions of this act. He had come to this country under false pretenses, and hence he should be deported immediately. The request was so strange that the secretary of state ordered an investigation. The agent reported a few days later that the Chinaman's statement about the way in which he entered this country was correct and that he should be deported. There was just one drawback to this programme, however. The Chinaman had been convicted of murder and sentenced to life imprisonment.

An Ant For a Pet.

One of the queerest little pets ever seen is the tame ant belonging to a well known scientist. This man keeps tribes of ants in nests which he has made himself and feeds them with honey or sugar through a tube that connects with the nests. One day he saw that one of the ants kept coming into the tube to eat up the honey in the glass bulb at the end. When he took out the cork that closed the bulb, the insect came to look for the food, and he offered it some honey on the point of a needle, says the New York Tribune.

The ant shrank back at first, then drew nearer, feeling about with its antennæ, until it reached the needle. Soon it learned to take the honey off its keeper's finger, although ants are among the most timid of living things, and a new odor or the least movement outside their nests usually drives these little insects away.

This ant is now so tame that it quits the bulb as soon as the cork is removed and goes to find the honey on the scientist's finger. When its meal is over, it does not try to hurry away, but waits till its master lifts it on a bristle and carries it back to its nest.

A Rattlesnake Story.

In "Life and Sport on the Pacific Coast," Horace A. Vachell relates one of his narrow escapes from a friend's bullet: "My cousin and I had been camping and hunting for several days in a sort of paradise valley. One day, during a long ride on horseback, we had seen a great many rattlesnakes and killed a few, an exceptional experience. That night my cousin woke up and saw, by the light of the moon, a big rattler crawling across my chest. He lay for a moment fascinated, horror struck, watching the sinuous curves of the reptile.

"Then he quietly reached for his six shooter, but he could not see the reptile's head, and he moved nearer, noiselessly, yet quickly, dreading some movement on my part that should precipitate the very thing he dreaded, and then he saw that it was not a snake at all—only the black and yellow stripe of my blanket, which gently rose and fell as I breathed. Had he fired—well, it might have been bad for me, for he confessed that his hand shook."

TROUBLE EXPECTED

The Companies at Pittsburg, Kan., Preparing.

ARBITRATION NOT WANTED

Men Are Determined That Big Four Shall Recognize the Union and Are Ready and Willing to Make a Fight —May Strike Today.

Pittsburg, Kan., Sept. 6.—The miners' strike situation looks more serious today. The miners' national board has authorized the district board to extreme measures, if necessary, to force the big four operators to terms.

President Richardson of the miners' union said:

"We will order a strike Friday if we can find no other way of securing a settlement. Ninety per cent of the men will walk out."

State Labor Commissioner Johnson is here and has offered his services as arbitrator. The district board decided, however, that arbitration is not wanted for the present.

All the companies are preparing for trouble. Stockades are being built about the mines and guards are being posted. There is bitter feeling between the union and non-union men and serious trouble may ensue.

The miners' district officials will meet today and canvass the situation. The calling of the strike can hardly be avoided now, as failure to strike would mean, in the minds of the miners, the disorganization of the union. The companies have offered the men every concession except recognition of the union

EXPRESS CAR CUT IN TWO.

Bad Smashup on the Texas & Pacific Railroad.

Dallas, Tex., Sept. 6.—A Texas & Pacific freight train crashed through a Gulf, Colorado & Santa Fe passenger train at the crossing of the roads in the eastern part of the city late yesterday afternoon. The combination baggage and express car was cut in two and the body of Mail Clerk A. E. Jackson of Waco, Tex., was found buried under the cab of the freight engine, which was overturned and badly wrecked. The two front cars, loaded with mules, were demolished, killing between 15 and 20 of the animals. Engineer and firemen of the freight narrowly escaped with their lives. None of the passengers were hurt. The cause of the wreck is not known.

Tested for War.

Chicago, Sept. 6.—Eight students of the Northwestern military academy left Chicago for Washington last night in automobiles, the object being a test of these vehicles for war purposes. It originally was intended that the students should carry a message from Chicago to Gen. Miles. Later it was learned Gen. Miles would not be in Washington at the time of the arrival of the automobile party and the message plan was abandoned.

A FAST FIGHT.

Decision Goes to Simms of Ohio on a Foul.

New Britain, Conn., Sept. 6.—What promised to be one of the fastest fights ever seen here was stopped in the 13th round last night and a decision was given to Art Simms of Ohio on a foul over "Kid" Thomas of Philadelphia. The men met at 133 pounds to go 20 rounds, and for eight rounds things were even. In the ninth Simms cut loose and put it over his man badly. Thomas stood it until the 12th and then began to hit low, which he continued in the 13th, when the decision was made. Simms wanted to continue after the fight was forfeited to him, but his seconds would not allow it.

Fight Stopped by Police.

Toronto, Sept. 6.—The fight between Martin Duffy of Chicago and Tim Kearns of Boston, at 136 pounds, before the Crescent A. C., which was to have gone 20 rounds, was stopped by the police in the 11th round. Both men had been hitting in clinches, and the last few rounds had been very fast. The referee awarded the fight to Duffy. In the preliminaries, Ole Olsen of Chicago gained the decision over Pat Kilty, Toronto, in a 10-round go at 130 pounds. Both men went the limit.

STRIKE PRACTICALLY SETTLED.

Plan Has Been Perfected to Complete Peace Arrangement.

Pittsburg, Pa., Sept. 6.—The prevailing opinion in Pittsburg is that the great steel strike is practically settled, but absolutely nothing positive can be learned from either side to the controversy.

The day was spent by the Amalgamated advisory board in secret conference behind doors that were guarded closer than ever before. The newspaper "dead line" was drawn most effectually. When the final adjournment for the day came, at about 6:30 p. m., those who had been inside headquarters refused to say a word in answer to insistent questioners and volunteered no statement. When the meeting was over it was learned for the first time that President Shaffer had not been with his colleagues in the afternoon session and his whereabouts up to 11 o'clock last night were unknown. Secretary Williams also disappeared shortly after the adjournment and he, too, cannot be located.

It is the belief of those who are familiar with the strike proceedings throughout, that the two gentlemen have started on another unannounced and mysterious visit to New York city. It is believed that the morning session of the advisory board must have decided upon a plan by which President Shaffer could go to New York and complete the arrangement for peace which it is supposed were started by the conference Wednesday between the steel magnates and the presidents of the several trades unions.

The only approach to a statement of the condition of affairs was made by Trustee John Pierce, who said it was impossible to accept the proposition made by the United States steel corporation, as by doing so some of the members of the Amalgamated association would suffer.

"It would be unjust to our members," said Mr. Pierce, "to accept such terms. We have made no counter proposition and still insist on terms made and are willing to arbitrate the differences. The committee that visited President Schwab had no authority from the Amalgamated association to settle the dispute. The members were acting on their own responsibility."

Mr. Pierce would not say that all negotiations had been broken off, and his intimation that the Amalgamated association is willing to arbitrate differences would indicate that all efforts for peace have not been abandoned.

Aside from the mysterious conference there was nothing much of a startling nature transpired in the strike in this city.

Manager Lauck of the Demmler plant declares that the men were ready to go to work, but that the mill would not start until today. At Canal Dover District Manager E. E. Cline of the Sheet Steel Co. was knocked down and narrowly escaped severe treatment at the hands of a party of strikers during a heated discussion in the bar of the Central hotel. The strikers claim that Cline was the aggressor, and charges will be preferred against him.

It is officially announced that 100 men will be taken from the Star plant in this city and transferred to other plants. They will leave the city over the Pennsylvania railroad, but their destination has not been learned. The official says that the Star plant has more men at work than can be accommodated comfortably, and this division will be made to assist less fortunate mills.

Strikers Run a Grocery.

Elwood, Ind., Sept. 6.—The grocery established in this city by the McKinley lodge of the Amalgamated association, on the advice of the leading officers at Pittsburg after the local dealers had refused to extend further credit to the strikers, opened its doors this morning. It started briskly from the opening, the strikers giving their patronage to the new store, and many of the members of the unions in the city are lending general support. The promoters of the store say that with the present patronage the stock will be cleaned up once each week.

Sureties Sued for $10,000.

Washington, Sept. 6.—Acting for the government of the United States, District Attorney Gould has instituted suit in the supreme court of the District of Columbia against the sureties of Charles H. Day, late vice-consul and late deputy consul-general of the United States at Berlin. It is claimed that Day collected $10,000 and failed to turn over to the government the amount for which suit is now brought.

A STRANGE FIND

Clothes Belonging to J. C. Kunert Found at Saginaw.

THIS MAY BE A MURDER

An Insurance Certificate Was Found Torn in Two—Pockets of Clothes Looted — The Body Has Disappeared.

Saginaw, Mich., Sept. 6.—A case that is shrouded in deep mystery has developed here. On Tuesday afternoon a man's complete outfit—hat, clothes, underclothes, shoes, etc., were found on the bank of the river and at the time of the discovery appeared to have been there about a week. Near the clothing was found an insurance certificate, torn into small pieces. It was taken to the central station and put together.

The certificate was issued by the Loyal Guards to John Charles Kunert, aged 20 years, at Plymouth, Mich., and bears the date of July 18, 1901, and was for $2,000, payable to a sister of the holder, Maggie M. Kunert. A receipt for the July assessment, amounting to $1.58, and bearing date July 16, was found with the certificate. The clothing had apparently been examined by some person before being discovered by the young man who reported it to the police, as the pockets had been turned inside out and nothing of volue was found.

It has been ascertained that Kunert left Plymouth for Saginaw Aug. 26. It was then learned that last Wednesday he left Coleman, Mich., stating that he was going to Saginaw to accept a position as fireman on the Pere Marquette. Knuert's name does not appear on the books here as an employe of the Pere Marquette. It is apparently a case of foul play, accidental drowning or suicide. There is no known reason why the young man, in excellent health, would resort to self-destruction. The inference is that he was lured to the river bank, foully dealt with and his body thrown into the river to create the impression of accidental drowning while bathing, or of suicide. It is believed his body will be found in the river

Held Up the Money.

Port Huron, Mich., Sept. 6.—An injunction has been issued by Judge Law restraining the Botsford Elevator company from paying the $16,000 shortage to the Commercial and First National banks. The minority stockholders secured an injunction, claiming that the company is not responsible for the money. A meeting of directors was held yesterday and it was voted by a majority of the stockholders to pay the $16,000. At the close of the meeting the injunction was served, and the affair, which involves the Reynolds Grain Co. and Botsford Elevator Co. is now in the courts.

New Oleo Law.

Lansing, Mich., Sept. 6.—Food Commissioner Snow announces that the new law prohibiting the manufacture or sale of oleomargarine colored to resemble butter, which took effect yesterday, will be rigidly enforced to the letter. The department insists that the law is constitutional and that the public has had ample time to familiarize itself with its provisions. Inspectors have been instructed to keep dealers under strict surveillance and promptly prosecute offenders.

New Kind of Wagon.

Saginaw, Mich., Sept. 6.—Saginaw has good prospects for a $100,000 plant for the manufacture of farmers' wagons, which are different from any heretofore manufactured and for which there is a patent held. Two outside parties are here and held a conference with business men at the board of trade rooms. A company will probably be organized and a plant erected.

Fire Bugs at Adrian.

Adrian, Mich., Sept. 6.—Ahe Adrian Creamery Co.'s plant on Treat street, just south of the city, was destroyed by fire yesterday from incendiarism. It took two fires to destroy it, the first one occurring at 1 a. m. and the other at 5 a. m. Loss about $1,500. No insurance. The building had not been occupied for some time.

New Judge for Monroe.

Lansing, Mich., Sept. 6.—Harry O. Lockwood of Monroe has been appointed judge of the new thirty-eighth judicial circuit, formed by cutting Monroe from its former connection with Washtenaw.

New Factory for Three Rivers.

Three Rivers, Mich., Sept. 6.—The dedication of the new building erected for the Initial Toe-Pad Co. was made a gala event, more than 3,000 people attending. Refreshments were provided and there was excellent music

Bruised and Scalded.

Menominee, Mich., Sept. 6.—Clarence Godfrey fell off an elevator at the Menominee River Shingle Co.'s mill, fracturing his leg in two places. He was badly scalded on the back by steam and his recovery is doubtful.

Insurance Policy Void.

Flint, Mich., Sept. 6.—An unoccupied house on Mary street owned by Robert Norgett was destroyed by an incendiary fire. The loss was about $350. As the house was unoccupied at the time the insurance policy is void.

Drowned in a Well.

Bay City, Mich., Sept. 6.—Edward McKinnon, aged 30, farm hand, was drowned in a well on Ready's farm last evening. He was watering stock at the time. His parents are believed to reside near Port Huron.

Frigga.

Frigga, from whom Friday is derived, was either a god or a goddess, according to time and country. As a man he was a great hunter and warrior, always represented with a drawn sword in one hand and a bow in the other. In the Scandinavian countries Frigga was called the "Venus of the North," and the sixth day of the week was consecrated to her worship.

THE TEACHERS [illegible]

Led to Believe That They Could Live Cheaply.

Washington, Sept. 6.—The cabled report from Manila to the effect that the newly arrived American teachers at a mass meeting, decided to cable to the president complaining that commissary privileges were denied them and they found their expenses would be great. The privilege of purchasing commissary stores at the government warehouses in the Philippines was taken away from all civilian employes by order of the secretary of war, issued in June, and as that order was widely published, it was presumed that the teachers who sailed subsequently to its issuance were aware of its existence. The letters and circulars issued by the war department to applicants for these positions in the Philippines contain no direct statement upon the subject of commissary privileges, but the promise that they would have these privileges might have been assumed from some statements contained in a "manual of information relative to the Philippines civil service," which was published in Manila early in the present year and to which attention was invited by Col. Edwards, chief of the division of insular affairs, in his circular to applicants. This pamphlet, in setting forth the conditions in the islands for the information of Americans seeking positions in the civil service, there contains the following regarding the purchase of cimmissaries:

"Many of the Americans secure rooms with private families and board in messes, the provisions being purchased from the commissary. The food obtained from the commissary stores is the best and the average cost for room and board for those who live in this manner is about $35 a month."

The pamphlet containing the above statement was mailed to each of the teachers appointed, but attention was not called to the fact that the privilege of buying supplies at the government commissary had been discontinued. The government was compelled to cut off this privilege both to stop the frauds which were discovered to be due to its operation and also to satisfy the regular merchants of that island, who were complaining bitterly that the furnishing of supplies by the United States was closing one of their channels of revenue.

PRESBYTERIANS KICK.

Don't Want Carnegie to Give Them Anything.

Sharon, Pa., Sept. 6.—An offer of Andrew Carnegie to place a pipe organ in the Central Presbyterian church at Newcastle is meeting with bitter opposition and serious trouble in the congregation interested. When it became generally known that the gift was to be accepted ominous mutterings were heard. Now a storm of protest has blown up. What the outcome will be cannot be prophesied but it looks as if the gift will be refused.

Mr. Carnegie offered New Castle a free library some time ago, but the proposition met with so much opposition that the matter was dropped.

Said He Liked to See Fires.

New Philadelphia, O., Sept. 6.—Robert W. Ditto, a former member of the New Philadelphia fire department was arrested here and confessed to having been the perpetrator of a large number of incendiary fires that have occurred here during the last six months. He gave no cause for his incendiary work except that he liked to see the people get excited and run to the fires. Ditto was held under $10,000 bond.

Terrific Wind Storm.

Benkelman, Neb., Sept. 6.—Reports from the country show that Wednesday night's tornado was worse than first reported. Farm houses were wrecked and crops damaged. One death may result. At the J. B. Reynolds ranch a number of men who had been threshing took refuge in the stables. Every building on the place was torn to pieces and four people were injured, one probably fatally. The force of the wind at one time was 100 miles an hour.

Steamer Burned.

Muscatine, Ia., Sept. 6.—The Carnival City Packing Co.'s new boat Urania burned to the water's edge here last night. The fire started in the laundry. The boat was carrying a large excursion of Burlington people, who were returning home from Davenport. All escaped without injury. The boat was recently purchased for $17,000 and had been in service but a short time. The loss is fully insured.

Lucky Clam Digger.

Prairie du Chien, Wis., Sept. 6.—The finest pearl yet found in the Mississippi river was discovered here yesterday by William Bums, a clam digger. It is perfect egg-shaped, of fine quality, weighs 42 grains and is perfect in every respect. It was sold for $1,000.

MINOR TELEGRAMS.

The temporary scare caused at Colon by the activity of the rebels at Gatun, on the outskirts of Colon, has passed. Everything is now quiet.

The Boersen Courier of Berlin says that Herr Krupp has purchased 90 acres of land near Mengede for the erection of a new factory.

Brigands have carried off an American lady engaged in missionary work and a lady companion in the district of Djumabala, Vilayet of Salonica, Turkey.

The new Russian postoffice was opened in Jerusalem with great public ceremony in the presence of members of the Russian consulate, Russian clergy, Russian residents and pilgrims.

Word has been received at the war department of the death of Gen. Chauncey McKeever, U. S. A., retired, at a health resort near Emden, Hanover, Germany. No details are given. The royal yacht Ophir, with the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York aboard, escorted by the British cruisers Diadem and Niobe, have sailed from Cape Verde islands for Quebec.

There are lots of people who will not take a dare to do anything except a dare to go to work.—Atchison Globe.

Saving Requires Character.

The faculty of saving money is much rarer than the faculty of making it, and it calls for the exercise of a higher degree of good judgment and more self restraint. In a word, it requires more character.—World's Work.

FOURTEEN INJURED

Two Electric Cars Collide Going at Full Speeb.

THE ORDERS WERE MIXED UP

Passengers and the Crews of Both Cars More or Less Injured, One Man Fatally—Miracle That Many Were Not Killed.

Cleveland, O., Sept. 6.—Two suburban electric cars, going in opposite directions, crashed into each other last evening at a point one-half mile east of Chagrin Falls and 10 miles west of Cleveland, and 14 passengers and the crews of both cars were more or less injured. A. H. Bradley, aged 70 years, of Cleveland is thought to be fatally injured.

A hurried call was sent in for ambulances and the more seriously injured were taken to hospitals.

Both cars were running at full speed and it was nothing short of a miracle that many were not killed.

It is stated that a misunderstanding of orders caused the accident.

WRONG KIND OF HORSES.

British Horses Did Not Have the Endurance.

Washington, Sept. 6.—Had the British been astride of horses as serviceable as those which the Boers rode, there would have been a different tale to tell in South Africa, according to the report made by Mr. Curren, the under secretary for agriculture in British South Africa, which Consul-General Stowe has transmitted to the state department. The South Africa horse, it is stated, can live on much less food than his English brother; he does not topple into holes, he is sounder, more sensible, will stand without being hitched, and is altogether better fitted for the purposes of warfare.

Gen. Lawton Monument.

Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 6.—The Gen. Lawton monument will be located in the middle of the approach to the Delaware street entrance to the court house. It probably will be a full length bronze statue of the dead soldier, modeled by Sculptor French. The location of the monument on this site was assured when the county council authorized the $2,000 appropriation. This action complies with the conditions stipulated by the monument commission that the county pay for the stone base and for locating the monument.

Menace to Navigation.

St. Johns, N. F., Sept. 6.—Advices from northern Labrador show that Arctic floes continue to blockade the coast. Such a state of things was never known before within the memory of the colony. The fishery is very backward, indeed it is the worst on record in the more northern parts. Thousands of fishermen are doomed to a very poor return for the work of an arduous season. Numbers of bergs are floating southward past the strait of Belle Isle, forming a serious menace to ocean navigation.

Believe in the Columbia.

Bristol, R. I., Sept. 6.—The announcement of the selection of the Columbia to defend the cup was a great surprise to President J. B. Herreshof of the Herreshof company, but he declined to discuss the committee's action. The news was received with great regret in Bristol. It is the very general feeling here that Constitution is the better boat and that ultimately she would prove herself to be all right. Bristol people, however, have the utmost confidence in Columbia's ability to defeat the new Shamrock.

Germans in South America.

Berlin, Sept. 6.—It is said that the German schoolships in South America waters will soon be reinforced. The frigate Stein sails Sept. 26th from the island of Madeira to Port of Spain, Island of Trinidad. She will then touch at Carupano and La Guaira, Venezuela, and Colon, Colombia. At the beginning of November the schoolship Moltke will reach Rio Janiero and will then go to Venezuelan waters. These are antiquated vessels which are used as training ships.

Prince Chun All Through Now.

Berlin, Sept. 6.—Prince Chun and the new Chinese minister, Kien Chang, were formally presented to the empress yesterday. This ends all official recognition of Prince Chun's presence in Berlin. Hherafter he will be merely a distinguished tourist. The German newspapers are, by desire of the government, it is understood, paying attention to the presence of the Chinese mission. Papers dismiss Wednesday's audience with a prefunctory paragraph. Prince Chun's further stay here probably will be brief.

Prince Trial Sept. 28.

Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 6.—The case of Will Prince, charged with conspiring with his father, brother and sister, Lulu Prince-Kennedy, to murder Philip H. Kennedy, is set for trial Sept. 28. The woman has already been found guilty of killing Kennedy and was sentenced to 10 years in the penitentiary. She was recently permitted to give bail so that she might remain here and testify at the trial of her father and brothers.

These Canadians Can Shoot.

New York, Sept. 6.—The Canadian and American teams each scored 519 points in the second stage of the match on the 900 yard ranges. The light was much better during the afternoon and the best score was 72, made by Lieut. Leizear. The next highest was 70 by Lieut. Cookson, of the District of Columbia. Four of the Canadians made 68 each.

Stood Death Off.

E. B. Munday, a lawyer of Henrietta, Tex., once fooled a grave-digger. He says: "My brother was very low with malerial fever and jaundice. I persuaded him to try Electric Bitters, and he was soon much better, but continued their use until he was wholly cured. I am sure Electric Bitters saved his life." This remedy expels maleria, kills disease germs and purifies the blood; aids digestion, regulates liver, kidneys and bowels, cures constipation, dyspepsia, nervous diseases, Kidney troubles, female complaints; gives perfect health. PONTIAC TO FLINT

Electric Railroad Has Been Held Up—Now a Sure Go.

Pontiac, Mich., Sept. 6.—As a result of the failure of the Seventh National Bank of New York some time ago, the deal being engineered by Samuel W. Smith. J. E. Sawyer and others to build an electric line between this city and Flint nearly fell through. For a time it seemed to be held up indefinitely, but the promoters have received information from eastern capitalists that the road is undoubtedly a sure thing. Very little work has been done on the road lately, especially at this end of the route, and for a time operations were suspended. A portion of the grading has been completed near Waterford and Clarkston, but before the job was finished the promoters were compelled to suspend operations on account of cold weather. At that time it was given out that work would be begun as soon as the weather warmed up, but the promoters fell considerably shy of the mark in making this assertion.

A TRAGIC DEATH.

Woman Stricken With Heart Disease, Dies in Her Chair.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 6.—When Wm. Kennell left his little cottage at 351½ Fort street east and went to his night's work, he left his wife standing in the open doorway with an evening paper in her hand. When he returned at 7:15 in the morning he found the paper still clutched in her hand, for she was dead and sitting upright upon the couch.

Coroner Forth was called and found death due to heart failure. Mrs. Kennell had been afflicted with heart trouble for some time. She was 41 years of age.

Resort for Sneezers.

Marquette, Mich., Sept. 6.—At the annual business meeting of the Western Hay Fever association these officers were elected: President, W. A. Roe; first vice-president, G. G. Gadson; secretary and treasurer, M. D. Goodman, and master of location and transportation, T. W. Cosgrove. Fully 1,000 sufferers are in the city, which is becoming famous as a resort for sneezers.

Rapid R. R. Collision.

Port Huron, Mich., Sept. 6.—A baggage car and an accommodation car on the Rapid Railway collided yesterday at Dunford & Alverson's drydock, and Joseph Forron of Detroit had his right leg broken. Several others had right leg broken. Several others were slightly injured.

Music Cured Her.

Denver, Sept. 6.—Miss Elizabeth Damme, the demented musician who, prior to her loss of reason, acquired fame on two continents, is on the road to recovery in the Arapahoe county hospital through the chance visit of a musician who, in an adjoining room, rendered several airs from "The Bohemian Girl." From that time dated her recovery and today the talented young German cellist rendered the entire opera on her favorite instrument. The doctors are giving her case close scrutiny, as they cannot understand why, after a year's incarceration, the spark of reason should be rekindled in such a strange manner.

Killed Herself Before Guests.

New York, Sept. 6.—The climax to a dinner party given by Mr. and Mrs. Albert E. Peters, at their home in this city, came last night when Mrs. Peters deliberately walked to the sideboard, filled a glass with carbolic acid and, facing her guests, drained the glass. Her action, it is said, was brought about by a reproof from her husband before the rest of the party. After she had drunk the poison and physicians were called, Mrs. Peters, who was only 26 years of age, begged the doctors to save her life. Everything possible was done, but she died some hours afterward.

To Defraud Fire Insurance Cos.

Chicago, Sept. 6.—The fire which threatened Tuesday night to destroy the building in which the Orpheon theater is located was started by Anton J. Kalkus, proprietor of a tailor shop in the building. Kalkus has made a confession that he set the building on fire to defraud the Agricultural Insurance Co. of Watertown, N. Y., out of insurance which he carried. According to the officers to whom the confession was made, Kalkus hoped to take advantage of a legal fight over possession of the theater to ward off suspicion from himself.

The Captain Was Sober.

Victoria, B. C., Sept. 6.—A number of witnesses were examined before the commission inquiring into the loss of the Islander. A majority denied the reports that the captain and pilot were intoxicated. Edgar Ashley, fireman, told of closing the water-tight bulkhead door. Capt. Troup testified regarding changes in the Islander's bunkers, the bulkhead water-tight door having been placed lower down to allow of carrying coal below.

Had to Summon Help.

Jefferson, Wis., Sept. 6.—Fire which broke out in the plant of the Wisconsin Manufacturing Co. and which threatened to destroy the whole town was subdued last evening with a loss aggregating between $50,000 and $60,000, which is only partially covered by insurance. The Wisconsin Manufacturing Co.'s loss is estimated at between $40,000 and $50,000; insured for $9,500. Help had to be summoned from several surrounding towns.

Lake Morat, in Switzerland, has the curious property of turning red every ten years owing to the presence of certain aquatic plants which are not known in any other lake in the world.

A Night of Terror.

"Awful anxiety was felt for the widow of the brave General Burnham of Machias, Me., when the doctors said she would die from Pneumonia before morning" writes Mrs. S. H. Lincoln, who attended her that awful night, but she begged for Dr. King's New Discovery, which had more than once saved her life and cured her of consumption. After taking, she slept all night. Further use entirely cured her." This marvellous medicine is guaranteed to cure all throat, chest and lung diseases. Only 50 cents and $1.00. Trial bottles free at C. A. Wright's drug store.

Ten Years' Trial

The Story of a Soldier's Struggle

By Brigadier General Charles King

Copyright, 1901, by Charles King

CHAPTER XV.

In the valley of the south Cheyenne and close to the rugged cliffs of the Black Hills a summer camp had been pitched, and nearly a thousand troops were under canvas. After four months of bitter weather and experiences guarding thousands of morose, sullen savages, cowed into subjection after their fiery outbreak, old "Cat" and his troopers were reveling in the poetry of soldiers' life in the field, and Melville, with two of the batteries, was keeping them company. They were far enough from the agencies to be free from daily contact with begging, bothersome Indians and near enough to the railway to have daily supplies from the east. Mrs. Cat had taken a notion that she should of all things enjoy a summer under canvas, and even the assurance that it meant ruin to the complexion did not deter certain regimental beauties from following her example. "Cat" would have said no at the outset had he seen what it might lead to, but he didn't, and if he had would probably have been overruled, Mrs. Cat being a woman of much mettle in all matters of domestic economy. She came, had an extra hospital tent pitched and established her little court. Several experienced cavalry women speedily followed and were soon snugly and happily bestowed in camp, the tents of the married officers being set at the northwest end of the mesa, close under the bold pine bluffs, and in June, when it was fully determined that the summer should be spent there by the field command, Melville took a week's leave, a run to Pawnee, and returned with Mrs. Melville, Miss Grahame and the children, a proceeding that gave much joy to Messrs. Woodrow and Santley of the gunners and to Captain Channing and certain other cavalry bachelors, for Ethel Grahame had won the honest admiration of all the men she knew, Channing and Santley especially.

Nathan's battery was with the command, but Nathan was not. The doctors had declared a summer at the seashore indispensable in the case of Mrs. Nathan, and the captain applied for three months' leave. He and his guns had not been exposed to any extent during the brief and bloody campaign that followed the outbreak of the Sioux, but Melville and "Cat" seemed to think the battery could spare him. It left Torrance in command, a far better soldier, despite his snobbish qualities. And, though the department commander made a wry face and the division general sniffed suggestively as he tossed the application to his chief of staff, the leave was granted. The summer opened gloriously. Squadron and battery drills went on each morning in splendid shape on the broad, level flats adjacent to the stream, and shooting, fishing and picnic parties were of frequent occurrence in the hills. "Cat" entertained prominent western statesmen and railway officials once or twice in June and was not always happy in so doing, for more than once or twice they touched on dangerous ground, and if there was a topic on which "Cat" was touchy now it was that of Eric Langdon—Langdon, whom he had practically kicked out of Kansas City only to see him become a hero in Nebraska.

In one sense the year had done its best for Langdon. He had become the idol of a large class of the population, but that, unless a man have political aspirations, is not of intrinsic or practical value and, furthermore, is rarely of long duration. The populace needs new sensations. Shot through the leg in the dash to the rescue of the train, he had finally fainted from loss of blood while rescued and rescuers were embracing and shouting and was found unconscious and well nigh dead lying in a ravine full quarter of a mile up the track, beyond the train, to which point he seemed to have followed, fighting, as though to assure himself the Indians contemplated no return attack. Frontier surgery is expert in gunshot wounds, it having little else to deal with, and rude appliances kept body and soul together until the coming of experts with the troop train from Omaha.

Later, while the soldiery went on to round up the renegade Indians, Langdon was taken back to Brentwood and nursed and coddled for long weeks. The regulars came in time for a stiff winter fight with the Sioux, but the ranch and railway people would hear of only one hero, Eric Langdon. The new manager of the Big Horn called to see him and thank him in the name of the road. The road was full of a scheme to have him legislated back into the army, and a bill to that effect was actually introduced. Langdon said it was time wasted, but Nebraska senators and representatives were confident. It was at least a good thing to push along, as it would keep him from turning up as a possible congressional candidate himself. Sitting about the campfires on long winter evenings and reading the local papers, there was no end of chaff and fun among the regulars over that possibility. The train and station hands all along the Big Horn and Seattle, both, seemed to have forgotten their grievance of the year gone by and would shout for Langdon at the faintest mention of his name. Two papers, "disgruntled," to use their own English, with their representative and to bother him probably as much as to boom Langdon openly advocated placing Eric in nomination, whereat Rodney May and Woodrow chuckled with joy as Channing drawled out an inquiry of Nathan, "How would it do to have Langdon on the house military committee, for instance?" whereat Nathan scowled, but said naught that was audible.

There was a man, not in the army, who took the possibility more seriously, and that was Langdon's friend and benefactor, Cresswell, who, as had been said, had aspirations of his own. There is little doubt that had an election been possible that winter and the ex-officer a candidate Langdon would have stood quite a chance. But by the time he was hobbling about on crutches, in March, the furore had subsided. Cresswell, a southerner, still raged in his heart over the assault of which he had been the victim. It was not the physical suffering, but the indignity, that rankled, and he had not ceased his efforts through detectives to ferret out the guilty parties, but with little luck. Certain men once prominent among the railway hands had left the state, but no one knew just why or whither.

Langdon, on the contrary, had apparently lived down his wrath. "Fighting mad," as the conductor declared to Lieutenant Hunt, he certainly was until the peril that menaced the settlers and involved the trainload of helpless people dwarfed all personal consideration and turned his powers to their account. His story of the abduction was very brief and straight. Returning from the armory, he had let himself in at the front door of the office, closed it after him and almost instantly felt himself grappled by powerful arms. Gruff voices warned him that a sound meant death when sound was impossible, for a huge, coarse hand was over his mouth, to be replaced in an instant by a chloroformed sponge and silken handkerchief. When consciousness returned, he was in a wagon, blindfolded, bound and gagged, then was hoisted into an empty freight car and trundled miles away through the night. His gag was removed as soon as the train went on, and he was given water, was assured that no harm was intended—"the boys" thought he'd better take a little trip up the country while business was dull in Brentwood, and they made him comfortable with blankets and pillows despite the jolting of the clumsy car. At dawn he was taken from the train and driven miles across country in another wagon to a ranch where people treated him with every care and kindness, but he was kept under lock and key until the night of the 30th, when there were sounds of weeping and dismay in an adjoining room, and he learned that there was a terrible raid by the Sioux "up the road." And then, fast as horses could bring them, came three railway men—not his abductors, for two of these were men he had known in the Brentwood yards, and the voices were different. They told him of the dreadful deeds at Rosebud and the plight of the train; told him the troops were coming, that the strike was done and that all matters connected with it and damages of every kind were to be settled later. The question was would he resume duty at once with his company and head them to the rescue, leaving everything else to be settled later, if they would take him to the railway. He accepted instantly—there was nothing else to do—and the whole country knew the rest.

Since then the strike seemed to be a dropped matter. The men would not renew, nor the officials reopen it, both sides being content to ignore it, the officials claiming that the hands had sufficiently punished themselves and the hands professing to believe that the road was preparing to accord them the terms demanded. To the wrath of Cresswell and doubtless of other lawyers averse to all settlements out of court no proceedings were instituted. The road dealt liberally with the families of employees who had suffered by the Sioux outbreak and had sent Langdon to the best hospital in the state to be most skillfully and tenderly cared for. There he pursued his studies in the days of his convalescence and by March was once again at Brentwood, occupying his old room over Cresswell's office and supervising from a seat twice a week the drill of the rifles, now at last in full command, for the governor signed that commission before ever the rifles got back from the scene of their glory. Eric was Captain Langdon now and no mistake.

Mr. Burleigh stopped to see him the week he hobbled out on crutches and said that the road had decided to send Betts elsewhere and to tender Langdon his old place. Langdon said he had no objections to their sending Betts to Halifax if they wished, but declined the position.

"You still resent their firing you on account of that safe business, I suppose," said Burleigh in his attractive western way.

"I resent their treatment of me at that time on every account," was the answer. "You well know that others than I had the combination, yet they were retained and one of them promoted."

Burleigh winced. Of course he knew it, but Betts was close to the management by marriage and his son a pet of the connecting link. It was their story and that of the station master at Gunnison that hardened the hearts of the management against Langdon. Now he would not return to their employ. He stuck manfully to his studies in Cresswell's office, was able to pitch his crutch down cellar in April and to drill his men in the public square under the gleam of the electric lights during the bright evenings in May, was at the depot to see Melville and the family the lovely June morning when they went through en route to the hills, and a week later was surprised by a letter from the major begging that he should come up for a visit, a week's rest, fishing and camping.

There were several reasons why Langdon disliked to go. First, there was "Cat," the cavalry colonel who had brought him to trial at Pawnee. "Cat" would be glad to see him, wrote Melville, but would Langdon be glad to see "Cat?" No! Langdon knew he would not. Melville didn't tell the particulars of his conference with "Cat," without whose full knowledge and consent of course he would not ask Langdon to be his guest, and "Cat" did not tell Melville the real reasons of his assent. But the way in which his civilian guests spoke of Langdon had set the colonel to thinking. It had not previously occurred to him that just as certificates of long and faithful service in the army are of little aid in the rush for civil employment, so is army condemnation of little harm when a man displays the traits the people want. Mr. Burleigh lacked finesse and tact. He was coarse, but farsighted, and he told "Cat" that the road would have given Langdon a good salary to buy him back, but he would not be bought. "That fellow will be in congress first thing they know, and he won't be led by the nose." "Cat" still had an eye on that longed for star, and suppose now that Langdon should get there and be assigned to the military committee, just how much help could "Cat" look for at his hands?

Origin of the Word "Canada."

On April 20, 1634, Jacques Cartier sailed from St. Malo, Brittany, with two ships and 61 men, for Labrador, skirted Newfoundland, named Chaleur bay, crossed the eastern end of Anticosti and then headed for France again. The next year Cartier returned with three ships, thought he saw in the St. Lawrence the wished for passage to India and was only undeceived by the freshness of the water on reaching the mouth of the Saguenay. Then was revealed the majestic size of the continent, for, with the exception of the Amazon and the Orinoco, no American river gives one such a sense of power and grandeur.

As the Frenchmen inquired the names of the Indian villages along the banks they were answered "Canada," a Mohawk word meaning village, but which was applied by the Frenchmen to the country.

Comment on President's Speech.

London, Sept. 6.—President McKinley's speech at the Pan-American exposition in Buffalo is the theme of much comment in London papers today. "It will excite throughout Europe," says the Standard, "as keen interest as it will arouse in the western continent. It is the utterance of a man who feels that he is at the head of a great nation with vast ambitions and a new born consciousness of strength."

A Bird With Four Feet.

This little creature, still to be found in South America, is a relic of bygone ages. It is known as the crested hoatzin, and the adult bird is about as big as a peacock.

The young birds, when hatched, have four legs, the front pair being reptilian in character, and have strong claws. As they grow older those claws fall off, the legs become fattened, feathers grow on them, and they develop into wings.

These nestlings are the nearest approach to a reptile that can be found among birds, and they can climb and dive and swim with great facility.

Read What Grateful Patients Say

Mrs Martha Keller, of Cohoctah township, Livingston county who has been seriously afflicted with a complication of diseases for years, voluntarily makes the following statement. She says: I had been a great sufferer with catarrh of the stomach, heart failure and nervous debility. I would have peculiar nervous spells come over me and I would faint away; have been carried in the house more than once in that condition. My heart and stomach troubled me terribly all the time, having tried a number of doctors without receiving any permanent relief. I saw the advertisement of Dr. Walker in the papers, also hearing of the doctor's many cures. I decided to call at the hotel and see him. I at once placed myself under Dr Walker's treatment. I improved right along and am now happy to say that all of the above symptoms have left me. To have my stomach, heart and nerves feel natural once more causes me to feel very grateful. I most cheerfully recommended the doctor to all afflicted ones. Signed MRS. MARTHA KELLEL.

Mrs. Chas. Maltby, of Milan, Mich., says: I was taken with Lagrippe last winter; soon after rheumatism set in, affecting my whole system; my sufferings at times were intense and intense and in a short time I had become so emaciated that I was a mere skeleton and only by the aid of crutches could I go around at all. I took less than three months treatment of Dr. Walker, who completely restored me to health.
CHAS. MALTBY.

Mr. James B. Gilday, a well known citizen, of Yargerville, Mich., says: "I had suffered with catarrh of the head, throat and bronchial tubes for several years. I had treated with several doctors and also tried the best patent medicines advertised, but found no relief until I consulted Dr. W. C. Walker, of Detroit, who makes regular visits to Monroe. The doctor's treatment produced most satisfactory results. Those afflicted with chronic diseases should not lose hope but go to Dr. W. C. Walker. I can cheerfully recommend the doctor as a thorough gentleman and master of his profession. This statement is voluntary on my part, given for the benefit of those afflicted as I was."
JAMES B. GILDAY.
Yargerville. Monroe County, Mich. June 28. 1901.

Sick all his Life. Read the statement of another well known citizen of Monroe county: Mr. W. W. Murphy, of Samaria, who had been almost a constant sufferer all his life from stomach and liver complications. He says: "I have found Dr. W. C. Walker's treatment a great help to me. I was troubled with sick headache often, as long as I can remember; am now 44 years of age. I treated with the doctor several months and have not had one attack of sick headache since I began his treatment. Had tried everything I could hear of before, with very little benefit. I heartily recommend Dr. Walker."
W. W. MURPHY

David Coryell.

In memory of Brother David Coryell who departed this life July 5, 1901, in the seventy-fourth year of his age. He had been a great sufferer for several years but bore his sufferings with Christian patience and fortitude, having been a Christian for more than half a century, having his church home all these years with the Christian church of East Ridgeway, Lenawee county, Mich. He held the office of deacon for many years and there was no reason why he should not hear the "well done good and faithful servant" from not only his Lord but from the church. How blessed the righteous when he dies."

He leaves behind a very devoted wife, who through all his sufferings, was faithfully by his side, tenderly caring for him, also three daughters, three brothers and two sisters, only waiting for their summons to depart to be with him and others gone before.

Rest from thy labor, thy mission is ended,
Worn with the care and the dust of the road,
Soiled are thy garments, he'll robe thee most splendid.
And crown thee a king in his blessed abode.
Rest from thy labor, the night is so dreary,
And clouds of thick darkness o'er shadow thy way,
Sweet is the rest that he gives to the weary,
Asleep in His arms till the dawning of day.
Rest from thy labor, we cannot forget thee,
Deep in our bosom of the blessed we greet thee,
The land we are waiting and watching to see.
Rest from thy labor, we'll join thee to-morrow.
Our parting, though painful, is but for a day,
Bidding a long farewell to our sorrow,
We'll join all the ransomed in royal array.

WM. L. CORYELL.

CENTURY POST CO

Company is now a Tecumseh Factory.

IT WILL BE MOVED HERE

As soon as Possible. Tecumseh Men are now its Officers.

Last Friday afternoon Tecumseh men paid the money to the Adrian stockholders of the Century Post Company and took their stock. The concern is now Tecumseh's affair and will be moved here as soon as the rush of orders will permit.

The Century Post Co. looks to be one of the best concerns ever brought to Tecumseh. Rural mail routes are in their infancy. Thousands more are sure to be started. The Century Post Co. box has been approved by "Uncle Sam" and the company has more orders than it can fill for some time to come.

Thirty men are now employed and more will be added as soon as the machinery is moved and the Tecumseh quarters, Heesen Bros. & Co.'s buildings near the Lake Shore station, are occupied. It will not be many weeks before this shop will more than take the place of the carshops and with a better, steadier class of help.

The present officers of the company are: President, D. L. Whitenack; secretary and treasurer, R. A. Heesen; and a board of directors, consisting of officers of the company, A. M. Keeney, manager, Geo. U. Smith and E. L. Baker. Stockholders in the concern may be considered lucky people, for it has many orders and is making money.

A PRETTY YARN

Spun by the Detroit Tribune about

NORMAN MATTESON,

Who Was Supposed to be dead but is now Living and in Good Health.

Dairyman Mattison, of Tecumseh, was seized with a severe illness last week, caused, it is believed, by an overdose of strychnine. All that it was possible to do for him was done, but in a short time it was announced that he was no more. The sad event cast a gloom over the community and his many friends and patrons testified the love and esteem in which the deceased was held by the beautiful flowers that were sent to deck his coffin. For these were evidence that, though gone, he was not forgotten,—tender tokens for which the members of the Mattison family were extremely grateful, but none of them more so, perhaps, than Mattison himself, whose bewildered gaze wandered through the bower of green house offerings, while his nose sniffed the redolence of the roses, and from the cot where his pale form was stretched he murmered in a voice that was hushed forever that they were "devlish kind" who sent them, and that it was strange that those who took his milk should have outlived him.

At this point he paused to swallow a frog in his throat. Wherever there is a milkman there are most always frogs. They usually take the same element. Mattison says he don't believe there was ever another man who enjoyed the rapture of ravishing his eye and regaling his nose with the beauties and fragrance of his own funeral flowers and to his dying day he will never forget it. Neither will the neighbors who sent the pretty posies, on the supposition that the dairyman had "croaked."

A BIG WEDDING FEE.

The Generous Uses to Which Henry Ward Beecher Put It.

In his "Eccentricities of Genius" Major Pond says that often while traveling Henry Ward Beecher improved his time by having what he called "a general housecleaning" of his pockets, which would get loaded up with letters and papers until they could hold no more, when he would clear them out and destroy such papers as were worthless.

On one occasion Beecher happened to put his hand in the watch pocket of his pantaloons and found there a little envelope which he opened. When he saw its contents, he called Major Pond to sit beside him and remarked: "You remember the evening I married C. P. Huntington. I was so much interested in the subject that I forgot he handed me a little envelope as he went out of the door. I put it in the watch pocket of my pantaloons and never thought of it again until just now, and here it is, four $1,000 bills. Now," he said, "don't tell any one about it, and we will have a good time and make some happiness with this money. We will just consider that we found it."

And so in a day or two Mr. Beecher went with Major Pond to look at a cargo of fine oriental rugs, many of which he purchased and sent to different friends, and afterward he spent what remained of the money for coin silver lamps, unmounted gems and various pieces of bric-a-brac, all of which he gave away until he had used up the entire $4,000 "in making happiness among those whom he loved."

After Mr. Beecher's death the major related to Mr. Huntington the incident of this discovery of the four $1,000 bills, and the railway magnate observed: "I should never have given them to him. It was all wrong. I made a mistake. Money never did him any good."

The Questions of Clarence.

"Well, Clarence, what is it?" asked the boy's papa.

"I didn't say anything, papa," replied Clarence.

"I know you didn't, but it is fully five minutes since you asked a question, and I know from experience that another is due about this time."

"Well, papa, what are all those big United States flags made of?" asked the boy.

"Some of them are made of silk, Clarence, but by far the greater number are made of bunting."

"And, papa?"

"Well, Clarence?"

"Are the little flags made of baby bunting?"—Pittsburg Commercial-Gazette.

WHAT'S IN A NAME.

It's a good old saying, and a true one too, "Know all men by their works." The public has been imposed on so many times by unscrupulous claims made for selfish means of profit, they look for something more substantial: they ask for deeds. The little conqueror has earned the reputation made in Michigan and no imposter can steal it. From north to south, from east to west, in every city, town and hamlet in the state, people stand ready to testify to merit. Gratitude for comfort brought to thousands of homes brings many emphatic rejoicings and words of praise, the like of which has not been equaled in modern times. Is it a wonder the name Doan is a familiar one in every household? Is it surprising the public appreciate Doan's Kidney Pills and will not be led astray by the ingenious efforts of would be competitors? A Detroit citizen tells here why the name of Doan is dear to him:

Mr. R. N. Elliott, of 143 High street, says: "My knowledge of Doan's Kidney Pills dates back to five years ago. I was then living in the town where Dr. Doan was located. I was tortured with kidney troubles and inflammatory rheumatism. The doctor prescribed the pills for me which have since become so justly famous. Their use quickly eliminated the uric acid from my system and with its departure came the cure of the rheumatism and the end of the kidney troubles. It took but a few boxes to accomplish this end and I feel that I owe Dr. Doan an everlasting debt of gratitude for prescribing such a valuable remedy. I have taken great pleasure in recommending this medicine to a number of my friends. I always keep a box of these pills on hand so that should I take a severe cold and feel that it is settling on my kidneys a few doses of Doan's Kidney Pills relieves all apprehension."

Doan's Kidney Pills are sold by all dealers. Price 50 cents per box. Mailed on receipt of price by Foster—Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name Doan and take no other.

Extremes in Iceland.

In Iceland nature seems to have deserted all her ordinary operations and to have worked only in combining the most terrific extremes which her powers can command. Nor is she yet silent. After the lapse of ages the fire of the volcano still bursts out among the regions of eternal snow, and the impetuous thundering of the geysers continues to disturb the stillness of the surrounding solitude.

A Gate Covered With Shoes.

The principal gateway at Allahabad is thickly studded with horseshoes of every size and make. There are hundreds of them nailed all over the great gates, doubtless the offering of many a wayfarer who has long since finished his earthly pilgrimage. The sacred gates of Somnath, in the fort of Agra, are similarly adorned.

A Little Known Fact

How it is Done.

The first object in life with the American people is to "get rich;" the second, how to regain good health. The first can be obtained by energy, honesty and saving; the second, (good health) by using Green's August Flower. Should you be a despondent sufferer from any of the effects of Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Appendicitis, Indigestion, etc., such as Sick Headache, Palpitation of the Heart, Sour Stomach, Habitual Costiveness, Dizziness of the Head, Nervous Prostration, Low Spirits, etc., you need not suffer another day. Two doses of the well known August Flower will relieve you at once. Go to John J. Orr and get a sample bottle free. Regular size, 75 cts. Get Green's Prize Almanac.

BUTCHERS ARE IMMUNE.

Meat Dealers, It Is Said, Never Die of Consumption.

"Butchers never die of consumption." The big man with his sleeves rolled up, wielding the cleaver at the block, said this as he threw a beefsteak on the scale.

It sounded more like a trade superstition than a fact, but so far as diligent inquiry has been able to discover it is true, although not generally known outside of the meat chopping craft.

Butchers are no longer lived than men in other walks of life. They are subject to all the other ills that human flesh is heir to, but consumption they do not have. So far as a reporter was able to learn not a single case is on record of a butcher in this city being afflicted with the incurable wasting of the lungs which claims its hundreds of thousands of victims annually.

The fact is well known among butchers and has been often the subject of their comment, although none of them can give a reason for it.

"No," said a man who has swung sides and rounds in Washington market for the last 20 years; "I have had rheumatism and typhoid fever and lots of other things, but nothing has ever been out of gear with my lungs, and the same is true of every other butcher in this town. I know nearly all of them, and I never heard of one of them having consumption. They don't drink blood or take any especially good care of themselves either. I don't know why it should be so unless it's because the continual inhaling of an atmosphere of fresh meat is strengthening.

"I have often thought when hearing of consumptives going to Colorado and Egypt that I know of a climate nearer home that would do the business just as well. If they would stay in this stall for awhile and swing meat, they would get well quite as quickly as they would on the top of Pike's peak."—New York Mail and Express.

A Bit of Evarts' Wit.

When William M. Evarts was secretary of state in President Hayes' cabinet, he said in an after-dinner speech at Omaha: "I like the west. I like her self made men. And the more I travel west, the more I meet with her public men, the more I am satisfied of the truthfulness of the Bible statement that the wise men came from the east!"

Coleridge's Classification of Readers.

Coleridge says: "Readers may be divided into four classes—first, sponges, who absorb all they read and return it early in the same state, only a little dirty; second, sand glasses, who retain nothing and are content to get through a book for the sake of getting through the time; third, strain bags, who retain merely the dregs of what they read; fourth, mogul diamonds, equally rare and valuable, who profit by what they read and enable others to profit by it also."

INCORPORATED 1900

MOTTOES OF STATES.

HOW MANY OF THEM, WITH THEIR MEANINGS, DO YOU KNOW?

The Great Seal of the United States Was Designed by an Englishman, Who Also Suggested the Motto Adopted, "E Pluribus Unum."

If you desire to have fun with a learned acquaintance, ask him simple questions about his country, its history, financial condition, political divisions, geographical lines, climatology, topography, etc. Questions that any schoolboy can answer Dr. Knowall will stumble clumsily over, often getting a bad fall. There is one question that I have never heard any one answer—namely, "What are the mottoes of the several states of the Union and their meaning?" A clever man may name that of his own state and guess at those of three or four of the more important sister states, but he is unlikely to know the meanings of any that are in the original Latin. Try some able professor in a crowd and see him flounder.

Ask the professor if he knows that the great seal of the United States was designed by an Englishman, Sir John Prestwich, who also suggested the motto, "E Pluribus Unum?" Our ablest men had failed to propose anything acceptable, Franklin, Jefferson, Adams, Lovell, Scott, Houston and others wasting nearly four years on the task. Franklin proposed Moses dividing the Red sea with this motto, "Rebellion to Tyrants is Obedience to God;" Adams proposed the choice of Hercules and Jefferson the children of Israel in the wilderness. Doesn't it seem funny? Some of the suggested mottoes were "Bello vel Pace" (For War or Peace), "Semper" (Forever), "Deo Favente" (With God's Favor), "Virtus Sola Invicta" (Virtue Alone Invincible), etc. After six years the Englishman's device was adopted, and it yet remains the arms of the United States.

If the professor is familiar with the obverse of the great seal, ask him what he has to say of the reverse, and the chances are 100 to 1 that he cannot recollect the unfinished pyramid, the eye in the triangle, the glory proper, the motto over the eye, "Annuit Cœptis" (God Has Favored the Undertaking), and that under all, "Novus Ordo Seculorum" (A New Series of Ages). The obverse of the great seal, with its splendid eagle, the bundle of arrows, the olive branch, the 13 stripes, the 13 stars, the glory breaking from the clouds and the "E Pluribus Unum," is magnificently American, but the pyramid, the desert, the forbidding Egyptian sky and the eye in the triangle on the reverse are simply barbarous.

The great seal of the Confederacy by a strange arbitrament of fate was never used. It was made in England and reached Richmond about the time of its evacuation by the armies of the lost cause and the Confederate government. Its motto was "Deo Vindice" (God Maintains). The seal is a handsome silver die about three inches in diameter, bearing an equestrian portrait of Washington (after the statue in Richmond), surrounded with a wreath composed of cotton, tobacco sugar cane, corn, wheat and rice—the principal products of the Confederate states. It cost in England about $600, with press, wafers, seal papers, wax, silk cords, etc. It was presented to the state of South Carolina about 1887 and is kept in the office of the secretary of state.

Ask the professor if he remembers that Minnesota, founded by Americans, is the only state in the Union that has a French motto. The one originally selected and ordered engraved was Latin, but the die was spoiled and the French substitute was adopted, "L'Etoile du Nord" (The Star of the North). Does the professor recall that Montana is the only state with a Spanish motto? Strange that fur traders should have adopted "Oro y Plata" (Gold and Silver). If you say that one state has a Greek motto, he probably will do some pretty hard thinking before answering that it is California. "Eureka" is believed to be Greek for "I have found." The only Italian motto belongs to Maryland, and it originally belonged to the Calvert family, "Fatti Maschi, Parole Femine" (Deeds Are Males, Words Females). To be a trifle plainer, "Manly Deeds, Womanly Words." Ask the professor if he knows that Washington is the only state with an Indian motto. "Al-Ki" is pure Chinook for by and by, in the future or hereafter.—Exchange.

Cured.

"No," said the man in the mackintosh, "my wife doesn't give away any of my old clothes or sell them to the ragman any more. I cured that habit effectually once."

"How was that?" they asked him.

"When I found that she had disposed of a coat I hadn't worn for several weeks, I told her there was a letter in it she had given me to mail the last time I had it on. And that was no lie either," he added with deep satisfaction.—Chicago Tribune

Every woman loves to think of the time when a soft little body, all her own, will nestle in her bosom, fully satisfying the yearning which lies in the heart of every good woman. But yet there is a black cloud hovering about the pretty picture in her mind which fills her with terror. The dread of childbirth takes away much of the joy of motherhood. And yet it need not be so. For sometime there has been upon the market, well-known and recommended by physicians, a liniment called which makes childbirth as simple and easy as nature intended it. It is a strengthening, penetrating liniment, which the skin readily absorbs. It gives the muscles elasticity and vigor, prevents sore breasts, morning sickness and the loss of the girlish figure.

An intelligent mother in Butler, Pa., says: "Were I to need Mother's Friend again, I would obtain 9 bottles if I had to pay $5 per bottle for it."

Deserted.

Jamestown, Va., where the English gained their first foothold in the new world in 1607, was burned in 1676. To-day nobody lives there. Little remains to mark the site except a crumbling church tower, dilapidated gravestones and remnants of the foundations of a few houses.—Ladies' Home Journal.

How To Gain Flesh

Persons have been known to gain a pound a day by taking an ounce of SCOTT'S EMULSION. It is strange, but it often happens.

Somehow the ounce produces the pound; it seems to start the digestive machinery going properly, so that the patient is able to digest and absorb his ordinary food, which he could not do before, and that is the way the gain is made.

A certain amount of flesh is necessary for health; if you have not got it you can get it by taking

You will find it just as useful in summer as in winter, and if you are thriving upon it don't stop because the weather is warm.

Stock Market Tips.

Does it ever occur to those who follow journalistic tips on the stock market that they are written by men who find it worth their while to follow an arduous and moderately remunerated profession and that therefore the tipster obviously cannot trust to his tips for a livelihood?

Is it conceivable that any one whose judgment of the movements of securities was sufficiently trustworthy to make even the majority of his shots bullseyes would waste his time by compiling paragraphs for newspapers? Would he not rather spend half an hour or so in the morning at the end of a telephone instructing his broker to buy and sell and devote the rest of his day to the graceful consumption of the boundless fortune that his knowledge and acumen would, ex hypothesi, inevitably provide?

And tips from stockbrokers come under the same suspicion, for it is not reasonable to suppose that one who really had tips worth following in his possession would utilize them as baits for clients who reward his efforts with a beggarly half crown per cent.—Cornhill.

Deer Live to a Great Age.

Romance has played a prominent part with regard to the longevity of deer. What says the highland adage?

Thrice the age of a dog is that of a horse,
Thrice the age of a horse is that of a man,
Thrice the age of a man is that of a deer,
Thrice the age of a deer is that of an eagle,
Thrice the age of an eagle is that of an oak tree.

This is to assign the deer a period of more than 200 years, and the estimate is supported by many highly circumstantial stories. Thus Captain McDonald of Tulloch, who died in 1776, aged 86 years, is said to have known the white hind of Loch Trieg for 50 years, his father for a like period before him and his grandfather for 60 years before him. So in 1826 MacDonald of Glengarry is reported to have killed a stag which bore a mark on the left ear identical with that made on all the calves he could catch by Ewen-MacIan-Og, who had been dead 150 years. Analogous stories, it may be noted, are told in countries on the continent of Europe, where deer are to be found in any number.—Chambers' Journal.

PROMISED RECOVERY

PRESIDENT PASSED A FAVORABLE SABBATH.

TOOK FOOD AND HAD A NATURAL SLEEP.

THE DANGEROUS PERIOD IS YET TO COME.

PHYSICIANS SAY 24 HOURS MORE OF SUSPENSE.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 9.—The president's mind was perfectly clear during the time that he was awake Sunday. For the first time he enjoyed natural sleep. While he was still more or less under the influence of the anaesthetic his slumber was restless and disturbed. Yesterday between 9 and 10 o'clock he had the solace of natural slumber for about four hours, and the physicians stated unofficially that his sleep had been "quiet and reposeful" and had helped the sufferer a great deal. For the first time nourishment was administered. It was in liquid form and was injected hypodermically to avoid the possibility of irritating the walls of the stomach. The exterior wound was dressed and is progressing satisfactorily. All day the members of the cabinet and others associated with the president in public life came solicitously and went away almost jubilantly, all reflecting the hopeful outlook at the Milburn house. Vice-President Roosevelt received the earlier bulletins, and after going to church hurried to the residence. There he was joined by Senator Hanna. They came away together and gave expression to the most confident and encouraging sentiments. The vice-president not only shared the cheerful feeling, but was extremely optimistic. Both gentlemen took occasion to denounce in unmeasured terms the statements gaining circulation in some quarters that the doctors were not frank in their communications to the public. They maintained that the president's favorable condition was even understated by the physicians, through motives of conservatism, during the 72-hour period.

Later Secretary Cortelyou took occasion to emphasize this very point by issuing an official statement, assuring the public of the complete trustworthiness of the bulletins sent out by the physicians. Senator Hanna came again during the afternoon and was seldom far removed from the Milburn house. Secretary Root has taken up quarters next door and was in frequent consultation with those inside. He and Secretary Gage, Secretary Hitchcock and Atty.-Gen. Knox called together about noon and, indeed, there was no time during the day when some member of the cabinet was not in the house where his stricken chief lay. Even those most prominent in public life did not see him, as the doctors would not relax the ironclad rule they have laid down to prevent the least drain upon his energies and vitality. Those who came and went moved silently and reverently, receiving the latest statements from the doctors and departing.

Cabinet Members in Attendance.

All of the members of the cabinet are now here except Secretaries Hay and Long. The former telegraphed that he would start from Newbery, N. H., today probably in time to be here tonight. Secretary Long also telegraphed that he was coming, but did not specify the time. The cabinet officers felt it their duty to be here to meet any emergency. They are holding no formal meetings, although there are some matters of public business which they daily discuss informally, and the possible contingencies, should the president grow worse, are also thoroughly canvassed. They do not believe there is the most remote possibility that Vice-President Roosevelt will be called upon to exercise the functions of chief magistrate under the disability clause of the constitution while the president lives.

Vice-President Roosevelt would not hear of such a course. Still, in the event of grave international complications an emergency might occur, and the question has arisen in their minds as to who should proclaim the disability provided for by the constitution. That instrument is silent on the subject. There is no precedent to follow. During the protracted illness of President Garfield before his death Vice-President Arthur was not called upon to act. The consensus of opinion among the members of the cabinet is that should occasion arise they themselves would have to decide and proclaim the existence of the disability. The supreme court, they say, could not do so, as there would be no way in which the question could be raised before that tribunal.

The members of the cabinet are making their headquarters at the Buffalo club and there their interchanges take place. They are to remain here for the present and plans of departure are indefinite and even not thought of until the president is entirely out of danger. If he should pass the danger point, however, they will return at once to Washington.

Vice-President Roosevelt's attendance at the morning services of the First Presbyterian church gave occasion for a heartfelt expression of the sorrow universally felt over the calamity and the detestation of the assassin's methods. A fervid prayer by the pastor, Dr. Mitchell, invoked the sternest reprobation of anarchy and asked that the temples of public life be scourged of men willing to temporarize with the madness of anarchy.

Messages from All Nations.

The interest in the president's condition was such across the Canadian border that the Associated Press was asked to furnish a bulletin to be read in the churches in Quebec and Montreal, and many requests of a similar character came direct to Secretary Cortelyou from different parts of the United States. The messages of sympathy from all over the United States and all over the world, in fact, have fairly overwhelmed Secretary Cortelyou. Two more White House stenographers have been sent for, and upon their arrival, perhaps today, some of the more important messages will be made public. Almost every government will have been heard from, crowned heads of Europe sending personal messages. Among the latter are King Edward, Emperor William, the kings of Portugal, Italy and Sweden and the sultan of Turkey. President Loubet of the republic of France has also cabled his sympathy direct. One of the most touching messages thus far received was from Madame Labori, the wife of Maitre Labori, who defended Dreyfus in his famous trial at Rennes.

Mrs. McKinley continues to bear up bravely, and her fortitude under the circumstances is regarded as remarkable. One of her dearest and closest friends, Mrs. Rand of Washington, has arrived here and will probably remain with her during this trying period.

Secretary Cortelyou, in whose hands the management of everything seems to be, was able to take some rest yesterday for the first time since the tragedy. The great confidence which the president has in his secretary could not have been more strikingly illustrated than at the exposition hospital when he was about to be placed upon the operating table. The president realized that the sooner the operation was performed the better, and he was perfectly willing to submit himself to the knife. His only solicitude was as to the competency of the surgeons who were to perform the operation. Just before he was placed upon the table he called Secretary Cortelyou to him and asked whether the surgeons were all right. Mr. Cortelyou assured him that he had made inquiries and that they were reputed among the most skillful in the profession. The president accepted the assurances instantly and immediately announced that he was ready.

The members of the cabinet are doing everything in their power to prevent the sensational exploitation of Czolgosz, because he undoubtedly craves notoriety, and because his fellow anarchists throughout the country love it. They do not desire to place any stone in the path of the authorities who are laboring to unravel the plot, but if any plot existed, and all the machinery of the government secret service will be used to aid the state authorities in prosecution of their investigations. But by the direct request of Secretary Root, on behalf of his colleagues, the district attorney and the police, will not permit the prisoner to be seen or interviewed, nor will they discuss the methods or the results of their efforts to discover the originators of the plot. All that has leaked out from the jail shows that the prisoner is vain and boastful of his crime and would, if given an opportunity, fill the newspapers with columns of his vaporings.

AT the President's Church.

Washington, Sept. 9.—"The exigencies of life are such but no man living can count upon the continuance of existence for any length of time. Among these exigencies are disease, accident and the bullet of the assassin, such as we have heard of in the past 40 hours. That occurrence at Buffalo indicates that no man is safe from the shaft of death. It is very difficult to get away from it, and while I have ever been loyal to the law and have contended for its strict enforcement, I must say that the affair of 4 o'clock Friday has almost converted me into an advocate of lynch law. Surely there was no occasion, no reason, for that dreadful deed, and, whether the work of a sane man or a lunatic, there can be no justification for it."

The above extract from the sermon of Dr. H. R. Naylor, presiding elder of the Washington district, was the only direct reference made in the regular sermon preached at the Metropolitan M. E. church, which is the church President McKinley attends when in Washington. The sermon was brief and the service was converted into a gathering of sympathy for the president. Of the several prayers, all were supplications for the early restoration to health of the president, of praise for his personality and admonition to Mrs. McKinley to stand firm in this trying time.

Trustworthiness of Bulletins.

Buffalo, Sept. 9.—"The public will be kept fully advised of the actual condition of the president. Each bulletin is carefully and conservatively prepared, and is an authoritative statement of the most important features of the case at the hour it is issued. The people are entitled to the facts and shall have them.

"GEO. B. CORTELYOU,
"Sec. to the President."

This statement is intended to put at rest any idea that the official bulletins underestimate the conditions, and at the same time to give assurance that those with the president intend that the people shall have the facts.

PROFESIED HIS DEATH.

Cornet Player of an Opera Company is Wanted.

Mobile, Ala., Sept. 9.—Secret service agents interviewed former members of an opera company for the purpose of learning what they could about Antonio Maggio, a former cornet player of the company, who is alleged to have told members of the company last March that President McKinley would be assassinated before Oct. 1.

Leavenworth, Kan., Sept. 9.—Antonio is well known here. He was a member of a local band about eight months. His brother Frank is now employed in a local shop. The Maggios were born in Sicily. They came to America eight years ago and lived for several years in New Orleans. Antonio left here last January with an opera company and has not been heard from since. Frank [illegible] last heard from him in Silver City, N. M. Frank denied being a member of any secret societies.

CZOLGOSZ'S COMPANIONS.

Eleven of Them Booked in Chicago Recognized the Murderer.

Chicago, Sept. 9.—If any further proof were needed that Leon Czolgosz was the guest of Chicago anarchists shortly before he went to Buffalo on his murderous mission, it was supplied today by three of the prisoners at the Central police station. They identified a photograph of the murderous "red" as a picture of a man whom they saw at the home of Abraham Isaak, 515 [illegible] avenue, not longer ago than July 12.

The eleven men and women, who are avowed anarchists, were formally booked last night on the charge of conspiracy to commit murder. They will be taken before Justice Prindiville for a hearing. It is settled practically that the prosecution will ask for a continuance for 10 days, that the police may have more time for an investigation. This much was intimated by Capt. Colleran:

"I am not prepared to say that a conspiracy to kill President McKinley was formed in Chicago," he said. "The evidence in our possession has been turned over to the law department."

"I had a running sore on my leg for seven years," writes Mrs. Jas. Forest of Chippewa Falls, Wis., "and spent hundreds of dollars trying to get it healed. Two boxes of Banner Salve entirely cured it." Beware of substitutes. J. J. Orr.

Broken spirits—A brandy smash.

Ulcers, open or obstinate sores, scalds and piles, quickly cured by Banner Salve, the most healing medicine in the world. J. J. Orr.

Emma Goldman at Buffalo.

Buffalo, Sept 9.—Reported here that Emma Goldman, anarchist leader, was here last Monday and that she occupied a house a few doors from where Czolgosz lived. Superintendent Bull is said to have asked New York to arrest her. New York police are said to be investigating the case at request of Gov. Odell.

Watching the "Reds" Closely.

Philadelphia, Sept. 9.—Acting upon orders issued by Director of Public Safety English, the police visited every hall available for an anarchistic meeting yesterday and notified the persons in charge not to rent their rooms for any such meetings. It was reported that the local anarchists would hold a meeting at Industrial hall last night, but no attempt was made to open the hall. The police are keeping a close watch upon the known anarchists and their gathering places.

President's Condition Unchanged.

Milburn House, Buffalo, Sept. 9.—Harry Hamlin left the Milburn house at 3:30 a. m. and said: "There has been no change."

Milburn House, Buffalo, Sept. 9.—Abner McKinley, brother of the president, reached here at 12:20 a. m. He was admitted to the house at once.

Punish a Villifier.

Omaha, Neb., Sept. 9.—The congregation of the Presbyterian church of Fairmount, Neb., postponed its service Sunday morning until it had administered punishment to a villifier of President McKinley. A populist of the radical type expressed his view on the church veranda that McKinley had reaped the legitimate fruits of his encouragements of trusts and the money power. A crowd of young men thereupon ducked him in a neighboring pond and then rode him on a rail out into the country. He was dumped into a thicket and warned not to return. When the vigilants had returned from their task services were begun more than an hour later than usual.

Instant Death in Accident.

Pittsburg, Sept. 9.—Miss Jennie R. Ewing, head of the hosiery department of Boggs & Buhl, and prominent in church work, met almost instant death in a runaway accident Sunday evening. Miss Ewing and Miss McIlwaine were guests of Selwyn M. Taylor and wife for a drive. At Bellefield avenue the horses took fright and dashed toward Fifth avenue at breakneck speed. Miss Ewing jumped and alighted on her head, fracturing the skull. Before a physician could reach her she was dead. The horses broke loose from the carriage and the other occupants escaped uninjured.

Sculled a Fast Mile.

New York, Sept. 9.—C. S. Titus, formerly of New Orleans, now the senior sculler of the Union Boat club of New York city, yesterday rowed a mile on the Harlem river, breaking the American tidewater record. He covered the distance in 5 minutes 2-5 seconds. The former record was held by John Rumohr of New York, his time being 5 minutes 27 seconds. It was expected that Titus would be paced by an eight-oared shell, but because of the rough water he rowed over the course alone.

Forest Fires Raging.

St. Johns, N. F., Sept. 9.—Forest fires are ravaging the country and threaten several large lumbering districts. Twenty-three houses have been destroyed in the settlement of White Bay, and it is feared that other villages have also been burned. It is impossible to cope with the fires, and unless a heavy rainfall extinguishes them the loss to timber interests will be very great.

MINOR TELEGRAMS.

Dr. Johannes von Miquel, former Prussian minister of finance, was found dead in bed at Frankfort-on-the-Main Sunday morning. Apoplexy is believed to have been the cause of death. He was born Feb. 21, 1829.

The Abbot will not be able to trot against the world's record at the state fair grounds in Syracure today, being unable to get to Syracuse from Hartford before Monday evening. The exhibition will probably take place later in the week.

Seven thousand people saw the Vailsburg, N. J., bicycle races Sunday. In the final of the half mile professional, Kramer and Lawson were the only ones left, and as Kramer punctured his tire Lawson, who had the track to himself, refused to take first prize. In the run-off Kramer won.

The condition of Johnny Nelson, the Chicago bike rider whose left leg was amputated Saturday in consequence of an injury received last Wednesday night at Madison Square Garden, is still serious. Information comes from Bellevue hospital that unless blood poison occurs he may survive.

Assaulted and Throat Cut.

Bay City, Mich., Sept. 9.—A row took place last night on Third street, opposite the Campbell house. A stranger named Charles Davis assaulted Joe Delumme of Essexville and cut his throat badly. Delumme is now in the hospital in a critical condition. Davis later was arrested at the house of a friend. He said he did it in self-defense.

Killed at Play.

Saginaw, Mich., Sept. 9.—Several children were playing around a flat car loaded with rails in the Pere Marquette yards here at noon Sunday. One of the rails was pulled to the ground and fell across the body of the three-year-old daughter of Merritt Osborn, a switchman, inflicting injuries from which the little one died.

The Care of Oily Hair.

"Too oily hair is the result of a poor circulation. It should be constantly attended to and washed every week. It is caused by too much grease between the skull and the scalp. It is bad grease and can only be removed by massage, because massage is the only thing that will bring the blood to the surface. To pour a tonic on greasy hair is like pouring water on olive oil.

"Greasy hair has large pores. It requires more washing, more soap or shampoo, less brushing and much mas-[illegible]"

CZAR NOT ANXIOUS

Anarchists Very Busy in Paris Trouble Expected.

BUFFALO OUTRAGE CONDEMMED

No Change Has Been Made in the French Program—Police Have Been Given Specific Instructions—Anarchists Being Closely Watched.

Paris, Sept. 9.—A great feeling of relief is manifest among Americans in Paris in consequence of reassuring cablegrams from Buffalo regarding President McKinley's condition. The official advices received by Ambassador Porter and Consul General Gowdy and the information reaching other Americans here are very meager, and the bulletins communicated through the Associated Press are perused with the keenest interest and have roused hope that Mr. McKinley will recover.

The Parisian newspapers continue their sympathetic articles, and, as the Matin remarks, they are unanimous in denouncing the outrage and commiserating the American nation.

"It is to the honor of European journals," says the Matin, "that on such occasion their comments resemble each other closely; the language of one is the language o all."

The Temps, however, in an interesting article referring to President McKinley and Vice-President Roosevelt, says: "McKinley is not a Lincoln, and it can confidently be said that Roosevelt, under no circumstances, would be a Johnson, whose presidency became a governmental civil war after the military civil war had come to an end."

Today brings confirmation that the Buffalo outrage has stirred the police here into action, particularly in relation to the czar's visit. The ministry of interior has telegraphed severe instructions to the special commissaries in the provinces to exercise the closest vigilance upon anarchists. Special detectives also have been dispatched to the industrial centers to aid the police in watching anarchists and other agitators. Any anarchists considered dangerous, or whose movements are suspicious, will be taken into custody. All the commissaries publish portraits and descriptions of the anarchists known to the police. Several Italian anarchists who had been specially shadowed left Paris recently.

A dispatch from Dunkirk reports that considerable anxiety prevails there and that it is feared that the Buffalo outrage will lead the czar to postpone or abandon his visit to France. This impression, however, is absolutely unjustified, as is shown by the fact that the inquiries in Paris indicate that no change in the arrangements for the czar's visit have even been considered. It is the general feeling that the abandonment of his proposed visit by Emperor Nicholas would be too obvious a display of the white feather, even if apprehensions of another outrage existed. A telegram from Bergues, near Dunkirk, says that a man known as an anarchist arrived there yesterday and is now under surveillance.

An indication of the effect which the outrage on President McKinley has upon the minds of the ministry is shown by the fact that an Italian named Romanini, who was arrested last week at a suburb of Paris on suspicion of being an anarchist but whose honorable capture was attested by a number of inhabitants who petitioned for his release, is still held in prison. M. Allemane, who had interested himself in the prisoner's behalf, received a letter from Premier Waldeck-Rousseau yesterday declaring that it was impossible to set the man free, and he will undoubtedly be detained until after the czar shall have left.

Death of H. O. Armour.

Saratoga, N. Y., Sept. 9.—Herman O. Armour of New York city died suddenly of apoplexy yesterday at his summer cottage here.

Mr. Armour, who had been in comparatively frail health for some time, was able to be out once or twice a day and appeared to be gaining strength. Sunday forenoon, accompanied by a coachman, he took his regular drive and on his return he felt much refreshed. Shortly afterward he was seated on the porch of his cottage conversing with friends. Suddenly he ceased talking and immediately expired.

Convention of Brewery Workmen.

Philadelphia, Sept. 9.—The 18th annual convention of the United Brewery Workmen of the United States began here yesterday. One hundred and twenty-six delegates, representing more than 700 unions with a membership of 29,000, are in attendance. After the reception of delegates at the morning session the report of the national secretary was read. An open mass meeting, at which both English and German speakers addressed the delegates, was held. A social session was held last night.

Enthusiastic About the Exposition.

Washington, Sept. 9.—The special train carrying the diplomatic representatives returned to Washington from Buffalo at an early hour Sunday morning. Naturally the distinguished guests of the exposition were depressed at the unhappy events attending the president's visit, but they spoke in enthusiastic terms of the exposition itself and of the courtesies they had received.

Body Recovered.

Cleveland, O., Sept. 9.—A special to the Leader from Geneva, O., says that the body of Dr. C. W. Hayt, who was mysteriously lost from the steamer City of Buffalo, en route to Buffalo, July 23, and for which a reward of $1,000 has been offered, was found drifting ashore a few hundred feet out in the lake Sunday morning. Three men discovered the badly decomposed remains and brought the body ashore.

Tourist and Pilot Drowned.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Sept. 9.—While shooting the rapids Sunday afternoon, Nathaniel Pomeroy, a tourist of Oberlin, O., and Wm. Boucher, a rapids pilot, were drowned. The descent had almost been reached when in making too short a turn, the boat struck a rock and went over. The other occupants, Pomeroy's father, G. L. Bre[illegible]s, Joseph Myers, Mathew Meyers of Elyria, O., and Antoine Piquette, a pilot, saved themselves by clinging to the boat until picked up. It is the first drowning that has occurred from shooting the rapids for over 30 years. The pilots, it is alleged, were both drunk. The bodies have not yet been

ALMOST A LYNCHING

Old Soldiers Would Not Stand the Slur.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Sept. 9.—Chauncey Bronson, an inmate of the soldiers' home, exclaimed when he heard that President McKinley had been shot, "It's a good thing; he ought to have been shot long ago."

The comrades who heard his words jumped upon him instantly, tore his clothes, battered his face and would have lynched him, it is said, but for the arrival of home officials. Having been sent to his room by Commandant Judd, pending an investigation, he escaped in the night and has not since been seen. Veterans are now circulating a petition that his pension be revoked.

Rescued a Drowning Man.

St. Joseph, Mich., Sept. 9.—Special Officer Cyrus C. Rittenhause performed the bravest act in the history of marine circles of this city by plunging from the Three I. railroad tracks into the St. Joseph river at noon Sunday to save the life of Elmer Hasselgrien, who had gone down for the third time. As Rittenhause leaped from the docks, the victim's head had sunk several inches below the surface of the water. Rittenhause dived down, caught Hasselgrien by the hair and amid the cheers of the bystanders, brought him to the surface. With the aid of a rowboat he brought his man to shore, where he revived in a few minutes. Rittenhause received many congratulations.

JUDGE NOYES HAS ARRIVED.

Is Now in Washington to Answer Charges.

Washington, Sept. 9.—Judge A. H. Noyes of the Nome judicial district in Alaska, against whom have been preferred charges of corruption and irregularities in connection with mining claims, is here. A severe attack of asthma compelled him to call in a physician shortly after his arrival, and he was unable to see visitors. He expected to report today to the attorney-general to confer over the charges filed against him. The latter, however, is in Buffalo, a fact of which Judge Noyes has not yet been apprised.

FIVE MEN KILLED.

Jamestown, N. D., Sept. 9.—Five men were killed and six others seriously injured, two of whom have since died, in a collision that occurred early yesterday. A mixed train on the Northern Pacific came in from Oaks, carrying 17 men on a flat car. As the train passed the station a road engine was struck and the force of the collision caused the flat car to collapse. The names of the dead and injured could not be learned. They were harvest hands who had boarded the car at Lamoure.

WANT SETTLEMENT

Plainly Told Shaffer That He Must Settle at Once.

Pittsburg, Sept. 9.—If the plans of President Shaffer were for the executive board to go to New York and confer with President Schwab of the United States steel corporation today those plans were abandoned. The entire membership of the board was in Pittsburg Sunday with the exception of Vice-Presidents Morgan, Jenkins and Larkins, who went to their homes and who were expected to return to Pittsburg Monday morning. President Shaffer was not at home, and it was stated at his house that it was not known where he was or when he would return. Those of the executive board who were in the city and could be seen said they did not know whether there would be a meeting of the executive board Monday or not. If there was it was expected that the business before that body would be finished up and the board would adjourn before night.

While the members of the board did not say so, it was intimated by those in close touch with them that they had plainly told President Shaffer that a settlement of the strike was imperative and that he had better put himself into communication with President Schwab and have a plain understanding at once. In other words, the executive board of the Amalgamated association were pushing the leader for a settlement and to end the battle. It was said in a semi-official way that possibly President Shaffer was communicating with President Schwab personally. It was believed that he had either gone to Mr. Schwab's summer home in Loretto or else was meeting him in New York.

The leaders are making strenuous efforts to hold the men in line with the hope that some means of a settlement will come in a few days at the furthest. If it fails, the men, it is believed, will break away and return to work as individuals. That would be worse than the terms that have thus far been offered by the corporation. At the same time the delay that has occurred and it still going on, under the terms offered, is telling more severely than ever against the strikers and their organization. While the officials of the Amalgamated association were awaiting some report from their president the strikers about the mills now being operated by the non-union forces gathered by the combine were finding little to do. The mills were all closed down yesterday and preparations were being made to start today on an extensive basis. The Star mill expects to open with an increased force of men. The Painter mills, on the south side, were preparing to operate double turn for the first time. The Lindsay-McCutcheon mills in Allegheny are prepared to start additional machinery and increase the output. There was no indication of trouble or excitement anywhere.

—The steamer Twilight, which plies between Trenton and Philadelphia, was sunk in the Delaware river below Trenton last night, but fortunately none of the 300 and odd passengers was drowned. The steamer is supposed to have struck a rock.

Stood Death Off.

E. B. Munday, a lawyer of Henrietta, Tex., once fooled a grave-digger. He says: "My brother was very low with malerial fever and jaundice. I persuaded him to try Electric Bitters, and he was soon much better, but continued their use until he was wholly cured. I am sure Electric Bitters saved his life." This remedy expels maleria, kills disease germs and purifies the blood; aids digestion, regulates liver, kidneys and bowels, cures constipation, dyspepsia, nervous diseases, Kidney troubles, female complaints; gives perfect health. THE WORLD SHOCKED.

LAST Friday afternoon a sneaking Anarchist shot President McKinley twice and it was thought the President would live but a short time.

The would-be-murderer is a "Polack" from Alpena, Michigan.

It is needless for the HERALD to say that the whole world was shocked at the terrible news, nor for it to state in what love and esteem the President is held not only in our own country, but the whole world.

The assassin was immediately captured and is now being held awaiting the outcome of McKinley's condition.

The laws of this country are very lax in regard to the crime of Anarchistic speeches. This man had not mind sufficient to cause him to commit a crime of this magnitude. He was influenced by people like Emma Goldman, who spend their time inflaming minds of this character. Thus will this dastardly work continue until the work of such people is stopped, and the sooner the laws are made to stop them the better.

The dispatches of this morning state that the President is improving wonderfully and that now he is practically out of danger. The people are rejoicing and continue to pray for his speedy and final recovery.

DID HEROIC WORK

Life Saving Crews Rescued Thirty-Eight Sailors at Port Huron.

THE WORST WRECK IN YEARS

Cargoes Strewn All Along the Beach—Loss Will Reach Thousands of Dollars—Wreck Was Predicted by Sailors.

Port Huron, Mich., Sept. 9.—Today witnesses one of the worst disasters on the lake. Piled up on shore are many thousand dollars of vessel property, and the chance for getting them off are slim unless large sums of money are expended in dredging.

Strange to say, in connection with this great calamity, there is no loss of life. The life-saving crew took off 38 people during the night, and the others were beyond danger. The barge Amaranth, owned by Capt. Kotcher of Detroit is a total loss. She was loaded with lath, as was also the steamer Pauley. Their cargoes are strewn all along the shore. Ever since Saturday night the Wawatam has been endeavoring to release herself, and at 5 p. m. she succeeded in getting into the lake. The tug Sarnia, owned by the Reed Wrecking association of Sarnia, Ont., which went out to the assistance of the wrecked boats, is pounding on bottom, deserted by her crew, but will be saved. Capt. Plough of the life-saving crew came ashore last evening with eight men and reported no loss of life and stated without a doubt it is the worst wreck that he has witnessed in years. Heroic efforts will be made to save all boats with the exception of the Amaranth from destruction. Tugs have been ordered and will commence operations. The crews of "202" and the Wawatam stood by their boats and did not leave them. They were in no danger and life-savers went to them, but they refused assistance. Wreckers will be on the scene this morning and an estimate can then be made. Marine men are present from Chicago and other ports, and they pronounce the scene one of the most remarkable without loss of life.

In an interview with a sailor on board the Amaranth, he said that this wreck was predicted at Middleton by rats leaving the ship, and shortly after leaving port a canary bird flew on the shoulder of the captain, which he said was a sure sign of disaster. The crew of the Amaranth predicted to a man that they expected a wreck. Many thousands of people were on shore yesterday and viewed the wreck and work of the life-savers.

Died Whistling.

Dr. William Krauss in The Journal of Nervous and Mental Diseases describes the case of a Polish herdsman, 27 years of age, weighing 230 pounds, who some months previous to an accident had suffered from apoplexy resulting in left hemiplegia He was slowly regaining the use of his arm and leg when he was struck by a train and was found unconscious on the track with three scalp wounds There was a depressed fracture of the skull three inches above and one inch behind the left ear. He was immediately trephined and the depressed bone removed.

About 10 o'clock at night he began to whistle, not, however, the "popular songs of the day," but the whistle calls he was accustomed to use in calling or driving his flocks. He would continue whistling for about one minute, then would cease for five or ten minutes and kept this up at regular intervals until he died. At no time was it possible to distinguish any melody. The sounds were of the same pitch and intensity and of the same character. They were audible throughout the ward and attracted the attention of patients and attendants. To the physicians in attendance it was a strange experience to hear these whistle calls coming from a patient in a state of unconsciousness. It was impossible to rouse the patient at any time before or after the accident, and he died, whistling a few minutes before death.

A Night of Terror.

"Awful anxiety was felt for the widow of the brave General Burnham of Machias, Me., when the doctors said she would die from Pneumonia before morning" writes Mrs. S. H. Lincoln, who attended her that awful night, but she begged for Dr. King's New Discovery which had more than once saved her life and cured her of consumption. After taking, she slept all night. Further use entirely cured her." This marvellous medicine is guaranteed to cure all throat, chest and lung diseases. Only 50 cents and $1.00. Trial bottles free at C. A. Wright's drug store.

Ten Years' Trial

The Story of a Soldier's Struggle

By Brigadier General Charles King

Copyright, 1901, by Charles King

tell Melville to invite him by all means," said Mrs. Cat. But "Cat" demurred. Why had Langdon left Sheridan so mysteriously? Why had the Big Horn discharged him if they had not good reason to connect him with the robbery of the safe? Melville, with his grave, courteous smile, promptly disposed of the first. It was to spare Nelson a possible breach with the post commander. Sharpe felt that he ought not to allow Langdon to remain at the post one day after he was able to move, first, because of the bad blood between him and Armistead; second, because of his anomalous position as a dismissed officer. But Sharpe knew Nelson was impetuous of speech and intolerant of interference. He liked him well and thought for him and so chose a time when Nelson had to be at stables to send his adjutant to Langdon to break to him, diplomatically as possible, his desire, and Langdon left between two bugle calls, hurt and heartsick, but convinced that the step was due to Nelson, if not to Sharpe. When fairly away from Chicago and beyond reach of Nelson's reproaches or expostulations, Langdon had written and given good reasons for his action on that count at least. The Armistead affair was something that would have to be left for time to settle. It might crop out any moment in the future.

On the other matter, the safe robbery, "Cat" owned to himself with shame that he had trumped it up as an objection even when he disbelieved its truth, for Melville's clear eyes had fathomed his soul when the major calmly asked, "You surely do not believe Langdon a party to that, do you?"

"Oh—no, no, certainly I don't! Oh, well, ask him by all means, if you like. I—I—I merely suggest these as matters—others might desire explained. Then—there's Torrance. Now, how do you expect them to meet?"

"They are not apt to meet at all. Mr. Torrance, you know, has not been welcome at my quarters since that occurrence," was Melville's quiet reply, and, much to Torrance's chagrin, such was the case. He had been living with the bachelors' mess during the campaign and here in camp, Mrs. Torrance having taken that opportunity to go east, visit her kindred and replenish her wardrobe. He had partially re-established himself in the batteries by soldierly conduct in the campaign and during the mob days, but he knew Melville's household had heard all about the language which led to Langdon's assault, and how could that be condoned? He was a sorely unhappy man that summer, and May and Woodrow said it served him right.

There was another reason why Langdon didn't care to leave Brentwood just then. Cresswell was a relentless hater. He was still trying to ferret out his assailant or assailants, and he had never ceased his shadowing of Betts and his aspiring son. Cresswell worked in secrecy, binding Langdon to silence. He had been most helpful and liberal to Langdon in every way, even when he dreaded his looming up as a competitor for congress. He was fairly well to do and could easily have been richer but for the southern temperament which made him as open handed as he was open hearted. He insisted on advancing Langdon money to meet the claims that would not wait and begged him to accept more that he might dress and live like a gentleman. He meant Langdon to grow into the increasing business and care for it and preserve it, leaving him, Cresswell, free to pursue his political path. But Langdon was obdurate. The rifles had presented their new captain with his entire outfit of uniform and equipment on his return to duty. Boniface "gave him a rate" at his hospitable board that even Langdon half resented as not being equitable, but Boniface swore Langdon was worth more than his board; "he drew custom."

Langdon's law studies were going on uninterruptedly and well. He could reasonably expect to stand all legitimate quizzing and be called to the bar within another twelvemonth provided there were no distractions. He did not allow the will-o'-the-wisp of possible reinstatement to draw him from incessant study. What was the use of going back to the army, anyhow? He could never settle those outstanding debts and keep up the proper appearance on the pay of a lieutenant. The path to competence and freedom lay in civil life. He could far better repay the nation for his West Point education by assiduous drill and instruction of the state soldiery than by pottering about another ten years as a file closer. To return to the regiment was only to place himself once more where such narrow minds as "Cat" and such vicious souls as Nathan could slight or sting him. To remain in civil life would soon place him, should he see fit to enter politics, where, if he were mean enough, he could slight or sting them.

"You are better off today than you have been since the day of your graduation," said Cresswell. "You are independent." He would have said even more but that he feared to wound. What he thought was: "Thank God for two things, my lad—you've neither wife nor child to hamper you! The married man is never free."

"Langdon," said Cresswell, coming into the office one bright June morning, "I want you to knock off for a few days and take a run with me to Lincoln and Omaha. There are people you ought to meet. Why, surely you can leave the rifles that long, can't you?" he continued, noting instantly the demur in Langdon's face.

"Yes. In fact, I have begun to think of leaving them a whole week. Read that." And Langdon placed Melville's letter in the lawyer's hands and then rose and walked to the window.

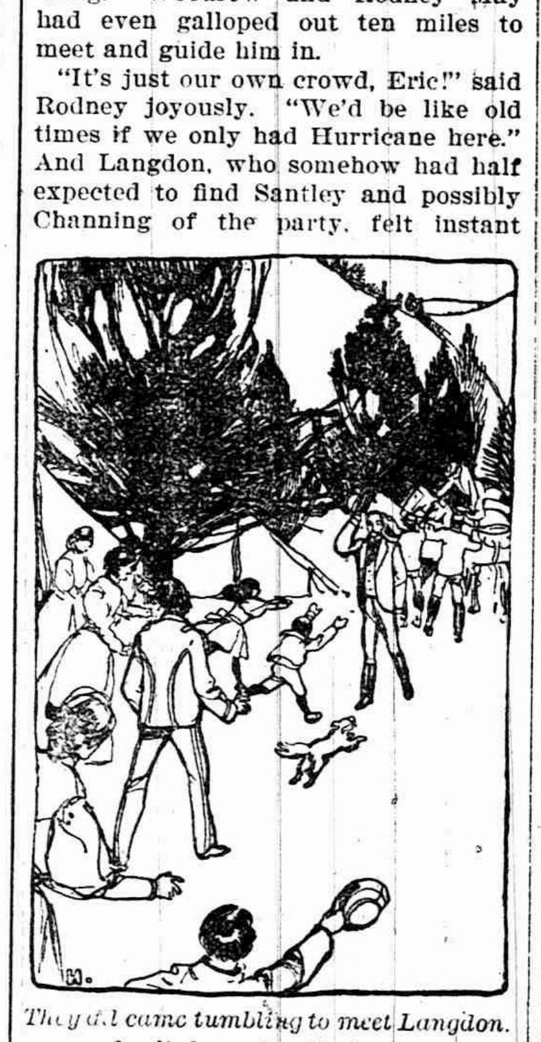
"H'm," mused Cresswell a moment later as he thoughtfully replaced the missive in its envelope. "I might have seen this coming the day that girl's face peered from the car window last week." Then, aloud, said he, "Eric, you keep away from that camp unless you're courting further trouble," and abruptly left the room.

Yet Eric went, and possibly courted.

CHAPTER XVI.

A problem that had worried "Cat" was just how he should treat Langdon when he came to camp. It was the duty of officers visiting within its limits to call upon the commander unless they happened to be his senior in rank. But "Cat" went further. He considered it to be the duty of even civilians to show their appreciation of his station a case of mistaken judgment, since the average American civilian shows respect to nobody except a woman, and not too much to her. "Cat" considered that Langdon would call, accompanied by Melville, when he could invite them both to dine. But Langdon didn't come and didn't call. He had been bidden to spend a week with Melville and go with him and a party on a four days' picnic in the hills. Langdon's answer reached Melville the day before the start. He would join them on the picnic, but as yet thought best not to visit camp. Melville's orderly met him with a spare horse at War Bonnet Station, and a day's ride northward by way of Buffalo Gap brought him at sunset into the midst of a joyous gathering. Woodrow and Rodney May had even galloped out ten miles to meet and guide him in.

"It's just our own crowd, Eric!" said Rodney joyously. "We'd be like old times if we only had Hurricane here." And Langdon, who somehow had half expected to find Santley and possibly Channing of the party, felt instant sense of relief, yet hardly liked to own it even to himself. Santley he cared little about, but Channing had stood his friend and served him well. Why should he not have welcomed Channing's presence? Why should he secretly rejoice that Channing was not here?



They all came tumbling to meet Langdon.

With the old accustomed salute and with joy in their honest eyes a brace of battery men sprang to aid him as the little party dismounted in a lovely glade among the crested hills. White tents gleamed among the pines in the setting sun. Dogs and children, with loud acclaim, came tumbling to meet him. Melville, glad and genial, linked his arm in that of his guest and led him to the campfire. Two sturdy young Melvilles climbed and twined about his legs and beat him lustily upon the back as the ladies arose to greet him, Mrs. Melville with frankly extended hand, while Ethel Grahame, looking the picture of health and serenity in a jersey waist and Tam O'Shanter, clamped a huge earthen bowl in one rounded arm and presented a spoonful of sirup, her soft cheek dimpling, her white teeth gleaming between the ripe red lips. Langdon bowed over Mrs. Melville's hand and bent both knees in abortive attempt to sip the contents of the spoon, a difficult feat without the aid of the youngsters and one that only resulted on their part in a climbing race for his back and on his to still further prostration. It was just as well for Channing's peace of mind that he had not been included in the family plan. It might have been better had not that plan likewise omitted Santley, who had found means to get away from battery duties and to take the 30 mile ride into the heart of the hills on the trail of his hopes and, sitting in saddle at the edge of the glade, to look on at this pretty picture and then turn and curse the folly that had led him thither. Others might welcome Langdon; he could and would not. Neither could he spend the night, as he had planned, in Melville's camp. In bitterness of spirit he rode back a dozen miles to a miner's cabin, and Torrance was his confidant when at noon next day he returned to duty and reported what he had seen.

Five evenings later the whole command, six troops of horses and two field batteries, were grooming at the picket ropes along under the edge of the mesa, and Torrance, in natty undress uniform, riding whip in hand, was sauntering up and down watching the work of his men, when he became aware of eager glances and mutterings. The tap, tap of currycomb and brush went on as steadily, but heads kept bobbing up and gazing over the brown backs of his strong gun teams, and, glancing about to see what it meant, Torrance became aware of a sight that sent him presently to the opposite side of his line. Strolling down the slope, talking volubly, came the colonel, his dogs tumbling about him, as usual, his orderly following primly at his allotted distance, Melville, calm, courteous and dignified as ever, listening with all outward appearance of serene interest on one side, and on the other, lithe, spare and erect, lookingly marvelously unlike the sad, jaded, hopeless man who left their midst the second year before, clad now in trim camping garb, strode Eric Langdon. When D battery broke ranks half an hour later, three rousing cheers rang out on the evening air, and Torrance sent for his first sergeant.

"What made the men cheer?" he asked, and the sergeant was imperturbable.

"I couldn't say, sir. They just broke out when we broke ranks. Reckon they felt good, sir."

"Look here, Sergeant Flynn," said Torrance, "men don't cheer in unison without somebody to give the word. Who gave it and what for?"

"Sergeant Ramsey gave it, sir. He didn't say what for."

"He didn't have to," was what the veteran was within an inch of saying.

"This thing's got to stop," said Torrance sternly. "You know as well as I it was because of—of Mr. Langdon's being here, and such demonstrations are disrespectful to the colonel."

"The colonel didn't hear it, sir. He'd gone home."

"He'll hear of it and hold me responsible," said Torrance angrily. "Not only that, but I observed men saluting when they spoke to Mr. Langdon. That's all wrong."

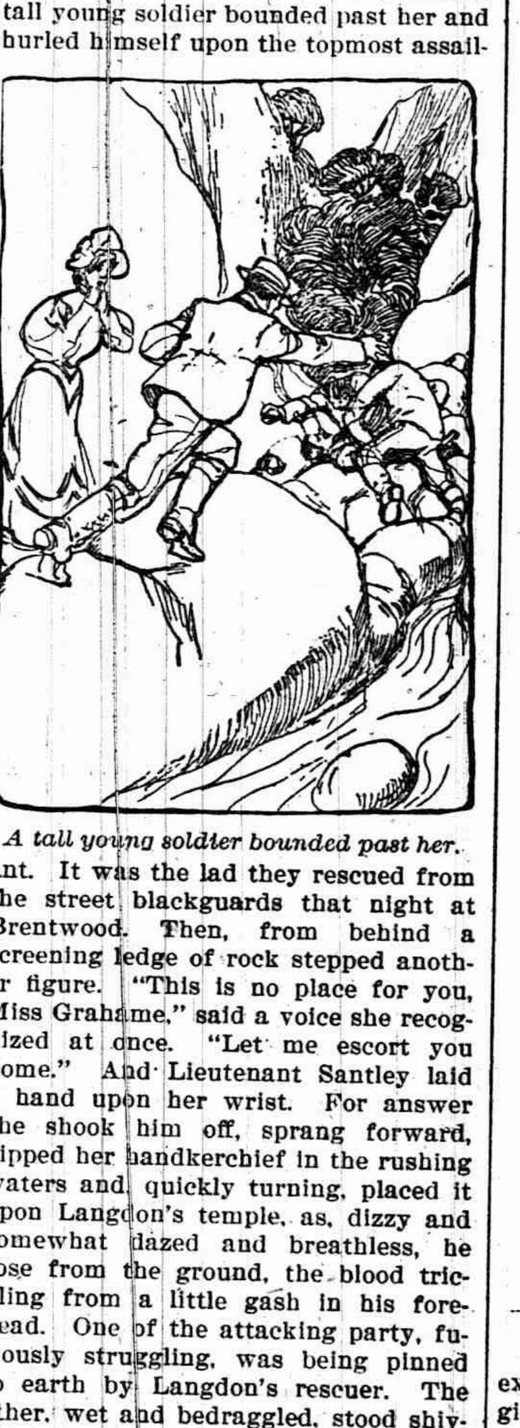
"You know, a dismissed officer's entitled to no such honors," said Torrance. "Just order it stopped. You may go." And Flynn turned away, thinking things he could not say. Langdon spent that night at Melville's tent and was to leave for the railway after breakfast in the morning. Before breakfast he and Ethel Grahame were strolling slowly up the shaded pathway in the north ravine. The brook came tumbling down its rocky bed to their right, and half a mile out they met a little squad of battery men, with the familiar "D" upon their hats. They were carrying tempting little strings of trout. Two of them glanced at Langdon, reddened, half raised their right hands, dropped them and gazed awkwardly away. They were his own old men. Then they met a third, who looked squarely at him and raised his hat as courteously as a Virginian and stood aside to let them by. A few rods farther on two others, fishing from the bank, turned and gazed, then glanced quickly at each other and exchanged grins. These last were strangers—men who had come into the battery after he had left it, a rather ill favored pair. There was no reason why they should salute; there were reasons why they should not. But, on the other hand, a courteous and respectful demeanor should have been observed if for no other reason than the presence of a woman, a member of the major's household. But it pleased these two young cubs, only recently from the streets of some eastern city, to titter audibly and follow the pair with impertinent glances. Langdon could not but see it, and his soul rose up in wrath. Miss Grahame, too, had not failed to notice a thing so utterly unlike the pleased, smiling manner of the veteran soldiers whenever the garrison ladies happened to pass their way. Eager to dissemble, as though she had not seen, Ethel plunged instantly into enthusiastic comment on the view before them. It was indeed a lovely scene, but Langdon's soul was hot within him. The indignity was as much to her as to him. He half turned, as though intending to step back and accost them. She read his purpose and with quick movement placed herself before him.

"Oh, just look at that vine!" she cried, pointing to a climbing plant among the rocks across the tumbling brook, then, all smiling confidence, beamed upon the fishing twain. "Oh, could you reach me a spray of that? I'll thank you so much."

No answer. With broad, blue flannel backs ostentatiously turned toward the speaker, the two young fellows hung their heads, slyly glanced at each other and giggled again. It was more than Langdon could stand. Springing past her, standing stunned and aggrieved at such boorishness—the first and only evidence of ill will she ever saw among the soldiery—he was upon them in an instant.

"Out of the way, you hulking brutes!" he ordered, low and stern, as he laid a heavy hand on the shoulder of the nearest.

"I don't have to," sneered the fellow. "You ain't givin orders here," and went spinning backward at the instant, hurled by all the force Langdon's arm could muster. It wasn't too much. His old training stood him in good stead, but practice had been stopped by the wound of the previous winter, and in another moment he realized that he had two ruffians to deal with and was alone, unarmed. Ethel Grahame's shriek of terror rang through the ravine as the two sprang at their helpless victim and bore him down among the rocks. The next instant a tall young soldier bounded past her and hurled himself upon the topmost assailant. It was the lad they rescued from the street blackguards that night at Brentwood. Then, from behind a screening ledge of rock stepped another figure. "This is no place for you, Miss Grahame," said a voice she recognized at once. "Let me escort you home." And Lieutenant Santley laid a hand upon her wrist. For answer she shook him off, sprang forward, dipped her handkerchief in the rushing waters and, quickly turning, placed it upon Langdon's temple, as, dizzy and somewhat dazed and breathless, he rose from the ground, the blood trickling from a little gash in his forehead. One of the attacking party, furiously struggling, was being pinned to earth by Langdon's rescuer. The other, wet and bedraggled, stood shivering in the grasp of big Sergeant Ramsey, who shook him furiously and demanded was he drunk or crazy.



A tall young soldier bounded past her.

"I'm obeyin orders," was the surly, sullen, abject answer.

"Whose order, you blackguard?" howled Ramsey, with another shake.

For answer the woe begone "rookie" dropped his eyes and writhed miserably in the grasp at his collar. "Whose orders, I say? Answer, or I'll shake the life out of you!" And in mingled appeal and reproach the fellow looked furtively about until his eyes rested upon his lieutenant.

"It's a lie!" cried Santley.

Paderewski's Rebuke.

A touching tale comes from London, of interest to all boarding school girls the world over, of how Mr. Paderewski at a recent evening party in London where he played remarked: "They made me feel quite nervous! I like women to be dignified!" This after certain frenzied feminine members of the audience stood on chairs to watch and even grabbed his hand and kissed it as he passed out of the room. Poor Paddy! And poor hysterical admirers of his! How few dignified women has he ever met in the course of his matinee career, and how strange it is that many an ordinarily phlegmatic woman should find herself enthusiastic to the verge of silliness in his presence! It is something of a comfort, however, to discover that the American women are no worse over him than are the English.—Kansas City Times.

Follows His Mother's Example.

King Edward VII is following the example of Queen Victoria. One of his gifts to Lady Victoria Sibyl Grey upon her recent marriage to Arthur M. Grenville was a cashmere shawl. There was, in addition, a brooch of pearls and turquoise surmounted by the cipher of Queen Victoria in red enamel.

The gowns of the bridesmaids at this wedding offered a little variety in that the colors were mauve and white, and the bouquets were of sweet peas in the same shade. The hats were of white lace. Three child bridesmaids wore small, close bonnets.

Conservative Frenchwomen.

While the women of England and America have long since formulated their declaration of independence and by energy and cohesion have won a large measure of liberty, their sisters in France have agitated the question of emancipation in but a half hearted way. Only a limited number have demanded suffrage, the greater portion seeking to enforce their rights in the matter of the marital relation, the management of their children and the control of their own property, says the New York Evening Post.

Mme. Rejane's Mules.

The frequent apparition in the Strand of a very smart carriage of a peculiar shape, not unlike a large hansom, but without seat for the coachman at the back, drawn by two superb black mules, has excited very considerably the curiosity of the crowd. It belongs to no less a personage than Mme. Rejane, and the mules were presented to her by the king of Portugal. They are very strong, their coats are remarkably glossy, and they are said to be worth $400 the pair.—London Chronicle.

Read What Grateful Patients Say

Mrs Martha Keller, of Cohoctah township, Livingston county who has been seriously afflicted with a complication of diseases for years, voluntarily makes the following statement. She says: I had been a great sufferer with catarrh of the stomach, heart failure and nervous debility. I would have peculiar nervous spells come over me and I would faint away; have been carried in the house more than once in that condition. My heart and stomach troubled me terribly all the time, having tried a number of doctors without receiving any permanent relief. I saw the advertisement of Dr. Walker in the papers, also hearing of the doctor's many cures. I decided to call at the hotel and see him. I at once placed myself under Dr. Walker's treatment. I improved right along and am now happy to say that all of the above symptoms have left me. To have my stomach, heart and nerves feel natural once more causes me to feel very grateful. I most cheerfully recommended the doctor to all afflicted ones. Signed MRS. MARTHA KELLEL.

Mrs. Chas. Maltby, of Milan, Mich., says: I was taken with Lagrippe last winter; soon after rheumatism set in, affecting my whole system; my sufferings at times were intense and intense and in a short time I had become so emaciated that I was a mere skeleton and only by the aid of crutches could I go around at all. I took less than three months treatment of Dr. Walker, who completely restored me to health.
CHAS. MALTBY.

Mr. James B. Gilday, a well known citizen, of Yargerville, Mich., says: "I had suffered with catarrh of the head, throat and bronchial tubes for several years. I had treated with several doctors and also tried the best patent medicines advertised, but found no relief until I consulted Dr. W. C. Walker, of Detroit, who makes regular visits to Monroe. The doctor's treatment produced most satisfactory results. Those afflicted with chronic diseases should not lose hope but go to Dr. W. C. Walker. I can cheerfully recommend the doctor as a thorough gentleman and master of his profession. This statement is voluntary on my part, given for the benefit of those afflicted as I was."
JAMES B. GILDAY.
Yargerville. Monroe County, Mich. June 28. 1901.

Sick all his Life. Read the statement of another well known citizen of Monroe county: Mr. W. W. Murphy, of Samaria, who had been almost a constant sufferer all his life from stomach and liver complications. He says: "I have found Dr. W. C. Walker's treatment a great help to me. I was troubled with sick headache often, as long as I can remember; am now 44 years of age. I treated with the doctor several months and have not had one attack of sick headache since I began his treatment. Had tried, everything I could hear of before, with very little benefit. I heartily recommend Dr. Walker." W. W. MURPHY.

BASE BALL.

The ball team and others who accompanied them to Napoleon last Friday report a very pleasant trip. They were nicely entertained by the Napoleon people and especially by B. B. Bitzer, who gave them a six mile ride on the Maumee in his launch. The game was one of the best of the season. It was a pitcher's battle all through. Kissinger was in the box for Napoleon and did good work. Harris pitched a perfect game and was well supported by the team and especially by Rikert, who caught the three Napoleons, who attempted to steal bases. The score was:

Napoleon ball team returned here with the Tecumseh team Saturday morning and played the third of the series of games that afternoon and received their third defeat by Tecumseh. The Napoleons are a strong team and have defeated nearly all the teams they have met this season, have won 41 out of 49 games played, but they must conceed the championship to Tecumseh this season. The game was quite interesting but not as sharp as former games Some good plays were made, Schiappacasse's steal home and fielding by him and Susman. Score:

Thursday, Sept. 12, the Tecumseh ball team will meet the "Independance", of Detroit, at the Atheletic Park Tecumseh. The Independance claim to be champions over all teans in Detroit. They have as players, Slack and Bussey pitchers, the former from the famous F. and P. M. team and the latter was with Monroe this season. The team is made up of select players and they are coming to Tecumseh to redeem Detroits lost honors. No doubt but this will be one of the best games of the season and Tecumseh will make a great effort to win. Let all good lovers of good ball come out to this game.

The Independents who come here Thursday, have lost only two games out of forty-one played.

Tecumseh has won 21 out of 27 games this season.

Schiappacasse is the champion acrobat player this season.

THE PORTER

Tapped the Till day after day

AND TOOK IN ALL

About $30. of Blocher's Hard Earned Cash.

Edward Eaton was arrested Friday afternoon by Sheriff Shepherd, charged with larceny, and lodged in the county jail.

For the past six weeks he has been employed as porter in the Lilley House, and during that period, almost daily, money has been missing from the till. From time to time various sums taken from the money drawer had puzzled the proprietor, J. D. Blocher, as to the probable thief.

Eaton, while in the service of the house, was not suspected, as he conducted himself in a straightforward manner to all appearance, was well liked about the premises, and seemed to be a favorite with all.

Finally, for some minor thing that he did, he was discharged, and from that time the leakage stopped.

This led to the conclusion Eaton was the man who had taken the money. A warrent was issued for his arrest, and he was taken to Adrian and placed in jail. He has stolen as near as can be determined about $30.00, but is now safe where he will steal no more.

Since his arrest he has confessed to Sheriff Shepherd.

Mothers write us that they have solved the problem of keeping their children well. Give them Rocky Mountain Tea each week. A blessing to mother and child. J. J. Orr.

A Fine Hotel.

For the last two years Lon Clark of Clinton, has been building a fine hotel. He has said it is built as his monument, and indeed will be an appropriate one. The house is one of the best built and furnished in Michigan and is now rented to Mr. Burt D. Gilmore, late of Sherman, this state. The new landlord is said to understand his business and it is hoped he does.

ROUND ABOUT US.

The factory for the manufacture of the "New Century Mail Boxes" will be located at Tecumseh, three-fourths of the stock in the company being owned by men in that enterprising city What's the matter with Adrian, anynow? With all her boasted enterprise and "push" she should not let a good thing like this get away from her. The capital stock of the company is only $50,000—barely enough to divide up among the rich proprietors of Adrian newspapers.—Petersburg Sun.

The Monroe Democrat of last week contains a two-thirds page advertising announcing the opening of their public schools. Calender, courses of study, school books, tuition, etc., are all given. It is a new idea for a school-board to advertise; but there is no reason why they should not.—Blissfield Advance.

A good idea, and why not advertise a public as well as private school. For instance Tecumseh High school is as much a tuition affair as for Tecumseh pupils at the present time and if properly advertised in the local papers. several dollars more of foreign tuition money could be added during the year and at no additional expense.

The Adrian Press devotes a whole column telling why the post office department cannot compel a farmer to buy a mail box in which to put mail on the Rural Mail delivery, and in the end says that "it is'nt much for a farmer to do anyway." It would look to a man up a tree" as if Stearns had a column to fill and filled it.

It costs money to be contrary. For years a little creek in Hudson divided the burg, and they had two schools. They have, after a hard fight united the two. Last year the appropriation for the two was $6,400. This year under consolodation, the estimates are for $4,500, a saving of nearly $2,000 to the taxpayers. The people and taxpayers of river rent Blissfield, should N. B. and do it p. d. q.—Adrian Press.

Would that Tecumseh had a second half or some way to divide school money. It costs nearly $6,000 to run the Tecumseh schools and Hudson, according to the last census has 100 more population than this "burg."

All an account of a red necktie the whole male portion of the Tennant family, of Richfield Center, Ohio, was nearly wiped off the face of the earth by a mad bull. One day last week Herman Tennant appeared in the field, wearing a red necktie and the bull thinking himself in Cuba and that a ginuine old fashioned bull fight was on, charged on Herman. The boy intered a sporting match at once and was making good time until he reached the fence when the bull over reached him and entered immediately into a game of foot ball taking the place of a center rush. At this Mr. Tennant took a hand in the fracas but lumber being scarce in that section he took but a small board. This board was not sufficient with which to quell a bull and said animal amused himself goring and hooking the old man until the hired man fooled Mr. Bull by tripping him up with a rope. The young man is badly hurt, old man nearly dead, the hired man out of a job, and all on account of wearing a red necktie in a bull pasture.

The Enterprise office has received a good many orders for printing for outside parties this summer, in fact we do every summer, but we have been unusually busy the past few weeks. City people appreciate good work and reasonable prices.—Manchester Enterprise.

What a difference in towns about job printing. The News, of Tecumseh, claims it cannot do job work at city prices, while at Manchester Editor Blosser brags about it.

The Milan Leader is all swelled up over the appearance the band from that town made on Labor Day in Detroit. The band when playing was also all swelled up, so in all it was a "swell" affair.

Ann Arbor is very proud over her Labor Day celebration and the Courier says more work was done there that day than on any other day during the year Truly for Ann Arbor Labor Day celebrations are a good thing.

Fruit For Dyspepsia.

An orange eaten before breakfast will, it is said, cure dyspepsia sooner than anything else. Apples are also good, especially when baked or stewed. They are excellent in many cases of illness. The juice of oranges, as of lemons, is valuable in the making of drinks in case of fever. Tomatoes are excellent remedies in some liver and gastric complaints and are certainly more pleasant than medicine. Figs, raspberries, strawberries, currants and cherries are all cooling and purifying to the system while being nutritious at the same time, and a diet largely composed of fresh, good fruit is undoubtedly beneficial, especially in hot weather.

A Sad Life's Rewards.

HOW THE LEGS GROW.

The Shocks of Exercise Lengthen Them and Keep Them Even.

As a fact, says the author, our lower limbs are not usually both of exactly the same length, though they are so for all practical purposes. The left is usually the longer, though the gait is not notably influenced by this fact. At birth the lower limbs are shorter than the upper, and their movements are rather of the prehensile type. "We are not born leggy like the foal or kangaroo, but we gradually achieve legginess." The bones increase in length, not so much by interstitial deposit as by addition to their ends—that is, by progressive ossification of the layer of cartilage which intervenes between the end of the shaft and the epiphysis. Ossification goes on till the component parts of the bone are all united by bony matter, and thus the stature of the individual is determined.

If from inflammation or injury an epiphysis be damaged, one limb may be shorter than the other, or inflammatory stimulation may even induce an increased length in the bone affected. The skeletons of tortoises, not being subjected to sudden jars, have no epiphyses at the ends of the long bones, whereas in the leaping frog the extremities of the humerus and femur long remain as separate epiphyses. The continuous concussions to which the ends of the bones of the lower limbs are exposed when a vigorous child is excited by its own natural spirit to run about are doubtless of great value in assisting the growth in length of the lower limbs, which soon lose their infantile character and become adapted for running and walking. By exposing the lower limbs to the same influences and resistances during their entire growth we manage to maintain them of the same length, and gentle jars upon the epiphyses at the joints may be considered favorable to growth.—New York Medical Record.

The History of Etiquette.

Etiquette is a form of fashion more important than style in dress, for the reason that the varying codes of manners have influenced morals, something changing the cut of a coat cannot be said to have done. When etiquette demanded that a gentleman accept a challenge or acknowledge himself a coward in the minds of his fellow citizens, it encroached sharply upon ethics. Now that it has gone out of fashion to kill, gentlemen find small difficulty in keeping the sixth commandment. The less formal etiquette becomes the less wanton taking of life there is among those who consider good breeding of consequence.

As the civilized race now stands either man or woman can be refined, regardless of shape of hat he or she wears. This was true in any century, but 200 years ago and back of that period a gentleman and lady could, according to approved etiquette, gobble food with their hands from a common dish set in the center of the dining table and filled with the entire fashionable bill of fare prepared for the occasion. Gratefully we now acknowledge such proceedings to be "bad form" and in so doing pronounce ourselves two centuries removed from the table manners of swine and one point away from that brute, no matter how similar to him our turn of mind may remain in some other respects.—National Magazine.

TOOK HIS ADVICE.

How many times in life a few words of good advice, coming from a friend one can depend upon, will save us hours perhaps months of misery. The following which coming from Battle Creek will interest our readers. Dr. Oliver Guiteaux, veterinary surgeon of that city, a well known man there, as well as in Kalamazoo and Marshall, speaks of his experience with the little conquerer and the result of a few timely words of advice, he says:

"I was standing in Amberg & Murphy's drug store in Battle Creek one day when a friend of mine came in and asked for a box of kidney pills. After he had made his purchase I said quietly to him, "You have made a mistake in buying those." His reply was "How's that?" I said Doan's Kidney Pills are worth all others put together. As he wanted my reasons for thinking so I told him that my kidneys had bothered me for years that I had suffered from backache until I could scarcely stand it, that I had nearly every symptom to be found where the kidneys are effected, that I had used remedy after remedy including box after box of the one he had just purchased, and that until I used Doan's Kidney Pills I might have taken as many spoonfuls of water, in fact, I think some of them hurt me. A couple of weeks after this I met him on the street when he said: Doc., Doan's Kidney Pills are just as you represented. Aster using the box about which we had the conversation in Amberg & Murphy's drug store I was as bad as ever. I then procured Doan's and stuck to their treatment until they cured me."

Maddened by Solitude.

The Canadian northwest is a probationary haven for wealthy young Englishmen of nomadic instincts. Numbers of them annually purchase hunting and camping outfits from the Hudson Bay company and strike into the barren lands to prospect for minerals or take up land on the prairies. But most often they return to the civilization of the towns with nothing but hard words for the wilderness.

The construction of the Temiscaming railroad induced the younger son of one wealthy English family to take a trip into that outlandish district. He returned to Ottawa a disappointed man. "It's the most desolate country you can imagine," he said to his friends. "I have been out prospecting sometimes for a whole day without seeing a sign of animal life. Once the only living thing I came across was a bird, and it was so disgusted that it was trying to knock its brains out against a tree."

He had seen a woodpecker.—[illegible]

They Weren't Fed.

"Some years ago," said a San Francisco man, "a globe trotting Englishman came into the city by the Golden Gate, and it fell to my lot to entertain him. So one night I took him to dine at the far famed Cliff House. It was a beautiful moonlight night, and from where we sat upon the porch we looked out upon the broad bosom of the Pacific ocean. The moon's light made a path across the waters, and in its center the Seal rocks lay like a black patch. The Englishman inquired what they were and upon my informing him said: 'Bah Jove, are those 'the Seal rocks of which I have heard? I'd very much like to see the seals. I say, my man,' turning to the waiter, 'caun't I see the seals? Don't you feed them at night?'

"'Oh, yessir,' replied the waiter, who was of Hibernian descent, without blinking an eye. 'At 9 o'clock we always gives them their ham and eggs, sir.'

"The Englishman accepted this surprising piece of information without turning a hair and announced that he would surely be on hand at the time mentioned. He was; but, needless to say, the waiter was not."

Mr. G. A. Stillman, a merchant of Tamplico, Ill. writes: "Foley's Kidney Cure is meeting with wonderful success. It has cured some cases here that physicians pronounced incurable. I myself am able to testify to its merits. My face to-day is a living picture of health, and Foley's Kidney Cure has made it such." J. J. Orr.

Patti's Escort.

Adelina Patti, the great singer, on one of her tours of Europe was due at Bucharest on a certain date. Owing to inclement weather, however, madame declined to budge from Vienna, and the poor manager went nearly distracted. As storming had not the slightest effect on her serene highness the manager set his wits to work. Soon afterward a telegram arrived from Bucharest, stating that a brilliant deputation of Roumanian nobles, with a torchlight procession and military band, was to receive the diva. The message was handed to Mme. Patti, who was enchanted, and at once made ready to start. On arrival, the band played and the torches flared, and madame was put in the best of spirits by being escorted to her hotel by the Roumanian nobles. It is not known what she would have said had she been told that the "nobles" were hired from the streets and dressed up for the occasion by a representative of the manager.

Grazed In the Fog.

It is not usual for a ship on the high seas to elect to cast anchor on the deck of a passing steamer, but that is what a four masted schooner did once in the Atlantic. The two vessels grazed in the fog, and the "catted" port anchor of the schooner caught in the steamer's deck "by a fluke." It fastened to an engineer's stateroom in such a manner as to bar his exit; but, fortunately, the chain parted just as the room was being ripped into fragments. The schooner followed the steamer to its destination to recover her anchor.

The busiest and mightiest little thing that ever was made is Dr. King's New Life Pills. These pills change weakness into strength, listlessness into energy, brain-fag into mental power. They're wonderful in building up the health. Only 25c per box. Sold by C. A. Wright

A Bit of Realism.

An instance of the way in which the acting of a play grows may be taken from Ellen Terry's playing in "Mme. Sans-Gene." In the play in question the washerwoman duchess is having a lesson from a professor of dancing. The business of the play requires her to be awkward in her attempts at dancing, and the actress is awkward, delightfully awkward. She has put on a long riding habit in order to become accustomed to manipulate her court train in the dance and is so much troubled with it that finally she tucks it over her arm while she is learning to take the steps. The train keeps slipping off her arm and has to be perpetually replaced, and the episode is a cause of much boisterous amusement.

One night in a great English manufacturing city she was playing the part with even more than her usual verve. She was lost in the assumed character so thoroughly that it was real to her, and the ex-washerwoman, with her mind harassed and worried by the trying conditions of her artificial court life, instinctively returned to the habits of her youth. In a moment of abstraction, finding the fat coil of stuff across her arm, she instinctively began to wring it out. The response of the audience was electrical. Every woman—and man—who had ever seen a washtub recognized the sincerity of the action. This moment of creative instinct was recorded in the actress mind and has been repeated ever since.—Cosmopolitan.

Analyzing His Affection.

The young lovers sat beside the waterfall. The rapids and the nearby whirlpool had a strange attraction for the romantic young girl. She had heard the story of the unhappy Indian maiden and the young brave who had gone to their doom, clasped in each other's arms, to the slow music of the "Swan Song." That seemed very beautiful to her.

"Jack," she said, "if you saw me struggling in the water near the edge of the falls, would you jump in after me?"

"What would be the use, my dear, when I can't swim?" he answered.

"But at least we could perish together," she replied bravely.

"Yes, there would be no doubt of that," he returned, shuddering at the sound of the cruel waters.

"But haven't you often said you would die for me?" she asked, piqued at his coldness.

"No, my dear," replied her practical lover. "If you'll remember, I've always told you that I had an undying love for you!"—Smart Set.

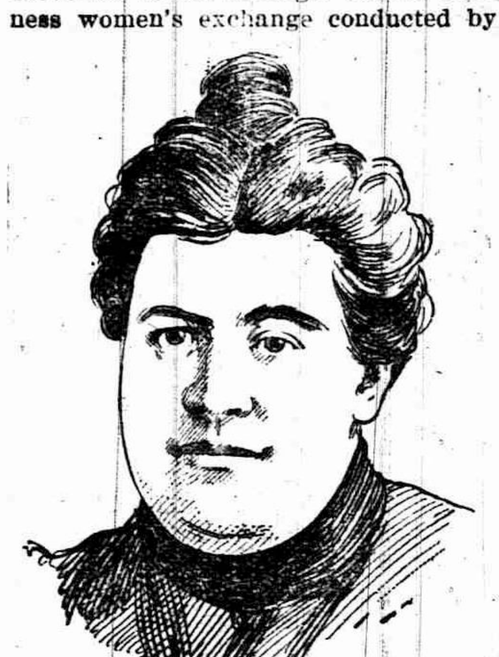
WOMAN'S WORLD.

HEAD OF WOMAN'S NATIONAL BUSINESS ASSOCIATION.

Minister Wu to the Women—A Baby Bottle Basket—His Hat Wasn't on Straight—Nagging Before Guests. California Pioneer Women.

Members of the Chicago council of the National Association of Business Women are highly pleased at the result of the election of officers at the annual meeting of the association at Buffalo, Chicago having got the three highest offices—president, vice president and secretary.

The president elected is Miss Matae B. Cleveland, until recently the president of the Chicago council. Miss Cleveland is the manager of the business women's exchange conducted by the Association of Young Women's Clubs. She has the testing and graduating of all women finding employment through the exchange and is known to every employer of woman labor in Chicago.



MATAE B. CLEVELAND.

The National Association of Business Women owes its present importance to the efforts of Mrs. Potter Palmer. It was formerly known as the National Association of Women Stenographers, but now includes all women engaged in business. The Chicago council numbers about 500 members, with councils at New York, Detroit, Denver and Minneapolis.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Minister Wu to the Women.

The wise and facetious Minister Wu Ting Fang made his appearance in a new role the other evening at a large gathering where both ladies and gentlemen were present, where he was the most conspicuous guest. He was asked to say a few words to the ladies in response to a toast to them. He said:

"When I see so many finely built women confronting me, and I am called upon to be the 'gallant' of the moment; what can I say but that I wish for that moment only I were not a Chinaman—I should like to be an American as I stand here, so that each one of you would appear as beautiful to me as you actually must be when seen through your countryman's eyes. Alas, the slight difference in the formation of my orbs cannot do justice to the impression you make upon me, individually and jointly and severally. But there are some well nourished figures and forms among you that really appear to be as fine as the best that my own fertile country has produced. And your intelligence and souls, I am told, which are hidden under your intricate fashionable apparel, are more beautiful even than your forms. May you all feel the depth and sincerity of my admiration, and may your youthful looks and honorable years always walk hand in hand."

A Baby Bottle Basket.

A convenient article which has been placed on the market this season is a baby bottle basket. It is really a portable traveling icebox consisting of a wicker basket 10 by 10 inches in size and having a leather strap passed around it under wicker loops, so that it may easily be carried. The basket is lined with felt to exclude the warm air. Inside is placed a galvanized icebox with a square inner compartment for the ice. There are bottle racks like the compartments of a castor in the ice box with openings for 12 six ounce sterilizing bottles. The middle compartment is to be used for holding the ice. The bottle racks are movable, so that the outside compartment may be used for packing lunch at the same time that ice is carried in the middle compartment. Or four eight ounce bottles of milk may be placed in the middle compartment and lunch packed in the outer compartment; this of course in weather cold enough so that there is no need of ice to cool the milk. When the icebox contains all the bottles it will hold, there are the 12 six ounce bottles and the four eight ounce bottles. This will supply a child for quite a long journey in cases where there is a cool place for the basket en route, and the main object is to carry as much of one kind of milk as possible.

His Hat Wasn't on Straight.

Traffic was blocked on Fifth avenue. In both directions was strung out a long line of street cars and miscellaneous vehicles. The usual crowd had rushed to the point of disturbance, thus adding to the congestion.

A plain, ordinary, everyday kind of horse had stopped directly opposite one of the big stores, and despite all efforts to urge him on his way not a step would he move.

Some suggested a few firecrackers, others hinted at fire without crackers and still others vouchsafed that the fire department might prove effective, but the nag wouldn't move. The driver, who, it might be incidentally said, was an ashman, had a pretty fair sized club and knew how to wield it, too, but every time he administered a few persuading thuds the crowd yelled in disapproval, and still the horse stood on.

A little woman who had made her way through the crowd now stepped into the arena. She walked to the horse's head and glanced around, taking in the situation. Then she smiled indulgently at the people and pointed to a mirror in a large show window. People began to understand. The little woman deftly straightened the horse's sunbonnet, and with a glad shake of his head he allowed progress to march onward.—Sunny South.

Nagging Before Guests.

"Visiting about, as I do every summer," remarked a popular woman, "I cannot help being struck by certain faults of manner and, I might almost say, breeding, which are common among the nicest people, who would be the first to detect and criticise such solecisms in others. One habit is talking with each other to make conversation at the table, instead of to the guest. This is very common, although one would not think it possible, and the people who do it would be greatly astonished if they thought I referred to them. It is generally done with the idea of amusing the visitor, no doubt, but it is always annoying.

"Another habit, and this is much worse, is fault finding on the part of the mistress or master of the house. People should make it a rule never to blame a child or a servant or criticise each other's actions before a guest. A third person is always made uncomfortable by it, and feels almost as if he himself were included in the reprimand. But what is called 'nagging' between husband and wife is the worst of all. I know a couple who are otherwise perfectly charming and who are really fond of each other, but who are so continually squabbling and wrangling that I have stopped going there for no other reason. I simply cannot stand it—it is too depressing."—Chicago News.

California Pioneer Women.

If not the latest, the most unique in women's clubs is the California Women's Pioneer society. To be eligible to its membership a woman must have crossed the plains in an ox team before the year 1854. No less than 30 names adorn the charter roll. These early settlers in the then wild west not only talk to their hearts' content of the good old times, but many of them are able to recount deeds of daring and hairbreadth escapes.

After waiting years to be asked to join the California Men's Pioneer society these enterprising and not to be suppressed grandmothers, wishing recognition at the recent semicentennial celebration of their state, decided to draw up a constitution of their own setting forth their aspiration to keep alive the pioneer spirit. And they did.

The sequel to this feminine story has a masculine moral, for it is said that the whole state of California has depleted its prolific flower gardens in making bouquets for the Women's Pioneer society, while the high and mighty Men's Pioneer society, long the pet organization, finds its official nose sadly out of joint.

To Make Furs Look Like New.

When furs become worn or soiled at the neck, they may be renovated by gently rubbing with cotton batting saturated with gasoline, which should not be used in a room that has artificial heat or light. Axle grease, tar, paint and pitch may be removed by rubbing first with oil of turpentine and then with ether. Dark furs may be cleaned with fine cedar or mahogany sawdust which has been heated in an oven. Alaska sable, seal, electric seal, fox, etc., should be beaten with a switch until free from dust, then laid with the fur side up and the hot sawdust rubbed in. Be lavish with the sawdust and vigorous with the rubbing. After this place the garment upon feather pillows with the furry side down and beat well until all traces of the sawdust have disappeared. Then hang out in a shady place. White furs may be cleaned in the same way, using white cornmeal instead of the sawdust, or, if only slightly soiled, by rubbing well with magnesia in cakes. Wet furs should never be dried near the fire, but shaken and hung away in a cold room, then brushed.—Ladies' Home Journal.

English Wedding Customs.

English brides have not discarded the tradition, as have the brides of this country, and still wear their veils over their face in going to the altar. One exceptional bride who did so proves the rule. Custom is disregarded in low cut wedding gowns or those with transparent yoke and sleeves, a fashion which is considered objectionable by many of the older matrons. The English bride, however, is appealing for more rights. There is a demand now for the evening wedding, which is more picturesque and satisfactory in many ways than the morning or afternoon wedding. The Church of England being the power in England, there has been the rigid observance of canonical hours, and the so called breakfast followed the ceremony, the bride and groom being supposed to have received the sacrament before and to have fasted until the wedding feast. The canonical hour has been changed to 3 o'clock, it is now lawful to be married as late as that, and other innovations may follow.

Modest Miss Reynolds.

Miss Minnie J. Reynolds of Colorado has done almost the entire work of the traveling library committee since its formation. During the first year it was in her charge as secretary of the committee (the chairman living at a distance from Denver), and during the past year as chairman Miss Reynolds made the motion in the federation meeting to start the traveling libraries and was responsible for the movement by which was secured the appropriation for the Denver district libraries. She was a member of the committee from the Woman's club which secured the first appropriation for the state library back in the early days of suffrage. It gives us pleasure to state these facts because nearly everything that has been written about this work in the Denver press Miss Reynolds has written herself. She has time and again given full credit to every one else connected with the work, but has never mentioned her own connection with it.—Woman's Journal.

They Talk Like Josephine.

The smart girl of today is just as desirous for novelty in speech as she is for a new idea in dress or for the decoration of her home, so she has gone back to the time of Josephine and the empire gowns for her latest conversational effort. It was during the days of the unfortunate empress that the expression "Look at her lines" originated and was considered as the correct ejaculation when an elegant or grotesque figure crossed the speaker's field of vision, the clinging draperies which Josephine made popular accentuating beauties or deformities hitherto concealed. With the modern girl's sheathlike, snaky skirts, she has adopted the catchword of the first empire, and now at a tea, reception, theater or wherever fair women are gathered together the staccato monosyllables, "Look at her lines," or some one of the numerous paraphrases, as "Have you noticed Mrs. Blank's lines?" is to be heard on all sides.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Famous Yachtswomen.

Of American society women the number of yachting experts is fairly legion. The two most prominent, so far as records go, are Mrs. J. W. Martinez Cardeza and Susan de Forest Day-Parker. The former owns the steam yacht Eleanor, whose lines are familiar to port wardens and pilots the world over. It is an ideal yacht of the largest size, being 232 feet over all, 32 beam and 15 draft. Mrs. Cardeza's favorite cruise is from Philadelphia or New York to Newfoundland, where she has a hunting lodge in the middle of a noble wilderness.

The record of the steam yacht Scythian, which was owned and commanded by Susan de Forest Day-Parker, is familiar to all yachtsmen. One of her cruises was truly remarkable for the number of places visited and the distance covered inside of three months.—Marguerite Arlina Hamm in Woman's Home Companion.

The Sultan Against Education.

The sultan's decree that Turkish children shall not be educated in "the foreign way" any longer and that Turkish women shall not be allowed to have Christian companions has been received with different feelings, it is said. Several high officials are deeply displeased by the order, but one highly educated woman of rank, wife of a dignitary, is quoted as saying that her own experience had convinced her that it was much better to have no education than to learn what life might be, yet have to spend it in a harem. She had refused therefore to allow her own daughters to be educated as she had been and regards the sultan's decree as a wise one.

Retired on a Pension.

Mrs. Augusta Church of Buffalo, who has been matron at police headquarters in that city for several years and who through sickness has become incapacitated for service, has been retired, and will draw $25 a month salary during the remainder of her life. The police commissioners appointed Miss Anna S. Walter to be her successor. Miss Walter stands at the head of the civil service list. The salary is $600 per year. Miss Walter has had valuable experience in this line of work.

Marking Handkerchiefs.

A young woman has occupied some of her summer leisure in marking a dozen hemstitched linen handkerchiefs intended as a Christmas gift in a novel way. From the original signature of the future owner of the articles she has traced duplicates on the linen, copying each afterward with the finest of black working cotton such as is used to outline designs in fine doilies. The handkerchiefs are men's size and might be for her father or her brother, but are, in fact, for neither.—Harper's Bazar.

Honors In Law.

Miss Alice H. Day of Batavia, N. Y., was the only woman graduated in the law department of the University of Buffalo. Because she had not taken her whole course in that institution she was disqualified from taking the second scholarship prize, which she had won. It was awarded to the man next below her in rank, but who had the good fortune to be in the university long enough to entitle him to honors.

There are no less than 20 women from this country in French titled society, and they are by no means insignificantly placed. Among them are the Princess de Polignac, the Duchess de la Rochefoucauld, the Marquise de Ganay, Countess de Castellane, the Duchess de Bassano, and the rest of the list includes the oldest names in France.

Queen Alexandra is making the grandmother fashionable in London. It is reported that on her daily drive she usually has one of her grandchildren with her, and now the fashionable English dames are lavishing attentions on the little ones.

Marie Corelli, the authoress, has started a movement to organize Shakespeare clubs over the entire world. She believes that such a federation would stimulate a wider and more intelligent reading of the great poet's works.

[illegible] Bernhardt In the Lead.

[illegible] a recent garden party given by the Duchess of Sutherland Sarah Bernhardt was the most observed woman present, says a London correspondent. One who was there says that her pale rose silk gown, with broad applications of cream lace, was a revelation of artistic simplicity. A long, cream colored coat of silk strapped with cloth of the same color was worn over this dress, and Mme. Sarah's hat was a chef d'œuvre in black and white tulle covered with cream colored lace.

The New Woman In Norway.

The new woman has gained a victory in Norway, where she is numerically strong. She has finally persuaded the privy council to declare that hereafter brides need no longer vow to "obey" their husbands at the marriage ceremony unless they choose to do so. It is to be optional with the bride to publicly omit the little word that she usually says with mental reservation. Some of the king's councilors strongly objected to this innovation, but they were overruled.

Mother of a Veteran Rosebush.

The bush was planted in the year 1800 by Mrs. Lucilla Hurd, and it is stated on good authority that it has borne roses every year for 100 years. Mrs. Hurd, who planted the rosebush, was 94 years of age when she died.—

SAGE ADVICE OF A FATHER.

Counsel That All Young Men Entering Business Should Heed.

"My son," said the fond but wise parent, "you are leaving me to go out into the world. I have nothing to give you but advice. Never tell a lie. If you wish to put one in circulation, get it published. A lie cannot live, but it takes one a blamed long time to fade out of print.

"Always read your contract. A man might consider he was getting a sinecure if he were offered a position picking blossoms off a century plant; but, you see, he wouldn't have a remunerative occupation if he were paid on piecework.

"Be not overcritical. Even the most ordinary sort of a genius can tell when the other fellow is making a fool of himself.

"Remember that the young man, like the angler's worm, is rather better for being visibly alive.

"Be careful in the choice of your surroundings. Environment will do a great deal for a man. For example, flour and water in a china jug is cream sauce; in a pail on the sidewalk it is billsticker's paste.

"Don't forget that there's a time for everything and that everything should be done in its proper time. Never hunt for bargains in umbrellas on a rainy day.

"You may make enemies. If you know who they are, don't mention them. Silence is golden. It saves the money that might otherwise be spent in defending a libel suit. If you don't know who they are—well, abuse lavished on a concealed enemy is like charity indiscriminately bestowed. It's a good thing wasted."—New York Commercial Advertiser.

A GENTLE HINT.

In our style of climate, with its sudden changes of temperature,—rain, wind and sunshine often intermingled in a single day,—it is no wonder that our children, friends and relatives are so frequently taken from us by neglected colds, half the death resulting directly from this cause. A bottle of Boschee's German Syruy kept about home for immediate use will prevent serious sickness, a large doctor's bill, and perhaps death, by the use of three or four doses. A CITY OF MOURNING

BLACK DRAPERY MUFFLED THE TOLLING CHURCH BELLS.

SORROW EVERYWHERE APPARENT FOR THE PRESIDENT.

SCENE AT MILBURN HOUSE PATHETIC IN THE EXTREME.

MRS. M'KINLEY ACCOMPANYS REMAINS TO WASHINGTON.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 16.—Buffalo today became a city of mourning. The gay and flaming decorations of the Pan-American exposition gave way to the symbol of sorrow. The black drapery of the city's streets muffled the tolling bells of the churches. Bits of crepe appeared on every sleeve Sorrow was everywhere apparent. In the morning a simple service took place at the residence on Deleware avenue, where the martyred president died. A hymn was sung and prayer was offered over the dead body. That was all. Only the immediate family and friends and political assistants of the late president were present. The scene there was pathetic in the extreme. Then the body was borne out to the waiting cortege on the brawny shoulders of eight sailors and soldiers of the republic. The cortege passed through solid walls of living humanity, bareheaded and grief stricken, to the city hall where the body lay in state this afternoon. There a remarkable demonstration occurred which proved how close the president was to the hearts of the people. Arrangements has been made to allow the public to view the body from the time it arrived at about 1:30 until about 5 o'clock, but the people were wedged into the streets for blocks. Two lines were formed. They extended literally for miles. When 5 o'clock came 40,000 people had already passed and the crowds waiting below in the streets seemed undiminished. It was decided to extend the time until midnight Then for hours longer the streets were dense with people and a constant stream flowed up the steps of the broad entrance into the hall and passed the bier. When the doors were closed it is estimated that 80,000 people had viewed the remains, but thousands of disappointed ones were still in the streets.

The body will lie in the city hall until morning. It will be taken to the station by a military escort tomorrow morning and at 8:30 the funeral train, consisting of seven cars, will start for Washington over the Pennsylvania railroad. Mrs. McKinley, the president's cabinet and relatives and friends of the dead president will accompany the remains Mrs. McKinley bore up bravely to-day during the service at the Milburn house and Dr. Rixey, her physician, thinks she will be able to support her trying part in the state funeral at Washington.

Milburn House, Buffalo, Sept. 16.—The day was gray and cheerless Heavy clouds hung over the city at times breaking to let through a riffle of sunshine and then threatening to let loose a downpour upon the gathering multitude. The air was humid and heavy, and only a light wind from the south stirred the drooping flags and the emblems of mourning. The very element seemed to lend fitting accompaniment to the scene of sorrow about to be enacted. Long before the time set for the funeral services, the vicinity of the Milburn house was astir with preparations. At 9 o'clock long platoons of police officers, mounted and on foot, arrived at the grounds and were posted in details along the streets approaching the house. For a block in each direction the streets were roped off to keep back the gathering crowds. The vigilance of the officers in keeping back those not entitled to admission within the reserved area was redoubled and those summoned to the service, the uniformed escort of marchers and those whose business imperatively brought them there, passed within the four square precinct about the house where the body of the dead chief reposed. Major General Jno. R. Brooke, department commander of the east, who was personally in command of all the forces participating in the escort, arrived at 10 o'clock. He was in fatigue uniform, with service sword at his side Around his left arm was wound a heavy band of crepe. With him were his aides and a half score of other officers all in fatigue uniform with the badge of mourning on their sleeves. The time was now approaching for the services. The tramp of the assembling military could be heard and the walks up to the Milburn house began to be lined with those who were to be assembled about the bier. Even amid the stir of assembling a solemn and awelike silence prevailed and the division of the escort came to their posts with silent hands. At 10:30 o'clock the military and naval detachments took temporary stations on west Ferry street around the corner from the Milburn house.

Meantime the members of the cabinet, officials high in the government service and near friends of the martyred president began to fill the walks leading up to the entrance of the Milburn residence. They came separately and in groups, some walking while those in carriages were admitted within the roped enclosure up to the curb. Secretaries Wilson and Hitchcock drove up together, and with bowed heads entered the house. Gov. Odell of New York, drove up with his secretary and representative Lucius Littauer of New York, and following the governor came Major Gen. Roe commander of the national guard of New York with his staff of aides, all in full uniform. Seere[illegible] ed to the house with Mr. and M[illegible] Sprague, at whose house he has been a guest since first summoned to the city. Two and two, a long line of men of dignified bearing marched up to see the house—the foreign commissioners sent to the exposition and after them the state commissioners. With the foreigners was a colonel of the Mexican army in his uniform of black with scarlet stripes and peaked gold braided cap. The other members of the cabinet in the city, secretary Long, Attorney General Knok, Postmaster General Smith the close confidants and the friends of the late chief, senator Hanna, Judge Day, Governors Odell, Yates and Gregory; representatives Alexander and Ryan, Major General Brooke, E. H. Butler, H. H. Kohlsaat and many others.

The Service Begins.

It was just eight minutes before the opening of the service when a covered barouche drove up to the house bringing president Roosevelt and Mr. and Mrs. Wilcox at whose home he is a guest. The president looked very grave as he alighted and turned to assist Mrs. Wilcox from the carriage. His face did not relax into a smile to the salutations of those nearest the carriage, but he acknowledged the greetings silently and with an inclination of the head. Word passed up the well filled walk that the president had arrived and those waiting to gain entrance fell back making a narrow lane through which Mr. Roosevelt passed along to the house.

The service had already begun when there was a clatter of hoofs down the avenue and four high stepping black horses came into view drawing the hearse which was to bear the casket of the dead president. It was a heavy vehicle without plumes of any trappings to relieve the dead black. The horses too were not plumed or caprisoned and all four of them were black from nose to tip of tail. Two men were on the box, the driver with long lines to the tandem pairs, and the groom with folded arms sitting motionless. The hearse halted at the corner to await the conclusion of the services. Outside the house there was a half hour of silence and waiting. Within the house of death was woe unspeakable.

The Starry Banner He Loved.

The body lay in a black casket on a black bearskin rug. Over the lower limbs was flung the starry banner he had loved so well. The flowers were few as befitted the simple nature of the man. A spray of white erysantnemums, a flaming bunch of blood red American beauty roses and a magnificent bunch of violets were on the casket. That was all. Behind the head against a pier mirror between two curtained windows rested two superb wreaths of white astors and roses. These were the only flowers in the room.

The family had taken leave of their loved one before the others arrived Mrs. McKinley, the poor grief-crushed widow, had been led into the chamber by her physician, Dr. Rixey, and had sat a while alone with him who had supported and comforted her through all her years of wedded life. But though her support was gone she had not broken down. Dry-eyed she gazed upon him and fondled his face. She did not seem to realize that he was dead. Then she was led away by Dr. Rixey and took up her position at the head of the stairs where she could hear the service.

Grief of Friends.

The friends and public assistants of the dead president all had opportunity to view the remains before the services began. The members of the cabinet had taken their leave before the others arrived. They remained seated beside their dead chief while the sad procession viewed the body. They were on the north side of it. place directly at the head had been reserved for President Roosevelt. Secretary Root sat alongside this empty chair. Then came Attorney General Knox, Secretary Long, Hitchcock, Wilson and Postmaster General Smith, in order named. About a hundred in all saw the body. Some were overcome with grief at the sight of the thin, placid countenance that their frames shook in convulsive sobs. Several clung to the side of the bier and with difficulty could be persuaded to leave. Almost every face was tear stained. The great love for this man chocked all in the house.

President Roosevelt's Sorrow.

Just before 11 o'clock President Roosevelt entered, coming into the room from the library. After passing into the hall he had made his way around through the sitting room behind into the library. There was an instantaneous movement in the room as the president appeared. The procession was still passing from the south side around the head of the casket and back between it and the members of the cabinet seated at its side. Everyone rose and all eyes were turned toward the president. He moved forward again with the tide of the procession to his place at the head of the line of cabinet officers. He held himself erect, his left hand carrying his silk hat. Those who were coming toward him fell back on either side to let him pass. Te paused once or twice to shake hands silently but there was no smile to accompany his greetings. He too, like the man deep down in his seat against the wall, who had forgotten to rise when the president of the United States entered, seemed to be restraining a great grief. When President Roosevelt reached the head of the line he kept his face away from the casket. The infantryman guarding the dead stood before him rigid as a statute. Although the commander of chief approached until he could have touched him the soldier did not salute. The president spoke to Secretary Root or perhaps it would be more precise to say that the latter spoke to him. The president appeared to be steeling himself for a look into the face of him whose death had made him the first ruler of the world. The tension in the room w[illegible]. Everyone seemed to be waitin[illegible] The minister of the gospel stood with the holy book in his hand ready to begin. Perhaps it might have been 60 seconds. It seemed longer. Then the president turned and at the same time advanced a step. He bowed his head and looked down upon the man whose burden and responsibility he had taken up. Long he gazed, standing immovable save for a twitching of the muscles of the chin as he labored, with heavy breath to repress his emotion. At last he stepped back.

The pastor was at the door leading into the hall, a station whence his words could be heard at the head of the stairs. The signal was given and there welled out from the hall the beautiful words of "Lead, kindly light" sung by a quartette. It was President McKinley's favorite hymn. Everyone within sound of the music knew it and half of those in the room put their tears. Comptroller Dawes leaned against a bookcase and wept. President Roosevelt seemed to be swaying to and fro as if his footing were insecure.

When the singing ended the clergyman read from the words of the 15th chapter of the first Corinthians. All had risen as he began and remained standing throughout the remainder of the service. Again the voices rose with the words of "Nearer, my God to Thee," the very words President McKinley had repeated at intervals of consciousness during the day of agony before he died. As the music died away the pastor spoke again. "Let us pray," he said and every head fell upon its breast. He began his invocation with a stanza from a hymn sung in the Methodist church. His prayer was as follows:

"Oh God our help in ages past,
Our hope for years to come
Our shelter from the stormy blast,
And our eternal home."

We, Thy servants humbly beseech Thee for manifestations of Thy favor as we come into Thy presence. We laud and magnify Thy holy name and praise Thee for all Thy goodness. Be merciful unto us and bless us, as stricken with overwhelming sorrow we come to Thee. Forgive us for our doubts and fears and faltering faith, pardon all our sins and shortcomings and help us to say, "They will be done;" in this dark night of grief abide with us till the dawning. Speak to our troubled souls, O God, and give to us in this hour of unutterable grief the peace and quiet which Thy presence only can afford. We thank Thee that Thou answerest the sobbing sigh of the heart, and dost assure us that if a man die he shall live again. We praise Thee for Jesus Christ, Thy son, our Saviour and elder brother; that He came "to bring life and immortality to light," and because he lives we shall live also. We thank Thee that death is victory that "to die is gain." Have mercy upon us in this dispensation of Thy providence, we believe in Thee—we trust Thee—our God of love, "the same yesterday, today and forever."

We thank Thee for the unsullied life of Thy servant, our martyred president whom Thou hast taken to his coronation and we pray for the final triumph of all the divine principles of pure character and free government for which he stood while he lived and which were baptized by his blood in his death.

Hear our prayer for blessings of consolation upon all those who were associated with him in the administration of the affairs of the government especially vouchsafe Thy presence to Thy servant, who has been suddenly called to assume the holy responsibility of our chief magistrate.

"O God, bless our dear nation and guide the ship of state through stormy seas. Help Thy people to be brave to fight the battles of the Lord and wise to solve all the problems of freedom.

Graciously hear us for comforting blessings to rest upon the family circle of our departed friend. Tenderly sustain Thine hand-maiden upon whom the blow of this sorrow most heavily falls. Accompany her, O God, as Thou hast promised through this dark valley and shadow and may she fear no evil because Thou are with her.

All these things we ask in the name of Jesus Christ, our Lord, who has taught us when we pray to say—then followed the Lord's prayer.

May the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, the love of God, the Father and communion of the Holy Spirit, be with us all, evermore. Amen.

All present joined in the Lord's prayer as the minister repeated it, President Roosevelt's voice being audible at the back of the room. The services concluded with a simple benediction. The funeral director was about to step forward to place the cover on the casket when suddenly there was a movement behind Gov. Odell.

Senator Hanna who had risen saw that the last opportunity to look into the countenance of his dead friend had come. Pressing forward in an instant he was at the side of the casket and bending over and looking down into it. Almost two minutes passed and then he turned away and the coffin was closed.

It was within a minute of 11:30 when three long rolls of a muffled drum told those outside the house that the funeral cortege was about to appear. From the darkened rooms the assemblage began to file out to the street. Soon the walks and lawns were again covered with the silent throng with heads bared. At the moment the casket appeared "Nearer my God to Thee" ascended in subdued strains from one of the military bands.

Arrangements for Funeral.

Washington, Sept. 16.—Secretary Hay to-day issued to the public the following announcement concerning the funeral of President McKinley: "Department of State,

Washington, D. C., Sept. 16, 1901.

The remains of the late President of the United States, after lying in state in the city hall of Buffalo during the afternoon of Sunday, Sept. 15, will be removed to Washington by special train on Monday, Sept. 16, leaving Buffalo at 8:30 a. m., and reaching Washington at 9 p. m. The remains will then be carried, under the escort of a squadron of United States cavalry to the executive mansion, where they will rest until 9 o'clock in the morning of Tuesday, Sept. 17. They will then be carried to the capital, accompanied by a military and civil escort, the details of which will be given in a separate notice. The remains will there lie in state. Religious services will be held in the rotunda of the capitol on Wednesday, at 12 o'clock noon. At one o'clock the remains under military escort will be transferred to the train to be carried to Canton, Ohio, over the Pennsylvania railroad, arriving there on Thursday at 11 a. m., where arrangements for the final sepultre will be committed to the charge of the citizens of Canton, under the direction of a committee to be selected by the mayor of that city.

No ceremonies are expected in the cities and towns along the route of the funeral train beyond tolling of bells.

(Signed) JOHN HAY,
Secreaary of State.

The Death Mask Completed.

Milburn House, Buffalo, Sept. 16.—A death mask of the president's face was made at 7:20 o'clock. The mask was taken by Edward L. A. Pausch, of Hartford, Conn. Pausch has modelled the features of many of the distinguished men who have died in this country in recent years. The mask is a faithful reproduction of the late president McKinley's features.

WILL EXAMINE BULLETS.

Czolgosz Does Not Know President Is Dead.

Buffalo, Sept. 16.—The assassin Czolgosz does not yet know that President McKinley is dead and will probably not know it until he is arraigned for murder. He will be indicted by the grand jury probably today and the cases will then be removed to the supreme court. The arraignment will take place in that court and will be very soon, the exact time depending on the time of the returning of the indictment. No further attempts was made by the officers today to talk with Czolgosz nor was the theory of poisoned bullets taken up by the police. They feel confident that when the bullets remaining in the revolver are chemically examined as they undoubtedly will be, no poison will be found on them. As to Emma Goldman the situation stands unchanged, the police holding there is not sufficient evidence on which to ask for her extraditfon.

ANOTHER DOCTOR

Young Auburn Physician had too Much to Say.

NARROWLY ESCAPED LYNCHING

Had Said that McKinley Deserved it and that President Roosevelt Would be Next—Thinks Different Now.

Auburn, Ind., Sept. 16.—Dr. B. H. Stamets, a young physician enjoying a large practice in this city, was seized by Henry West, a blacksmith, and Jack Town, a fireman, and dragged down stairs from his office and narrowly escaped lynching. Stamets is accused by three men of saying, after the president was shot, "McKinley was only suffering what he had been instrumental in causing others to suffer and that in the event of McKinley's death, Roosevelt would probably meet a similar fate."

Stamets denied the assertion in local papers tonight, but affidavits of his accusers prompted the men in dragging him from his office. A mob of two hundred had gathered below and Sheriff Hathaway and Deputies had considerable trouble in separating the combatants. The sheriff still remains near the doctor's home, as the feeling against Stamets is very bitter and further trouble is feared.

The British squadron at Giberalter half masted flags on the announcement of the death of President McKinley and the garrison flags were also lowered to half mast. Rear Admiral Wilson sent condolences to Commander Comly of the U. S. training ship Alliance.

At the promenade concert given in Queen hall, London, Saturday evening the dead march in Saul was played out of respect to the memory of President McKinley, the entire audience and orchestra standing. In the same hall tonight will be played the Trauer march from Wagner's "Cotterdammerung."

M. C. Excursion Train to Indianapolis Smashed.

Toledo, Sept. 16.—Toledo & Ohio Central train No. 201, collided with a Michigan Central excursion train, bound from Detroit to Indianapolis in the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton yards here at 1:30 this morning. Fireman V. Rydman of Lima, of the Michigan Central train, and John Gillespie of Detroit, a passenger, were injured but not fatally. No great damage was done to either train.

Testing the Schoolmaster.

In the town records of the city of Boston there is a curious passage which records how a schoolmaster was examined and what happened. The manner in which the visit of inspection is recorded makes one incline to the view that the unlucky schoolmaster may not have had fair play, although if he was really inefficient he may be said to have been judged by his peers.

In the record for the 22d of May, 1722, it is set forth that:

"Coll Pen Townsend, Jeremiah Allen Esqr, & John Edwards together with the Select men, Vissitted the wrighting School at the Southerly End of Boston on Thursday the 24th apll 1722. and Examined the Scholars under mr Ames Angers tuition as to their proficiency in Reading writing Scyphering & the masters ability of teaching & Instructing youth his rules & methods therefore And are of Opinion That it will be no Service to the Town to Continue mr anger in that Employ."

Whereupon it was voted that the said Mr. Ames Anger should not continue master of the "Said South school."

It is true that nothing is said of the methods of spelling inculcated at the "wrighting School," and it is also possible that a clerk rather than the committee was responsible for the errors of the record, but there is certainly something absurd in the passage as it stands.

Mrs. Roosevelt Arrives in New York.

New York, Sept. 16.—Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, accompanied by her five children, nurse and maid, reached this city by steamer from Albany early Sunday morning. The party left Tahawas club Sunday morning going to Albany via Saratoga. After an early breakfast here the president's family, nurse and maid were driven to 34th street ferry. They left Long Island City soon after for Oyster Bay.

Mrs. Roosevelt said she did not know when she would go to Washington.

A SEAMAN KILLED

Accident on Schooner Canton at at Black River.

SHE LOST HER FOREMAST

Bad Wind Storm on Lake Michigan—The Schooner was Loaded with Stone—Owned in Cleveland.

Black River, Mich., Sept. 16.—In the heavy southeast gale last night the schooner Canton lost her foremast when off this port. George Hardt, a seaman, 54 years old, and hailing from Milwaukee, was instantly killed by the falling foreboom, and Edward Hardt, another seaman, whose home is not known, was seriously if not fatally injured.

The Canton was loaded with stone from Poole Island to Cleveland. In the heavy seas on Lake Huron last night she became unmanageable, and when an attempt was made to tack ship, the foremast broke off close to the deck, the boom falling on the two sailors. The falling foremast carried away all of the headgear and the main and mizzen top masts and the schooner fell into the though of the sea. It was with difficulty that she was anchored, and a signal of distress hoisted shortly after midnight.

It was answered by the Sturgeon point life saving crew, and the steamer Ida E., which was loading at Black River. The Ida E. took the Canton in tow for Alpena, arriving there this afternoon. Hart, the wounded man was brought ashore by the life savers and taken to Alpena. It is said he has two sons, one of whom is a wheelman on the steamer Lindsay. The Canton is leaking badly.

Scheme to Raise Township Taxes.

Northville, Mich., Sept. 16.—In the compilation of the state tax commission of the valuations of Wayne county the Northville Record sees a scheme to be later utilized by the board of supervisors to materially raise the valuations in the county and thus lower the city's portion of the taxes. The figures of the tax commission, gained by their "field workers," says the Record, shows that townships are only assessed at from 60 to 75 per cent of the real value, while property in the city of Detroit is shown to be assessed at 101 per cent of cash value,

The township of Northville is given as being assessed for only 71 per cent of true cash value. Plymouth at 72 per cent, Nankin 74, Dearborn 70, while Springwells is only given at 60 per cent. The opinion seems to prevail that the board of supervisors next year will use the tax commission's figures as a lever to change the present per cent of equalization, and saddle an additional per cent on the farm property of the country.

Michigan Union Memorial Service.

Lansing, Mich., Sept. 16.—Department Commander VanKleck, of the Michigan G. A. R., has issued general orders in which he says that "as a soldier fighting for the maintenance of his country's integrity, as a statesman legislating for his country's good, and as chief executive guiding the affairs of that country, the record of William McKinley places his name with those of Washington and Lincoln in the history of our national life."

Commander VanKleck desires that so far as possible there may be unity of action in all memorial services, and, therefore, requests all post commanders to arrange with citizens of their respective towns for a union memorial service on Thursday next.

Lizzie Palmer Drank Carbolic Acid—Recovery Doubtful.

Port Huron, Mich., Sept. 16.—Mrs. Lizzie Palmer took carbolic acid this morning with suicidal intent, and her life hangs in the balance. She was to have been married today to Louie Lambert of Detroit, so it is claimed, and disappointment at his non-arrival coupled with other sorrows, which on former occasions have landed her in jail for too frequent use of stimulants, prompted her to take her life today. She went to Shaw's drug store on Lapeer avenue and purchased the acid together with a bottle of alcohol, both of which she drank.

OUR PRESIDENT IS DEAD.

The shot which brought the President of the United States to his death bed, bows the nation in profound sorrow, yes, in deep humiliation. Without an exception, without regard to party or race or condition a great wave of indignation at the assassin and sorrow for the sufferer swept through the hearts of the people with the announcement of the crime. But in the minds of the American people indignation and revenge do not last long. When the news came on Saturday morning that President McKinley was dead every thinking man and woman in this country felt that he had sustained a personal loss. Every thought was one of sorrow and honest tears dimmed the eyes of many a strong man. For a few hours all thought of revenge is forgotten, the only thought is that of deepest grief for a man known to us all as the nation's "Best Beloved."

President McKinley was peculiar for his ideas of disliking anything in the line of antagonism. His whole political administration has been marked for its lack of strife of any kind. His worry in the administration of his official duties has been more to avoid antagonism, than for the actual smooth running of the government. It was on account of this peculiarity that he was beloved by every one, political friends and enemies alike, and on this account that he has sometimes been called a weak man, has been accused of being run by his advisers and managed by other men. Mr. McKinley was not a weak man and never gave up a point he once made up his mind was right.

Never was man so universally mourned as he and never was there a better cause for mourning. For a moment this nation forgets to think of the cause of his death to enter into the season of painful regret for his untimely demise. Just punishment will, in due time, be meeted out to all who assisted to destroy this innocent man, beloved and honored by a nation of honest hearted people.

A LIFE SENTENCE.

L. A. Weeks Found Guilty of Shooting Jennie Parish.

Flint, Mich., Sept. 16.—The trial of Lucius A. Weeks on the charge of shooting Jennie Parish in this city on the night of June 5, was completed in the circuit court Saturday at 4 o'clock, when the jury, after having been out for 40 minutes, rendered a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree. The prisoner was much affected, and there were tears in his eyes when, in response to the question of the judge whether he had anything to say why sentence should not be pronounced, he answered that he thought the jury had been prejudiced against him by reading of the shooting of the president. Judge Wisner told the prisoner that the president's assassination had nothing to do with it, and that under the evidence the jury could have arrived at no other verdict. He then sentenced the prisoner to Jackson for life at hard labor. Weeks' family broke down when sentence was pronounced, and after kissing them the condemned man was taken back to jail. He will be taken to Jackson as soon as possible.

MOURNING FOR SIXTY DAYS.

Knights Templar Have Recceived Orders From Grand Master.

Bryan, Texas, Sept. 16.—Grand Master Knight Templar Stoddard has issued the following order on the death of President McKinley to all subordinate commanderies in the United States:

To all Grand Commanders and all commanderies of subordinate commanderies under our jurisdiction:

Death, the silent monster has entered our asylum and laid his shand upon our frater, the president.

"The tear that we shed, though in silence it rolls, Shall long keep his memory green in our souls."

It is ordered that as a tribute of respect, the banners of the order be draped in mourning for a period of sixty days; that you set aside a page of your records and have it suitably inscribed to his memory; this order to be read at the head of the lines at the first conclave after its reception and that all templars duly observe the day of his interment.

NO SPECIAL TERM.

For Odell Announced that He Declined to Call.

Buffalo, Sept. 16.—Gov. Odell announced today that he had declined to call a special term of the supreme court to try the murderer of President McKinley because he believed that haste was not necessary. He said that the district attorney had assured him that the grand jury would indict and the case be on trial within 15 days and to call a special term and get a jury assembled would take more than that. The assassin is in the Erie county penitentiary.

The Penalty.

A Night of Terror.

"Awful anxiety was felt for the widow of the brave General Burnham of Machias, Me., when the doctors said she would die from Pneumonia before morning" writes Mrs. S. H. Lincoln, who attended her that awful night, but she begged for Dr. King's New Discovery, which had more than once saved her life and cured her of consumption. After taking, she slept all night. Further use entirely cured her." This marvellous medicine is guaranteed to cure all throat, chest and lung diseases. Only 50 cents and $1.00. Trial bottles free at C. A. Wright's drug store.

Ten Years' Trial

The Story of a Soldier's Struggle

By Brigadier General Charles King

Copyright, 1901, by Charles King

The general's smile broadened a bit, his eyes twinkling. It was not his wont to speak ill of any man, yet who in the old regiment had not heard how Nathan had striven for a staff position in the volunteers and totally failed? The editorial upbraiders of the administration, because it had frequently to say yes to certain importunities, had no idea how many thousand times the sorely bothered secretary and adjutant general had determinedly said no. In all probability they would only have been the more roundly abused had it been known. Nathan's "pull" with the Seattle was still there, but the president wouldn't listen to outside pleas for the promotion of regulars when the department shook its head. Before he could succeed in any of his schemes Nathan had found himself ordered aboard ship with his battery, now serving afoot as one of four companies of "red legged infantry," and away they went across the seas when the gold leaves of the majority were almost dangling before his eyes. Senior of his grade in the regiment, Nathan was not even trusted with the command of a battalion, and when not actually prostrated by seasickness his waking hours aboard ship 'twixt the Farallones and Honolulu were given over to the writing of urgent letters to friends and kindred and certain state officials, calling on them to see to it that he was appointed to the colonelcy of one of the volunteer regiments being raised on the Pacific coast, for that could be done by a governor whether the war department liked it or not and might insure his being ordered back to San Francisco. The list of casualties among the officers of the regulars at San Juan Hill came just in time to put him out of all conceit with the idea of heading a company in an attack on the walls of Manila, still bristling with Spanish Mausers. Everything toward securing that appointment man could do in the few days left him before putting to sea Nathan had conscientiously done, leaving to his lieutenant the duty of preparing the battery for the voyage and the possible campaign.

There was no cable to Honolulu, but there the flotilla had to stop four days for coal, and while there the O. and O. liner came after them with letters. "All well," wrote Mrs. Nathan's kinsfolk. "We have the governor's positive promise that you shall be made lieutenant colonel at least, but we've had to buy off Bent, to whom it was promised, and to 'touch' a dozen other fellows. We cannot buy off the colonel. Arrange to wait ten days at Honolulu, and the commission and order will reach you." Nathan knew that the corps commander would be along within that time and that he would never approve his detachment to the command of volunteers. Moreover, every officer and man might be needed for the fight at Manila. To appeal to the battalion commander or to Melville, the general at the head of the expedition, would be equally useless. The game was to appear to be full bent on going with the command, but to balk it somehow at Honolulu. Permission could not well be refused him to go ashore, since so many officers and men were accorded that privilege. He secured charming quarters at the Royal Hawaiian and gave a toothsome dinner to a jovial party of his cronies, but the general, who was bidden, pleaded a previous engagement. The chief surgeon, another officer included in the list, marveled for a moment at the unexpected courtesy, for he had very gruffly scouted Nathan's tentatives at Frisco when consulted as to the possibility of his getting a few weeks' sick leave or at least permission to delay, but the general showed his grim Scotch medicine man a paragraph from a letter just received from the commander of the forces, by this time himself on the way from the Golden Gate: "It is understood that Captain Nathan is moving heaven and earth to get a commission in the volunteers who are to remain in camp here. He may endeavor to be left behind on account of suppostitious illness at Honolulu, in which case let your chief surgeon examine him. Sawney will stand no nonsense. Captain Nathan should not be permitted to shirk this expedition."

"He won't be," said the brigade commander placidly as he refolded the letter. And when it was found that Nathan was ordering an undue quantity of his luggage ashore the battalion commander as placidly interposed. A tall, spare, almost saturnine veteran was the major, a soldier who had shouldered a musket with the very first and best of the state regiments that in 1861 were rushed to the defense of Washington, a man with the genius of a general bottled down for a generation under the strap of a lieutenant, a soldier in whose hands Nathan had about as much chance to shirk as he had to fly. The captain's shore leave expired at dawn, and the flotilla was to sail at noon the following day. The captain's dinner went off in style, with much native music and no little champagne, and then in the wee sma' hours, after the guests had been whisked away in Honolulu "flies," the night clerk was summoned to the captain's room and bidden to fetch a doctor in haste, and a local practitioner came and found the officer in well simulated agony and prescribed according to his lights and the captain's liver. He was amazed to receive a visit at breakfast time from a Scotch surgeon in chief and a stocky little adjutant, who demanded sight of and speech with his patient, to the end that Nathan was bidden to arise, quit his bed and go to the dock and thence to the ship. There was nothing the matter with him, said Major Sawney. A dose of salts would set him to rights, and Nathan's pains and preparations went for naught. He and his luggage were on the ship and off for Manila before the setting of the sun, but there, there did triumph await him in the shape of dispatches from the States to the effect that he was commissioned lieutenant colonel Second Columbias, and on acceptance, which he cabled at once, directed to report for duty with his regiment at San Francisco. The battalion went into the muddy trenches and the assault of Manila minus one ablebodied captain, who minded not the dollars it cost him to flit at once to Hongkong and thence by an O. and O. liner back to the States.

Not until among the last regiments to reach the islands did the Second Columbias appear along in December and were pushed forward to the eastward suburb in support of the First brigade, for insurgent cannon frowned from new made redoubts and bore full upon the unprotected lines along the Concordia, and 30,000 swarthy, scowling soldiery surrounded and hemmed in the slender force of invaders. All too late the government found its little army of occupation far outnumbered and sternly menaced at Manila and so rushed the regiments of regulars to the seaboard au secours. But long before the foremost could reach the shores of Luzon the blow had fallen. Aguinaldo had dashed his devoted followers upon the sturdy ranks in blue, and, regular and volunteer, the two little divisions about the beleaguered city were grappling with the overwhelming force of Tagalogs.

And in the dark hour just before the dawn of that radiant and most eventful Sunday of the first week in February a strange thing happened. Away out along the crooked estuary of the Concordia, fronting on the left the dim, gray stone walls of Santa Ana and on the right interminable thicket or well nigh impassable swamp, the thin line of the First division stretched from the Pasig at Pandacan point far across to old Fort San Antonio, on the bay, officers and men alike waiting and praying for the word that was to loose them from the leash and let them go in furious rush upon the swarms of dusky foemen who since 3 o'clock had been pouring in hot fire from the shelter of their stone and earthen walls and driving a storm of steel clad lead upon the unprotected lads in blue. In grim subordination they had obeyed the orders that forbade their turning a spade of earth for counter intrenchments lest the natives, who for weeks had been building redoubts and planting cannons, should accuse the Americans of hostile intent. Loyal to their duty and observant of instructions that were hard to appreciate or understand, they had borne the brunt of the storm and seen some of their best and bravest swept away, but ground their teeth and gripped their Springfields harder and took heart in the promise passed along the crouching line: "Our time will come, lads. Wait till broad daylight."

And now it was nearly 5, and from the shelter of old earthern walls and mounds across the crooked Tripa the Tagal rifles were pouring in heavy fire on the flank and even the rear of the Americans lying south of the bridge. Every company of the great Evergreens was hotly engaged, and the brigade commander galloped to his reserve, halted among the streets of Paco. The mountain guns of the regulars were bellowing from the left of the blockhouse at the Krupps under the convent walls at Santa Ana. The long rifled breechloaders at Battery knoll, in rear of the right of the brigade, were sending shrapnel spattering into the bamboo thickets where the insurgent Mausers were spitefully cracking. Everywhere, as the dawn began to streak the skies above the village roofs, the roar of battle stunned the ear, and men hugged the ground as the deadly hail whistled overhead, and the little native horses, the mounts of the staff and field officers, squealed and bit and kicked in nervous wrath at the unseen, hissing, vicious demons of the air that buzzed about their ears or bit or scored their way along, haunch and flank. Behind the stone wall, well within the limits of the eastward suburb, a lieutenant colonel, in natty khaki uniform, had dismounted and was expostulating with his pony as the general galloped up.

"Put two companies in at once on the right of the village, facing that shack yonder! What's the matter with your horse, colonel?"

"Seems to be scared, sir. I thought he was hit—he behaved so bad," was the faltering answer.

"Then mount my orderly's. He'll stand anything. You take the colonel's, Hanford," said the chief to the tall lad who rode at his heels. "Lively, now, Nathan, there's not a second to lose! I'll relieve you here with the Washoes."

Under the dim light of the street lamps, in the first gray mists of the morning, swinging up the main street in solid sets of fours, came a column of sturdy foot, striding as though burning with eagerness to get into the fight.

"Move your battalion into the side streets, right and left, Colonel Langdon," were the quick orders. "Keep them under shelter till I send for you. Now, then, what's the matter with those Columbias?" he snapped, eager, impatient, intolerant of delay. "Here, bring your men through this lane, captain!" And away went the general's protesting pony and a brace of aids-de-camp, two companies of the Columbias, arms at a trail, scurrying after them afoot. Something delayed their field officer—stirrups too long or too short. He was fiercely tugging at the leather on one side, his orderly bugler on the other. The little steed with which he had experienced such unaccountable difficulties displayed astonishing agility and zeal the moment the boy orderly straddled him and darted away on the trail of the Columbias without so much as a protest. Drawn up within a little walled inclosure the caissons of the mountain guns stood sheltered from the Mausers whistling overhead from the blazing front. A squad of eager drivers, crouching by the gate, snickered at the sight across the narrow way. "Nathan's very particular just where that hole's got to be punched," jeered a grizzled driver who had served in the old battery.

"Over at the right. Nathan only had four companies. Here comes Washoe now." And then at the right front, beyond the village walls, a mad cheer went up to the skies, followed by a crashing volley. The Columbias had burst from the thickets at the edge of the suburbs and made their dash to the banks of the stream. Oh, that they could only cross it and drive the lurking foe with dripping bayonets! But still the stern mandate came from the distant rear, "Defend, but don't advance beyond the line." Another instant and another cheer, ringing, hearty, spontaneous, went up among the teams and caissons of the battery, and the commander of the advancing regiment, halting in surprise at the sound of his own name, turned, saw the smiling, swarthy faces under the dim light of the street lamp and, half shaking a gauntleted fist, raised his campaign hat and smiled greeting and appreciation.

A moment later, his battalions carefully disposed, one on each side of the highway, under cover of the walls, the colonel turned his active little mount across the way, and "old hands" of Pawnee days and the lieutenant they knew and honored in the batteries faced each other under fire, and Langdon was grasping the brawny fists of men who were humble cannoneers the day they lifted up their voices in parting shout for the "best officer in Battery E." Again came the crash of volleys from the right front and the shriek of a Krupp shell overhead, and a staff officer came spurring back from the blockhouse up the highway. "Colonel Nathan here?" he shouted loud, insistent, imperative. A dozen voices answered, a dozen hands indicated the way. "The general wants you at the footbridge at once, sir," were the added words, and there was but scant respect in the tone. There was utter scorn of the etiquette of the service that demands of a mounted officer that he alight before addressing a senior afoot. Drowning men grasp at straws. Anything to temporize, Nathan seized eagerly the pretext. "If you intend that remark for me, sir," he said, "you will dismount and convey it with proper respect," but the aid had not even stopped to listen. He was spurring swiftly down the line of the Washoes crouching at the roadside, and there was marked difference in the tone with which he asked for Colonel Langdon. "Here!" sang the prompt answer as that officer instantly dropped his chat with the gunners and reined out into the road. The red was in the sky, the pallid light of dawn already strong enough to outline forms and figures close at hand, but all men's faces were drawn and wan. There had been long nights of vigil and later the strain of long hours under fire. Two men of the nearest company, close to the highroad, turned over on their backs, one with strange anguish in his boyish face, the other, after a moment's struggle, with staring, sightless eyes. Strong arms raised and bore them to the refuge of an adjoining wall. Low flying Mausers had found their billet in the recumbent line. "First blood for the Filipino," muttered a grizzled major, with an upward glance at Langdon, who was herding his men like a shepherd with his flock closer within the shelter of the lane. "Aye, but we'll have full satisfaction after sunup," cried the aid-de-camp, his voice quivering with excitement. "The general is waiting just across the little footbridge toward the knoll, sir. You can see almost their entire position from there. He wishes you to join him a moment. I'll guide you."

Along the lane they urged their steeds. A minute's swift trot brought them to the southern outskirts of the village, and the flats of the ricefields, seamed by little ridges of stiffened mud and streaked by winding estuaries, lay before them—the banks of the main stream, the Tripa, fringed with jetting fires. A narrow path ran to the edge of the slough that split the brigade in twain and turned back toward the rearward city. Beyond it dimly outlined forms crouched in the open fields behind the firing line of the Columbias. A frail footbridge, thrown up by the engineers, spanned the sluggish tide, and white chips flew from the hand rail as the top was grazed by whistling lead. Under a clump of bamboo at the edge of the lane three orderlies were holding a little bunch of horses. The officers, throwing themselves from saddle and bending low, sped swiftly out along the narrow dike and over the swaying bridge. "Where's Colonel Nathan?" demanded the chief as he saw his aid and Langdon. "I told you to find him first."

"I did, sir, and gave the message," was the instant reply.

Up from the knoll, where the field guns were thundering, with soldierly salute came the stalwart colonel of the Columbias. The commander of the Evergreens, silent and attentive, was already there and listening to the rapid instructions of the brigadier. These in swift, terse words were repeated to the other field officers as they reported. There was no mistaking the intensity of their zeal and interest. But still no Nathan appeared. "Never mind," said the chief, pointing to where the Columbias were volleying at the lines across the Tripa. "We'll find him out there with his men probably," and he led the way back across the slough. "Not much we won't," growled the colonel of the Columbias in satiric aside to silent Langdon. "If the general knew him as Melville does, he'd—know better. Big luck for Nathan he isn't in Melville's brigade!"

"Oh, never you fear but the old man'll cinch him," spoke up a staff officer in eager loyalty to his chief, stumbling on the dike as he spoke. "After you, colonel. By heaven, there's Nathan now!"

The light had broadened. The roofs and walls of Santa Ana stood in sharp, black silhouette against the orient sky. Forms and even faces now could be recognized a dozen rods away, and here at the edge of the Paco suburb, still sheltered by the walls, stood Nathan in crouching attitude, peering at them as they came. The general, turning abruptly to the right, had moved away toward the firing line. His aid swiftly followed, and Langdon, returning for his horse, came face to face at the end of the lane with the man who almost ten years before had driven him from the army. The silver leaf that told of equal grade in the volunteers gleamed on the shoulder of each, but one had worn it since the 1st of May, the other not until three months later. With the sound of every volley from beyond the Tripa a flight of bullets whistled across the dike and footbridge and swept the level fields. Erect and composed, Eric Langdon passed from the zone of fire into that of comparative safety to find the pathway blocked by this pallid man and nervous, fidgeting pony. The lieutenant colonel of the Columbias turned in sore embarrassment and funk, kicked the ribs of his luckless steed, then awkwardly backed him off the track and stood aside to let his senior by. With utter contempt in his frowning eyes Langdon looked his former captain in the face, passed him without a word and then was astonished to hear the well remembered voice, no longer loud and truculent, yet something almost like defiance or desperation rang in the harsh, tremulous announcement:

"I suppose you know that Melville's killed and we're ordered to fall back!"

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Meant What It Said.

"No," said the impecunious one, "you can't believe all that you see in the newspapers."

"Are you prepared to specify?" the other man asked.

"I am. I saw a statement in the financial columns that money was easy, but when I tried to negotiate a loan I found that the reverse was true."

"You misunderstood the paragraph. It didn't say the people were easy."—

How Pearls Are Sorted.

The average diver thinks it a fair day's work to secure 100 pearl oysters in 50 feet of water. After being taken ashore the mollusks are allowed to die, when their shells open of their own accord. The pearls are classified by passing them through a series of sieves, which assort them into different sizes. Those which are very small or defective are sold to make a preparation for sore eyes and nervous complaints that is very popular in the east.—Pearson's.

STILL UNSATISFACTORY.

Strike Settlement Seems to be Far Off.

Pittsburg, Sept. 16.—Matters pertaining to the settlement of the steel strike are in a very unsatisfactory state to-night. While the telegraphic notice was sent out last night by Secretary Williams to all vice-presidents declaring the strike at an end, it cannot be learned definitely that the official order has been issued by President Shaffer. Some of the local strikers declare they have had no such notice, and many of them say they will not return to work, order or no order because they are not recognized as union men. President Shaffer arrived home at an early hour this morning but denied himself to all callers. To-night his wife in answer to questions as to his whereabouts said he had received a special letter to-day calling him out of the city. To all intents and purposes the Amalgamted president might as well be in Siam as in the United States. He cannot be found, and the statement so anxiously looked for by all, giving officially the basis of settlement must be delayed until the gentleman consents.

A member of the advisory board said to-night that the official order calling the strike off has gone out and that the men generally will be at work to-morrow or within a day or two later.

What is considered the real conditions of the settlement, though not officially announced, are that the settlement was made only for the three companies in dispute, the American Tin Plate, the American Sheet Steel and the American Steel Hoop, and these companies are allowed to retain as non-union all mills started in any kind of shape since the strike order went into effect, the mills that were completely tied up by the strike are to remain union under the union scale. Nothing was said concerning the National Tube, the Federal or Nationanln Steel companies. The settlement means a big loss to the Amalgamated Association, but leaves it still a strong organization.

The tin plate workers who struck are in the worst plight of any of the strikers. Six tin plate plants have been started since the strike was ordered and the men formerly employed in these works will have to go back non-union, or remain idle.

What the outcome generally will be, cannot be determined for a day or two. All of the plants that have been idle are apparently ready for an early start. Most of them can resume tomorrow if the men report for work.

An English Country Bank.

Rural customers attach great importance to the bank's outward appearance. A thrifty tradesman having opened a deposit account with a bank distant some 30 miles from his home, the cashier had the curiosity to ask why he traveled so far when there was a branch of the same bank almost at his door. The depositor smiled knowingly, and replied. "I lodged opposite here all the time while this bank was being built, so I know it's safe." Balance sheets to the rustic are a meaningless and arbitrary arrangement of figures. Iron bars he understands.

In a northern city there is a bank widely known for the artistic merit of its doors. Designed by an eminent sculptor, they are executed in relief in copper or bronze and appear to represent tableaux from "Æsop's Fables" and Greek history. About a week after they were unveiled an old man who had been a depositor for many years withdrew his balance and took it to a rival bank almost opposite. Questioned as to his reason for changing, he replied: "I don't hold wi' them doors of theirs. Punched tin ain't businesslike, and it ain't safe."—Longman's.

A Dickens Letter.

George Manville Fenn is the possessor of a sheet of old fashioned blue wire woven note paper, which had its habitation for years upon the bill file of the tradesman to whom it was sent. It tells its own tale:

"Mr. Charles Dickens is much obliged to Mr. Claridge for the offer of Lord Byron's flute. But, as Mr. Dickens cannot play that instrument himself and has nobody in his house who can, he begs to decline the purchase, with thanks. Devonshire Terrace, twentieth June, 1848."

There is no visible mark of a smile upon the paper, says Mr. Fenn, but there seems to be one playing among the words, and one cannot help thinking that when Dickens wrote that he could not play the flute he must have recalled a certain flute serenade played at "Mrs. Todgers' Commercial Boarding House," written by him in 1844.—New York Tribune.

Perfumes Were Popular.

The rage for perfumes reached its height during the reign of Louis XV. Throughout the continent his court was known as the "scented court." It was then the custom when giving a large entertainment for the hostess to inform her guests what particular odor she would use for perfuming her rooms, and each guest would use that odor in making her toilet. At court a different perfume was used for each day of the week. Much more attention was paid to the use of the perfume than to soap and water, and cleanliness was not numbered among the virtues of that age.

Joke In a Needle's Point.

Some 30 years ago a firm in San Francisco sent to a Chinese house in Canton the smallest and finest kind of needle as a sample of our skill in delicate handicraft. It was returned to them with a hole through the point, which could only be seen with a microscope.—Stereoscopic Photograph.

MacQueen—Kingan.

A pretty home wedding took place in Tecumseh today, in which Miss Mary Agnes Kingan, of this city, was joined in the ties of wedlock with Mr. James W. MacQueen, of Wellsville, O.

The ceremony was solemnized at high noon at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Ellen Kingan, in the presence of a limited number of the friends and relatives of the principals, Rev. Jones, pastor of Tecumseh's First Presbyterian church being the officiant. The ring ceremony was observed, little Russell Doke, of Brownville, performing the office of ring bearer and Geraldine Orr, of Tecumseh, acting in the capacity of flower girl.

As the bride and groom approached the altar, Miss Anna Darling, of this place, tendered in an exquisite manner that beautiful and appropriate solo, "O promise me," Miss Ethel Doke rendering the accompaniment. Pending the administering of the marriage rites, the bridal party were stationed underneath a beautiful and artistic bower of asparagus, ferns and clematis, the monotony of the natural green being beautifully broken by bunches of roses, asters, chrysanthemums, which here and there dotted the sides and back of the bower.

The bride was tastefully gowned in a beautiful wedding garment of spotless white mull, trimmed becomingly with applique. She wore bride's roses in her hair and carried a bouquet of the same.

At the conclusion of the ceremony and congratulations, the bridal party and the guests adjourned to the dining room where they partook of an elegant wedding breakfast, after which the newly married couple were conveyed to the Detroit Southern depot where they boarded the train for the East.

The bride is one of Tecumseh's very best girls and counts her friends by the hundreds. She is an alumnis of the Tecumseh high school and of the State Normal college at Ysilanti. She is a teacher of recognized merit both at home and abroad and for several years has held a responsible position in the public schools of Wellsville, O. The groom is the city editor of the Wellsville Union and holds the position of city clerk of Wellsville. Mr. and Mrs. MacQueen will be at home in Wellsville after October 1.

A CENTURY'S GLORY.

Wonderful Night Scenes at the Pan-American—An Electrical Fairy Land.

Of all the wondrous scenes of scenic pageantry ever offered for pulic amusement and pleasure, the electrical display every evening at the Pan-American exposition in Buffalo exceeds in splendor and beauty anything ever attempted, either in ancient or modern times.

Seen from the towers of Statler's hotel, which adjoins the grounds, the sight is one never to be forgotten, and must be seen to be appreciated, for no language can ever do it justice.

Bye and bye—the Statler hotel referred to above has become in itself one of the "sights" of the Exposition, for in its own particular line it stands unrivaled as the largest and most unique hostelry ever planned and built.

Although only three stories high, it contains over 2100 rooms and can accommodate over 5000 guests. The dining room will seat 1200, and so perfect is the system and order with which this gigantic institution is run, that large parties of excursionist, often numbering hundreds are quickly taken care of without so much as a ripple of excitement.

At Statler's one can get a good, clean, comfortable room with breakfast and evening dinner for $2.00 and 2.50 a day, and not only enjoy the comfort of being close to the Exposition, but save all the expense and fatigue entailed by going to and from more remote quarters. For those who prefer not to board in the hotel, good rooms can be obtained on the European plan at $1.00 to $1.50 a day, and first-class meals may be had at Statler's down town restaurant, Ellicott Square, at very moderate prices.

State Fair at Pontiac.

The 52nd annual State Fair will be held at Pontiac Sept. 23-27. The buildings are new and ample, having been erected purposely to accommodate the State Fair. Railroad trains and electric cars run to the gates. One of the special days is Friday, the 27th, which has been designated Maccabee day, prizes being offered for K. O. T. M. and L. O. T. M. team drill.

CHURCH PEOPLE

Mourn for our Dead President McKinley.

UNION SERVICE

Held at Presbyterian Church in the Evening and a Special Service at Baptist Church in the Morning.

A union service was held at the Presbyterian church Sunday evening. This was memorial to President McKinley, at which all the ministers gave short addresses. Rev. Leslie Bower spoke of "Mr. McKinley as a Man and Christian." Rev. M. T. Seely on "Domestic Life of Mr. McKinley." Miss Barber on "His Love for Wife and Country." Rev. W. F. Jones on "McKinley's Public Career."

The G. A. R. passed resolutions on the death of the President and the meeting was very sincere and interesting. In the morning Rev. Bower preached a memorial sermon at the Baptist church and in part it was as follows:

The services at the Baptist church Sunday morning were fittingly appropriate to the occasion. The American flag and black bunting were very tastefully draped about the pulpit and railing of the choir loft. A picture of our honored president stood on an easel draped with bunting. White flowers, nature's emblem of purity, were in evidence and all added much to the impressiveness of the service.

The pastor took for his text II Samuel 3:38, "Know ye not That there is a Prince and a Great Man Fallen this day in Israel." My text is a part of David's eulogy at the grave of Abner.

What makes men great in the estimation of the world? In most cases the developement and use of a single faculty. Great artists, great physicians, great statesmen, great orators.

Virtues which make men great.

Truth and truthfulness. In relation to personal character, exact conformity of thought, word and deed with the real. Men may speak the truth with the lips, but be as unreal as an artificial rose. They may scorn the thought of telling a falsehood but in character be as false as the Pharisee, which has become a synonym of all that is unreal, untrue and hypocritical. "Thou desireth truth in the inward parts."

Truth as shown in dealing with others. Fulfilling obligations not merely to the letter but to the spirit. Natural openness of conduct, saying what you mean, and meaning what you say.

Justice.

Rendering to every one his due, right or desert. "Honor all men," "honor to whom honor," tribute to whom tribute." Honesty in dealing to the exclusion of one's personal interest, prepossessions and bias, an acknowledgement of favors thankfulness, gratitude.

Wisdom.

Cowper says, "Knowledge and wisdom far from being one, have oft times no connection. Knowledge dwells in heads replete with thoughts of other men, wisdom in minds attentive to their own. Knowledge a rude unprofitable mass, the mere materals with which wisdom builds. Till smoothed and squared and fitted to it its place, does but encumber whom it seems to enrich. Knowledge is proud that he has learned so much; wisdom is humble that he knows no more. Wisdom may be defined to be the selection of right ends, as well as right means.

"What is the chief end of man?" To glorify God and enjoy him forever. The fourth virtue of which we speak is Benevolence, as classed with charity. True benevolence marks a disposition made up of a choice and desire for the happiness of others and to do good to our fellow creatures. True benevolence then will involve self-denial, a renunciation of all that tends to injure ourselves or others and to do those things, which are for the benefit and profit of others. True benevolence will involve self devotion. The highest ideal of true greatness and goodness is entire self devotion to the good of others.

Christ is our great ideal of self devotion, of whom it is said "He pleased not himself," "not my will, said he, but thine be done," and in the last and final act, the giving of His life for the temporal and eternal good of mankind.

True benevolence will include self sacrifice. But self-sacirfice is no suicidal frenzy, no self annihilation. If a man saves that he may give to those who need; or econrmizes health and strength that he may work longer for others or studies self culture that he may better play his part in life's drama, to carry out the glorious conceptions of the great designer, that is self sacrifice. Those are true sacrifices, which have been done alone and are hidden away from the world.

The last virtue of which I speak is self-control, by which I mean the government and regulation of all our natural appetites, desires, passions and affections. Self-control is the government of the whole man, body, soul and spirit, the thought and intents of the heart, the heart stands for the inner life and is the source of whatever affects the outer life and character. For a man to conquer himself is the first and noblest of all victories.

No man can be truly great who is not good and no man is truly good unless he has complete control of all his desires, passions and affections. Every good man is truly great. To be great in the estimation of God is to have the spirit and likeness of Christ.

Truth, justice, wisdom, benevolence, self-control. These are the virtues that are absolutely necessary in the life and character of a great man. Our beloved president, whose death we mourn, and whose memory we shall always revere, possessed all these virtues to a marvelous degree and of him we may truly say as David said of Abner, "A prince and a great man has fallen."

Mrs. John Osborn.

Mrs. Anna E. Osborn, beloved wife of J. H. Osborn, who died at her home in this village Aug. 21, 1901, was born March 1, 1830 in the city of New York, a few weeks after the landing of her parents from England. She was baptized into the Tabernacle Baptist church by Dr. Edward Lathrop in 1843, when 21 years old. She came to Tecumseh became acquainted with J. H. Osborn and they were married Dec. 19, 1852.

Upon coming here she united with the Baptist church of this place and remained a faithful and loving worker up to the time of her last sickness. There were five children born to her, three of whom with the husband remain to mourn her departure, but two were waiting for her on the other shore. All is darkness now in the home for she was the light of it. Many daughters have done virtously but thou excellest them all.

VERY QUIET

Was the Wedding of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Ingersoll

SOLEMNIZED

At the Residence of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Waring.

Married at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Waring, at one o'clock to-day by Rev. W. F. Jones, W. J. Ingersoll and Miss Lillian Waring. Only the immediate relatives were present. Many friends of the bride had mistrusted for sometime that something was going to happen, but no one knew the exact day. The bride is one of Tecumseh's nicest girls and the groom is one of Lenawee county's brighest young attorneys. As the HERALD is going to press it is too late for an extended notice.

BASE BALL.

Saturdays game between the Royal Tigers Giants and home team was not as interesting to many as former games. The giants are a very strong aggreation, capable of holding their own with national league teams and the home team had no expedation of winning the game and were not disappointed as the score shows. Bussey, of Detroit, was in the box for Tecumseh and the Giants had little difficulty in finding his balls.

LITERARY NOTES.

Among the illustrated articles in the September Critic are Mr. Henry Shelton's review of "The Comic Paper in America" enlivened by many rare covers title-pages and cartoons. Mr. George Aitken's article on Swift's "Journal to Stella," introducing a production of Miss Dicksee's charming painting, and M. Paul Bourget's study of "Victor Hugo Romancier," printed in French and enriched by Bryden's wood-cut of the great poet, dramatist and novelist.

* * *

In fiction, the September McClure's lives up to the remarkably high standard set by the Midsummer Fiction Number. A delicious story comically illustrated by Henry Mayer is "The Man Who Gave No Tip," by Benjamin Ridgely; a story of real pathos is Kate M Cleary's "The Stepmother," beautifully illustrated by Frank DuMand; Frank H. Spearman's story, "Of the Old Guard—Dave Hawk, Conductor; Looter and Hero," with a fine picture of Dave by Jay Hambidge, is in that popular writer's best vein. And there are other excellent stories.

The Cosmopoliton's Pan-American souvenir will be an even finer number than that of the Chicago Fair. To those who have visited the Exposition it will recall vividly in days to come every feature they have seen and those who are unable to go there will secure such a comprehensive view of its main attractions as will be well worthy of preservation.

Doan's Kidney Pills cures sick kidneys

Cure all kidney ills.

W. S. Kilmer, passenger engineer on the M. C. Ry., residing at No. 214 Orange St., Jackson, Mich., says: "In 1895 I had considerable trouble with my kidneys from the result of a severe cold which settled there and though I tried every means at hand and treated with doctors the pains through the small of my back became more persistent and severe. To add to my troubles the kidney secretions were unnatural and irregular. At last I was obliged to lay off work. When at home getting no better under the treatment I was then taking, some one advised me to use Doan's Kidney Pills and I procured a box more out of curiosity than from any expectation that they might help me. Now I want this thoroughly understood, when I finished the box I went back to work without a pain or an ache. But to make matters doubly certain I took a second box. Since that time and that is three years ago, I have neither had an ache nor a pain. Is it any wonder that at this date, 1898, I recommend Doan's Kidney Pills."

Chopin on Piano Fingering.

This is from a fragment of piano fingering left by Chopin: "No one notices inequality in the power of the notes of a scale when it is played very fast and equally as regards time. In a good mechanism the aim is not to play everything with an equal sound, but to [illegible]ire a beautiful quality of touch [illegible] perfect shading.

[illegible] long time players have acted [illegible] nature in seeking to give equal [illegible] to each finger. On the contrary, each finger should have an appropriate part assigned it. The thumb has the greatest power, being the thickest finger and the freest. Then comes the little finger, at the other extremity of the hand. The middle finger is the main support of the hand and is assisted by the first. Finally comes the third, the weakest one.

"As to this Siamese twin of the middle finger some players try to force it with all their might to become independent, a thing impossible and most likely unnecessary. There are, then, many different qualities of sound, just as there are several fingers. The point is to utilize the differences, and this, in other words, is the art of fingering."—Huneker's "Chopin, the Man and His Music."

No Pipes Smoked in Cuba.

Cuba produces no tobacco for chewing or for pipe smoking. The Cubans who smoke pipes might be counted on one's fingers without making a second round of the fingers. The cigar and the cigarette prevail. To what extent the Cuban cigarette might ever become popular with American smokers is a matter beyond determination. It is certain that most Americans of prolonged residence become, if they be smokers, addicted to Cuban brands and find difficulty in weaning themselves back to American brands on their return.—Review of Reviews.

Mr. G. A. Stillman, a merchant of Tamplico, Ill. writes: "Foley's Kidney Cure is meeting with wonderful success. It has cured some cases here that physicians pronounced incurable. I myself am able to testify to its merits. My face to-day is a living picture of health, and Foley's Kidney Cure has made it such." J. J. Orr.

Danger in Damp Paper.

Most of the paper now used is made from wood and other vegetable fibers which are chemically not very different from the material of which a hayrick is composed. Consequently if paper is stacked damp heating is likely to take place just as it does with prematurely stacked hay, and at any time flames may burst out as the result of spontaneous combustion.

A Career Ending Joke.

This is a true story about one of the mayors of Kansas City. He was mayor when the incident occurred, not so very many years ago. Two newspaper men, both very good friends of the mayor, were about to leave [illegible], and they asked Mr. Mayor to help them celebrate their departure.

It was a hot day in summer, and after an hour or two of convivial indulgence, the mayor of Kansas City was very much under the influence of liquor. The newspaper men were feeling jovial, but they were still able to walk around. It finally became necessary to do something for the mayor. Seeing a fruit wagon pass, one of the newspaper men ran out and hailed the driver. When he drew up to the curb, he was asked whether or not he wanted to make $2. He replied that he most certainly did.

It was then explained to him that a drunken man would be stretched out in his wagon, face toward the sky, and that he must drive through all the business streets of the town and then take the man home.

Not knowing who his passenger was to be, the driver consented, and the joke was carried out to the letter. Through the streets of Kansas City the mayor of the town, stretched out on an open wagon asleep, was driven, and there was a placard that announced the cause of the strange plight fastened on the back of the wagon. The mayor was not re-elected.—Chicago Chronicle.

The Legend of the Snowdrop.

An old legend gives the following as the origin of the snowdrop: After Adam and Eve had been driven from the garden of Eden Eve was disconsolate. One day as she sat silently grieving an angel appeared and sought means to comfort her. She longed for the flowers, but the fast descending snow was wrapping the barren earth in a robe of white.

As the angel stood and spoke words of hope to the weeping, repentant woman he caught a snowflake, breathed gently upon it and said:

"Take form, pure snowflake, bud and blossom and be a comfort to humanity, now and forever."

In a twinkling the snowflake changed into a beautiful flower, as white and pure as the snow itself, and when Eve beheld the newborn blossom gladness and hope came to her heart, and she smiled through her tears.

Having fulfilled his mission of love, the angel departed, but where he had stood there immediately sprung up a circle of perfect snowdrops.

An Æolian Harp.

To make an æolian harp construct a box of very thin pine, cedar or other wood, five or six inches deep, seven or eight inches wide, with a length equal to that of the window in which it is to be placed. Across the top, near each end, glue a strip of wood half an inch high and a quarter of an inch thick for bridges. Into the ends of the box insert wooden pins, like those of a violin, to wind the strings around, two pins in each end. Make a sound hole in the middle of the top and string the box with small catgut or first fiddle strings. Fastening one end of each string to a metallic pin in one end of the box and carrying it over the bridges, wind it around the turning pin in the opposite end of the box. Tune the strings in unison and place the box in the window. It is better to have four strings, but a harp with a single string produces an exceedingly sweet melody.

THE OLD ROCKING HORSE.

Battered and bruised and worn and old,
Bereft of his mane and tail,
A veteran charger stanch and bold,
He has weathered life's fiercest gale—

The hero of many a gallant raid,
In many a bloodless war,
A soldier of fortune, undismayed
By battle and wound and scar!

'Neath the guiding touch of a little hand
He has traveled many a mile
Through the wonderful realms of Playlike Land,
Where the spirits of fancy smile.

But, strange to say, in his boldest fight,
Though he halted or rested not,
Through all his travels by day and night
He has stood in the selfsame spot!

He was ridden far, he was ridden hard,
He has borne fierce brunts and blows
And oft has felt, as a sweet reward,
A kiss on his wornout nose.

And, though he is rather the worse for wear
And is crippled and scarred and old,
In the eyes of his master he still is fair
And worth his weight in gold.

CARRYING OFF A BRIDE

By M. Quad.

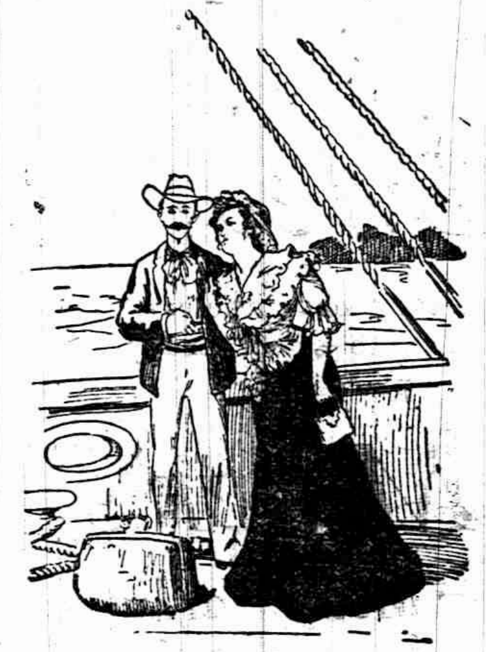
Copyright, 1901, by C. B. Lewis.

The crew of the American brig Nemo had been paid off at Cadiz and as mate I was looking for another berth when a young and good looking man who was strolling about the wharf as if in search of some one accosted me with an inquiry as to my capability as a navigator and later on asked me to accompany him to a cafe for a talk. As the young man was a Brazilian and a landsman my curiosity was naturally aroused. He was rather slow in coming to the point, being evidently desirous of sizing me up, and I had begun to grow a little impatient when he leaned across the table and said:

"Senor, I have decided to trust you and tell you the truth. It is an expedition to carry off a young lady."

"If it is a scheme to abduct a woman, I want nothing to do with it," I replied.

"Do not mistake me, senor. I am a Brazilian. I am from one of the highest families in our country. I am in love with a Spanish lady, a young lady of highest birth, but her people are opposed to our marriage. I am not only in love with her, but she returns my passion. She has vowed to the Virgin that she will never give her hand to another. Indeed, she is ready to die if she cannot marry me."



A FAIRER GIRL I NEVER LOOKED UPON.

"And why do her people object?" I asked, thinking that if his looks did not belie his character any father in Spain might be proud of him for a son-in-law.

"It was a feud between our fathers, senor, partly political and partly business. There was bad blood, and, though my father died years ago, Don Ramirez still holds his bitterness. He has a son with whom I have fought a duel, and that I wounded and vanquished him has but added to the bitterness of the situation."

"Why, this Don Raminez is a government official of some sort, isn't he?"

"He is governor of the province of Cadiz, senor."

"If he is rich and powerful and opposed to the marriage, your cake is dough. You seem to run more of a chance of being shot than of becoming his son-in-law."

Senor Da Costa, as he had given me his name, looked troubled for a moment, and then a flash came to his eyes as he quietly asked:

"In your country, senor, what do they do in such cases?"

"The lovers? Well, if the old folks are opposed there is generally a runaway match."

"I have heard so, and there will be one in this case. We would both have it otherwise, but it is the last resort. I must take the senorita to Brazil to become my wife. It was settled that way last evening."

"But have you counted on the old man?" I asked, a little annoyed by the young man's coolness in disposing of the case. "He'll be after you in two hours, and he has the legal right to take his daughter off the steamer and put you behind the bars. I should say he would be a bad man to fool with."

"Listen, senor," quietly replied the lover. "You will find in this port a craft for sale or charter. She may be small, but she must be fast. It will be better for many reasons that she is a sail vessel. You shall buy her and clear her for some western port, and I will sail away with the senorita, and she will become my wife."

"But we shall be pursued," I said.

He shrugged his shoulders and smiled.

"And if captured it will mean years of imprisonment for me."

"Your pay will be commensurate with the risks, senor. Let us waste no more time. Set forth at once and find a craft."

At the end of another half hour we had the details arranged as far as possible, and I was ready to begin my share of the work. Within 24 hours I had found a schooner yacht from the Mediterranean, an English built craft whose owner had tired of playing sailor and left her in the hands of a broker for sale. It required a week to repaint, repair, find a crew and put provisions aboard, and Da Costa was ready with $2 wherever there was need for $1. It was given out that a yacht had been bought for a resident of the Azores and was to be delivered there, and there was no trouble about her clearance.

While knowing, of course, that Da Costa was in Cadiz, it appeared that Don Raminez had neither imprisoned his daughter nor set an extra watch on her movements. To dodge her duenna and escape from the house and grounds and make her way to an appointed rendezvous must have been a difficult matter, but she accomplished it, and two hours after dark one evening a boat brought the pair of lovers aboard. Ten minutes later we were under way. A fairer girl I never looked upon, and she was as brave as she was fair.

We left port with a fair wind and carried it all night as we headed out into the Atlantic, and the yacht slipped along as if driven by steam. We had got away so quietly that I did not look for pursuit, but daylight had scarcely broken when we found a steamer in our wake. As I afterward ascertained, the girl had been missed early in the night, the sailing of the yacht discovered, and while one steamer was headed for the Canaries a second took the course for Rio and was soon overhauling us.

At noon the steamer came up with us. The brother was aboard of her, while the father had taken the other route. She came slashing alongside, with shouts and yells from her crew, thinking to make an easy capture, but as there were no armed men aboard she quickly sheered off before our rifles. Within the next two hours she made three different attempts to crash into us, but each time our fire, which was not meant to kill, drove the men from the pilothouse and confused all. Then she settled down to pursue us, and, as a matter of fact, she hung to us for 48 hours. She had come out unprepared with fuel or provisions, however, and at last had to turn about and head for Cadiz. By the time she reached port it was too late to think of further pursuit, and we were left to make our voyage in peace and land our passengers in due time at Rio. I learned that Don Ramirez and the Spanish government kicked up a great row over the affair, and there was a lot of correspondence and demands and red fire, but Da Costa won his bride, and the rest of us got safely away with our reward, and the obstinate old father had nothing to do but chew the rag and yell "Caramba!"

German Agriculture and Industry.

The old simple life is doomed. Prices and wages fall in the country as they rise in the centers of industrialism. Germany grows richer, but German agriculturists grow poorer. "Wealth accumulates and men decay." The country, from a variety of causes, will probably take longer in the killing than it has done with us. The landlord farmer saves one man's profit which British agriculture is called on to find; so long as he remains the land is at least unburdened by rent. The laborer boarder cuts off one source of outgoing. So long as he remains it is at least cheaper to feed ten mouths from one dish than from ten.

The political influence of agriculture may bolster up prices awhile. But depopulation must come in the end. It is arriving already. The nobility will not be content forever to remain poorer than their social inferiors. As yet there are few great fortunes, though many small ones, in the world of German industry, but when they come the nobility will probably find even a "von" small compensation for the prohibition to share them. Berlin is already one of the most brilliant of European capitals, and the officers of its garrison will be increasingly loath to say goodby to its amenities. The more they incline to let their land and live on rent the less rent there can be to live on.

At the other end of the scale the laborer will become less docile as the emissaries of social democracy hawk their pamphlets from hut to hut. He will strike out for a life of more risk and more freedom and enjoyment—the life of the factory, the trades union, and the beershop.—Blackwood's Magazine.

English Flat Fish.

For all kinds of flat fish London is the very finest market in the world. Nowhere are these delicate and justly prized fish to be had in such quantities or in such uniform and constant supply. Soles, turbot and brill are in season in every month in the year; they never go out of condition, and the supply never fails. Of the inferior kinds, we mention plaice and flounders elsewhere, but it should be remembered that in the months of February, March and April they are out of season and absolutely worthless. Among the "prime" flat fish, fashion or change of taste has recently rearranged the order of precedence—and of price. Formerly turbot, by general consent, held first place. Turbot and lobster sauce was so much a necessary part of a dinner party that special "turbot plates" were made to hold the fine fish which, according to custom, appeared on the table.

The splendid and very large plates made in China in the end of the last century as part of dinner sets for the English market were destined for this purpose, though now sold as costly bric-a-brac. Sole was much less expensive, and brill was a cheap fish. Now sole is the dearest of all fish except salmon and trout, averaging from 1s. 6d. to 2s. per pound, while brill has so risen in popularity that there is seldom a difference of a penny per pound between the price of this fish and that of turbot. Another flat fish much prized for years in the north of England is gradually finding its way into the London fish shops. This is halibut, the largest of the flat fish. They have been caught weighing as much as 220 pounds, and 60 pounds is a common size.—Cornhill Magazine.

The [illegible] "going to Canossa" refers to the humiliating pilgrimage made by the Emperor Henry IV to Italy in the year 1077. Henry had objected to the claims advanced by Gregory Hildebrand and, refusing to submit, was excommunicated by that pontiff. The emperor at first laughed at the sentence, but took a more serious view when he found himself deserted even by his personal attendants and resolved on a journey to Italy to make his peace with the pope. The latter was then at the Castle of Canossa, a fortress of the Countess Mathilda and situated in the mountains of Modena. Thither the emperor hastened, but the pope refused to see him save under the most degrading conditions.

The desperate situation of Henry compelled him to submit, and for three days and nights, barefooted and bareheaded, clad only in a hair shirt, the raiment of a penitent, he waited at the gate. At the end of this fearful penance, which was undergone in the month of January, he was admitted to the papal presence, was absolved and received his dominion as a gift from the pope. The expression has ever since been current as indicative of abject submission on any terms imposed by the conqueror.

Queer Things to Eat.

Just before the Franco-German war a traveling quack in France employed as his clown, after the fashion of the day, a man named Tore, who testified to the excellence of his master's cure for indigestion by swallowing corks and pebbles. After leaving the quack he enlisted and in the presence of Dr. Lorentz tore open a live cat, sucked its blood and devoured it. He also ate in the same way living snakes, grinding their heads between his teeth. During the war he conveyed secret information for the French army by swallowing a small box with a written paper inside it, but he was at last detected by the Prussians and punished [illegible]

DETROIT'S FAIR DAUGHTER.

Miss Isabel Catherine Weir, daughter of the late Judge Weir, was unanimously chosen by the people of Detroit to impersonate Mme. de Cadillac at the recent bicentenary celebration of the founding of that city. On her mother's side she is directly descended from John Casse St. Aubin, who was one of the seigneurs to land with Cadillac on the shores of Detroit river.

Miss Weir is a tall, stately brunette and is prominent in many charities in Detroit. At the time of the war over Cuba she was untiring in patriotic efforts. She possesses a charming soprano voice and is considered a promising artist. Her education was gained at the Georgetown Visitation academy at Washington.

Noun, Not Adverb.

When General Grant was in China, says a contributor to Short Stories, he journeyed by water from Tien-tsin to Peking. One morning there was no wind, and the coolies, walking along the river bank, pulled the houseboat. They made little progress, and finally the general called his Chinese servant and said:

"Boy, why for these coolies no can walkee more fast?"

"Must talkee lowder," the boy replied.

The general, thinking the boy's meaning was that he should speak in a tone the coolies could overhear, raised his voice and repeated:

"Why for these coolies no can walkee more fast?"

To which the boy imperturbably answered as before, "Must talkee lowder."

Several times this dialogue was repeated, and General Grant did talkee louder, until he fairly shouted.

At last the boy slightly varied his response: "No 'casion speak so high," he said. "More better talkee lowder."

Our hero was just beginning to feel like Alice in Wonderland when a ray of light seemed to flash across the mind of the boy, and he rushed to the end of the boat, seized the captain's arm and, dragging him to General Grant, exclaimed:

"This man belong [pidgin English for 'is'] lowder: just now can talkee he."

General Grant saw the joke. On Chinese boats the captain is called "lowder!"

Pulled Lincoln's Hair.

While Mr. Lincoln was living in Springfield a judge of the city, who was one of the leading and most influential citizens of the place, had occasion to call upon him. Mr. Lincoln was not overparticular in his matter of dress and was also careless in his manners. The judge was ushered into the parlor, where he found Mr. Lincoln sprawled out across a couple of chairs, reclining at his ease. The judge was asked to be seated and, without changing his position in the least, Mr. Lincoln entered into conversation with his visitor.

While the two men were talking Mrs. Lincoln entered the room. She was of course greatly embarrassed at Mr. Lincoln's offhand manner of entertaining his caller, and, stepping up behind her husband, she grasped him by the hair and twitched his head about, at the same time looking at him reprovingly.

Mr. Lincoln apparently did not notice the rebuke. He simply looked up at his wife, then across to the judge and, without rising, said:

"Little Mary, allow me to introduce you to my friend, Judge So-and-so."

It will be remembered that Mrs. Lincoln's maiden name was Mary Todd and that she was very short in stature. —Leslie's Monthly.

Knocked Her Out With a Look.

While talking of the many notable people he met during his pugilistic career John L. Sullivan said one day in New York: "Once when I was in Sydney I had a suit of rooms directly over Sarah Bernhardt. I never met the lady, and I didn't much care. She was jabbering French all the time and was rehearsing constantly in her room. I heard so much of it that I pretty near had the willies. One night I happened to follow Sarah into her majesty's theater in Sydney, and I had a good chance to size her up. She was a featherweight all right, and there was so much powder on her face that I thought she'd made a mistake. She got a look at me, and because I had been so much annoyed with her jabbering I scowled at her—gave her the look that used to scare the dubs who tried to stay four rounds with me. Well, sir, Sarah gave one long, mournful howl and fainted away. After that she didn't jabber any more, for she'd found out who was living up stairs."

Peel Didn't Know Tennyson.

Peel regarded all light litterateurs as triflers and poets with their unprofitable pursuits as the butterflies of the human species. Carlyle had prompted Milnes to press Tennyson's claims for a pension. The rival claimant was Sheridan Knowles, the popular dramatist.

Peel consulted Milnes as to the course which he ought to take, accompanying the appeal by the statement that for himself he knew absolutely nothing either of Mr. Tennyson or Mr. Knowles.

"What!" said Milnes. "Have you never [illegible] the name of Sheridan Knowles on a playbill?"

"No," replied Peel.

"And have you never read a poem of Tennyson?"

"No," was again the answer, accompanied by a request that Milnes would let him see something which Tennyson had written. Accordingly Milnes sent to Sir Robert Peel the two poems of "Locksley Hall" and "Ulysses."

A GENTLE HINT.

In our style of climate, with its sudden changes of temperature,—rain, wind and sunshine often intermingled in a single day,—it is no wonder that our children, friends and relatives are so frequently taken from us by neglected colds, half the death resulting directly from this cause. A bottle of Boschee's German Syruy kept about home for immediate use will prevent serious sickness, a large doctor's bill, and perhaps death, by the use of three or four doses. For curing Consumption Hemorrhages, Pneumonia, Severe Coughs, Croup, or any disease of the Throat or Lungs, its success is simply wonderful, as your druggist will tell you. SORROW STRICKEN

Mourning in the Old Home of President McKinley.

THE CITY CLOTHED IN BLACK

Remains of Beloved President Borne to Final Resting Place Today—Thousands Took a Final Farewell—Pathetic Scenes at the Court House—Tons of Flowers Received—Mrs. McKinley Will Not Attend.

Canton, O., Sept. 19.—Tenderly and reverently those who had known William McKinley best yesterday received his martyred body into their arms. They had forgotten the illustrious career of the statesman in the loss of a great personal friend who had grown dearer to them with the passing of the years. They hardly noticed the president of the United States or his cabinet or the generals and admirals in their resplendent uniforms. The beautiful flag-draped casket which contained the body of their friend and fellow townsman held all their thoughts. He had left them two weeks ago yesterday in the full tide of strength of a glorious manhood, and they had brought him back dead. Anguish was in the heart of every man, woman and child. The entire population of the little city and thousands from all over Ohio, the full strength of the national guard of the state, eight regiments, three batteries of artillery, one battalion of engineers, 5,000 men in all, the governor, lieutenant-governor and a justice of the supreme court, representing the three branches of the state government, were at the station to receive the remains. The whole town was in deep black. The only house in all this sorrow-stricken city, strange as it may seem, without a touch of mourning drapery, was the old familiar McKinley cottage on North Market street, to which so many distinguished men in the country have made pilgrimages in the days that are gone. The blinds were drawn, but there was no outward token of the blow that had robbed it of its most precious possession. The flowers bloomed on the lawn as they did two weeks ago. There was not even a bow of crepe upon the door when the stricken widow was carried by Abner McKinley and Dr. Rixey through it into the darkened home from which the light had flown forever. Only the hitching-post at the curb in front of the residence had been swatched in black by the citizens in order that it might conform to the general scheme of mourning decoration. The scene as the procession bore the body to the court house, where it lay in state in the afternoon, could not compare with the infinite sadness of that endless double line of broken-hearted people who streamed steadily through the dimly lighted corridors of the building from the time the coffin was opened until it was taken home to the sorrowing widow at nightfall. They stepped softly lest their footfalls wake their friend from his last long sleep. Tears came unbidden to wet the bier. Perhaps it was the great change that had come upon the countenance which moved them more than the sight of the familiar features. The signs of discoloration which appeared upon the brow and cheeks Tuesday in the rotunda of the capitol at Washington had deepened. The lips had become livid. All but two of the lights of the chandelier above the head were extinguished in order that the change might appear less noticeable, but everyone who viewed the remains remarked the darkened features and the ghastly lips. When the body was taken away thousands were still in line and the committee in charge of the arrangements was appealed to to allow a further opportunity to view the remains this morning before they are taken to the church. But this had to be reluctantly denied to them, and the casket may never be opened again. The funeral services will take place at 1:30 p. m. at the First M. E. church, of which the martyred president was a communicant and trustee. They will be brief by the expressed wish of the family. Rev. O. M. Milligan, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, in which President and Mrs. McKinley were married 30 years ago, will make the opening prayer. Dr. John Hall of the Trinity Lutheran church will make the first scriptural reading, and Dr. E. P. Herbruck of the Trinity Reform church the second. Dr. C. E. Manchester, pastor of the late president's church, will deliver the only address. A quartet will sing "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere," and another quartet will render Cardinal Newman's hymn, "Lead Kindly Light." An imposing procession, consisting of many of the G. A. R. posts in the state, the national guard of Ohio, details of regulars from all branches of the service, fraternal, social and civil organizations, and representations of commercial bodies from all over the country, the governors of several states, with their

More Than 55,000 People Saw the Face of

OUR MARTYRED PRESIDENT

Services Were Held Under the Great White Dome of the Capitol—Representatives From Every Nation Paid Tribute to Our Stricken Chief Magistrate—All Present Imbued With Sentiment of Hallowed Resignation—Remains Enroute to Canton.

Washington, Sept. 18.—All that is mortal of William McKinley is speeding toward its last earthly resting place at his beloved home in Canton after the nation had officially and with state ceremony paid its tribute of respect and love to the memory of its stricken chief magistrate. This was almost the closing act in the awful tragedy which has drenched the world in tears. Under the great white dome of the capitol the funeral services of were held yesterday over the remains of the dead president. It was eminently fitting that the services should be conducted in that beautiful rotunda hallowed by the history of the last sad rites of two other martyrs to the cause of the republic. As befitted the occasion and the character of the man whose remains were lying cold and rigid in the narrow embrace of the metallic casket, the services were simple. They were conducted in accordance with the rites of the Methodist Episcopal church, of which President McKinley was a life-long member. Consisting only of two hymns, a song, a prayer, an address and a benediction, they were beautiful and solemnly impressive. Gathered around the bier were representatives of every phase of American national life, including the president and the only surviving ex-president of the United States, together with representatives at this capitol of almost every nation of the earth. Great Britain, France Germany, Italy, Spain, and all the republics to the southward of the United States mingled their tears with

Despite the fact that no attempt had been made to decorate the interior of the rotunda beyond the arrangements made about the catafalque, the assemblage presented a memorable sight. The sombre black of the attire of the hundreds of civilians present was splashed brilliantly with the blue and gold of the representatives of the army and navy and the court costumes of the diplomatic corps. As the sweet notes of Mr. McKinley's favorite hymn, "Lead Kindly Light," floated through the great rotunda the assemblage rose to its feet. Bared heads were bowed and eyes streamed with tears. At the conclusion of the hymn, as Rev. Dr. Naylor, presiding elder of the Washington district, rose to offer prayer, the hush that fell upon the people was profound. When in conclusion he repeated the immortal words of the Lord's prayer, the great audience joined solemnly with him. The murmur of their voices resembled nothing less than the roll of far distant surf.

"Sometime We'll Understand."

Scarcely had the word Amen been breathed when the liquid tone of that sweetly pleading song, "Sometime We'll Understand," went straight to the heart of every auditor. The solo was sung by Mrs. Thomas C. Noyes of this city and the beautiful refrain was echoed and re-echoed by the double quartette choir.

The venerable Bishop Edward G. Andrews of Ohio, the oldest bishop of the Methodist Episcopal church, then took his position at the head of the bier. A gentle breeze through the rotunda stirred the delicate blooms which lay upon the coffin and the "peace that passeth all understanding" seemed to rest upon the venerable man's countenance as he began his eulogy of the life and works of William McKinley. His words were simple but his whole heart was in every one of them. His tribute to the Christian fortitude of the dead president was impressive. [illegible] clusion of the sermon the [illegible] as if by prearrangement, joined the choir in singing "Nearer My God to Thee." All present seemed to be imbued with a sentiment of hallowed resignation as the divine blessing was asked by the Rev. W. H. Chapman, acting pastor of the Metropolitan M. E. church, upon both the living and the dead.

Mrs. McKinley, bereft of husband and prostrated by her overwhelming sorrow, did not attend the services at the capitol. It was deemed wise by those now nearest and dearest to her that she should not undergo the ordeal her attendance would entail upon her. She remained at the White house comforted by every attention that loving thoughtfulness could suggest.

Slight Rain Caused Discomfort.

Arrangements for the movement of the funeral cortege from the White house to the capitol were completed Monday night after the remains of the president had been deposited in the historic east room of the mansion. Monday was a perfect autumn day, but Tuesday morning dawned gray and dreary. The sky was overcast with low flying clouds. Nature itself seemed to be in mourning for the nation's dead. As the hours passed dashes of rain fell at intervals, but despite this discomfort tens of thousands of sorrowing people appeared early upon the steps. Pennsylvania avenue from the White house to the capitol was massed with an impenetrable cordon of people, wishing in this way to pay final tribute of love and respect for the dead As the funeral cortege, escorted by troops representing every department of the nation's martial service and by representatives of religious and civic organizations, passed down the broad thoroughfare to the solemn notes of the Dead March from Saul, wailed by the bands, the sorrowing people bared their heads despite the rain, and the many tear-stained faces bespoke their grief more eloquently than words. It was a silent throng. Not a sound was heard. With aching hearts all remembered that only a few months ago the dead president then in the fullness of life and thoroughfare to be inaugurated a second time president. The flags that had fluttered greeting to him in March were furled and draped in black in September. The cheers of spring became the sobs of autumn. Grief had usurped the place of joy.

As with solemn and cadenced tread, the procession moved down the avenue, the people recognized as one of mourners their former president, Grover Cleveland, who had come to pay his tribute to his successor. They recognized, too, their new president, upon whom the responsibilities of the chief executive had been thrust so unexpectedly. With silent salute they greeted him and with them he mingled his tears in sorrow for the dead.

Prominent Women Present.

Among the prominent women present were Mrs, Garret A. Hobart, widow of former Vice-President Hobart, who was escorted by her son, and Mrs. Russell A. Alger, wife of the former secretary of war, Gen. Alger, who was under the special escort of Col. Frank Hecker of Detroit.

At the conclusion of the funeral services in the rotunda the casket lid was removed in order that the immediate friends of the dead president might be afforded the comfort of a last glance at his features and that the people whom he loved and whom loved him might pass the bier for the same purpose. At half-past 12 the crowds began to file through the rotunda and during six hours in which the body was lying in state it is estimated that 55,000 people viewed the remains.

Friends of Mrs. McKinley Alarmed.

Washington, Sept. 18.—The friends of Mrs. McKinley are seriously alarmed about her. They speak with grave apprehension of the days that are soon to come when she will be borne up no longer by her sense of duty and the sustaining force of her desire to perform her full part in the ceremonies that the national character and tragic end of her distinguished husband make appropriate. They dread the approaching days in the quiet of her home at Canton when her "beloved" major will not be near to comfort her in the reaction that will follow inevitably after the present shock. It is believed that she will be able to go through the services at Canton without too great difficulty, but subsequently a collapse is greatly feared. At present her condition justifies the hope that there will be no breakdown, at least until the final offices have been paid to the dead. Mrs. McKinley is considerably weaker than when at Buffalo, but continues to bear up with great fortitude. She gives vent to her grief more freely than at any time since the tragedy. She sobbed and cried for a long time, and these paroxysms of grief sapped her strength to quite a degree. She has had quite a severe shock, however, and in order that she may become gradually accustomed to the change wrought in her life by the sad death of President McKinley it is probable that Secretary Cortelyou and Dr. Rixey will remain in Canton for some little time to soothe and comfort the widow in the grief and terror that must come when in her old home she gradually realizes in its full degree that her main support and comfort in life has been taken away. Among those who called at the White house during the afternoon and spent a short time with Mrs. McKinley were Mrs. Roosevelt, Mrs. Garret A. Hobart and Mrs. John A. Logan.

Roosevelt's First Cabinet Meeting.

Washington, Sept. 18.—President Roosevelt at 3 o'clock p. m. Tuesday convened his first cabinet meeting held in Washington. At this meeting the president asked the members of Mr. McKinley's cabinet to retain their respectiveportfolios throughout his term and announced that his administration would follow the policy outlined by President McKinley in his Buffalo speech.

Case of Smallpox.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 18.—John Tucker Nelson, a 21-months-old baby, whose parents reside at 33 Miller street, has a very severe case of smallpox. The case was discovered yesterday and the health officer notified. This is the only case of smallpox in the city.

Superstitions About Sneezing.

Xenophon, Promothens, Themistocles and Cicero regarded a sneeze as a favorable omen. Among the Hindoos and Persians, however, sneezing and yawning were ascribed to demoniacal possession. The Hindoo snaps his thumb and finger and repeats the name of one of his gods. The Moslems believe that the devil may leap into a gaping mouth, and hence when he yawns he draws the back of his hand over his mouth and mutters this prayer, "I seek refuge with Allah from satan, the accursed."

The Most Expensive Hat.

The most expensive hat in the world is undoubtedly the one which was presented to General Grant while he was in Mexico in 1882. It cost $1,500 and is now to be seen in the National museum at Washington and is the finest specimen of a Mexican sombrero ever made.

The Backslider.

"Many years ago," says the Providence Journal, "in a village not 20 miles from Providence a revival was in progress. A young man, one of indistinguishable twin brothers who had previously been observed, as was supposed, in an attentive attitude at the meeting, rose for prayers, walked to the anxious seat, and there wailed and moaned to such good purpose that the deacons were sure he was on the high road to salvation.

The next day he was overheard in the back yard at home chopping wood and swearing painfully at a refractory log. When remonstrated with for his sudden backsliding, he merely said, "Oh, brother Jim couldn't go to the meeting last night, so I went and hollered for him."

A hopeless man is deserted by himself, and he who deserts himself is soon deserted by his friends.

SHOT HIM DEAD

Cash Helms of Lakeview Was the Victim.

WAS ABUSING FRED NOLAN

Helms Had Rented a Farm to Nolan's Father-in-Law and Wanted to Drive Nolan Off—Shot as a Result—Nolan is in Jail.

Lakeview, Mich., Sept. 19.—Fred Nolan shot and instantly killed Cash Helms 10 miles northeast of here yesterday morning. Helms had rented the premises where the shooting took place to John Walworth, who is in Washington, D. C., during Walworth's absence. Nolan, a son-in-law of Walworth, had been staying with the family. Helms for some unknown reason didn't want Nolan there, and undertook to throw him out. He went to the house, met Nolan in the yard and, it is said, commenced abusing him. Nolan told Helms he wouldn't stand it and started to go into the house, when Helms followed him to the door, continuing his abuse. As Nolan got inside he pulled a revolver and shot Helms in the left temple.

Helms is the last of what in the early days of this section was known as the Helms brothers' gang, which practiced horse and cattle stealing extensively. He had been shot twice before, once quite seriously. He had a brother die in Jackson prison. Nolan is in the hands of the Mecosta county sheriff.

De France Now a Dramatist.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 19.—Stonewall J. De France has written a play. It is a very long tragedy, written in blank verse, after the manner of Shakespeare, and is called the "Tragedy of Lincoln," having the assassination of the martyr-president for its theme. Booth is the central figure of the play, and the conspiracy is developed with numerous details, which the author says have never yet become public. The work is said to show considerable ability, and is now in the hands of an eastern publishing house for perusal.

Snow Storm at St. Joseph.

St. Joseph, Mich., Sept. 19.—The first snow of the season, with heavy hail, followed by a rain storm, prevailed in this section during Tuesday night. The hail was of unusual size and fell in showers. Great fears were entertained during the night that the entire crop of grapes would be ruined. Reports, however, say that owing to the fact that the foliage remained heavy and green, the grapes were protected from the hail. On the windward side of buildings snow one-quarter of an inch deep collected.

Warrant for a Fiend.

Manistique, Mich., Sept. 19.—A warrant has been issued for the arrest of Robert Brink, a teamster in the employ of Finn & McCann. Brink is charged with beating a horse to death with a club. He was sent after a load of tanbark, overloaded the wagon and, because the horse could not haul it, proceeded to club the animal unmercifully. The horse was found with its nose broken and skull crushed. Brink escaped and has not yet been located.

Whipped by One-Armed Veteran.

Iron River, Mich., Sept. 19.—Andy Bovington, who lost one arm in the defense of his country during the war of the rebellion, is just now the hero of the town. Barney Morgan stated in the presence of the veteran that he was glad President McKinley had been shot, and the result proved that the old soldier still knows how to fight in a good cause. Morgan was severely beaten and kicked out of doors by the one-armed veteran.

MICHIGAN BRIEFS.

Ina Sutfin, aged 22, of Clinton, who has been in poor health for some time, hanged herself in her room.

Lew Burhans was convicted at Lawton under the new law making it a felony to steal chickens. He was assessed a fine of $15 or 30 days in jail.

Marguerеt Maher, 6-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Maher of Allegan fell into a tub of boiling water, dying several hours later after intense suffering.

Frank Wisner, employed at Ingrim's shingle mill near Sunrise lake, Oscoda county, was instantly killed on a saw. He leaves a widow and one child.

Mrs. Mary A. Parks, aged 70, of Detroit, who has been visiting at Port Huron, was found dead in bed, having become a victim of heart disease.

The course for 1901-02 of the Students' Lecture association at U. of M. will consist of 15 numbers. The secretary announces that thep expect to have ex-President Cleveland and Wu Ting Fang on the list.

J. A. Roe has leased the Lyceum theater at Pontiac, which has been unoccupied for the past two years, and will reopen it Sept. 23. Mr. Roe intends to devote the house to vaudeville and burlesque.

Charles Downs, a fruit grower of Bainbridge, can thank Frank Hitchcock that he is alive. Downs was driving home from market in an intoxicated condition and did not see a fast approaching train. Hitchcock waded across Ox creek and dragged Downs from his wagon just in time. One horse was killed and the wagon demolished.

Jim Van Antwerp of Kalamazoo loaded up with a choice brand of Kazoo firewater and started to "do" the town. He first terrorized a crowd of girls with a gun, but finally allowed them to depart. His next victim was C. L. Merchant from whom he took several dollars. After being released Merchant gave the alarm and Van Antwerp was landed in jail after a lively chase.

Stood Death Off.

E. B. Munday, a lawyer of Henrietta, Tex., once fooled a grave-digger. He says: "My brother was very low with malerial fever and jaundice. I persuaded him to try Electric Bitters, and he was soon much better, but continued their use until he was wholly cured. I am sure Electric Bitters saved his life." This remedy expels maleria, kills disease germs and purifies the blood; aids digestion, regulates liver, kidneys and bowels, cures constipation, dyspepsia, nervous diseases, Kidney troubles, female complaints; gives perfect health. SIX WERE KILLED

Passenger Train Crashed Into a Heavy Freight.

ROLLED DOWN EMBANKMENT

Passengers Forced Through the Windows and Pinned Down by Heavy Timbers—Escaping Steam Added to the Horror.

Brockton, Mass., Sept. 19.—Switch not properly set brought a passenger express and a heavy freight train together with the resultant deaths of six passengers on the express train, and injuries to 25 others yesterday afternoon on the main line of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad at Avon. The express left Boston at 1:08 p. m. and it was running 40 miles an hour at the time of the accident. Of the six persons who were killed but four have been identified, and these are:

Everett Joyce of Brockton; Gustavus Hay, Jr., lawyer, Boston; Miss M. W. Tonkin, Oil City, Pa., a student at Howard seminary, Bridgewater; Wm. J. Coughlin, Lowell, real estate dealer of Boston.

The two unidentified bodies are those of women, one quite elderly and very large in figure. The other unidentified victim was apparently 28 years of age, with light hair, evidently a Swede.

The bodies were taken immediately to a freight house nearby, where they were viewed by the medical examiner. Of the 25 injured, those most seriously hurt were taken to the Brickton hospital on a special train.

The accident occurred about 1,000 feet above the Avon station, between two stretches of thicket by the side of a steep embankment.

The express was one minute behind time at Avon. A freight train of 30 cars laden with granite, coal and gravel had just been made up on a siding and was proceeding south in the same direction as the express. Engineer Sheldon of the freight train figured that he had four minutes to spare to get on to a side track further down.

One of his train's crew had set the switch of a "cross over" in such a manner that when the freight engine struck it it was turned on to a main track. Engineer Sheldon did not notice this switch quickly enough to enable him to stop his train, and before he realized it the express dashed past on the other track.

The engine of the express and the baggage car succeeded in getting by before the freight engine reached the train, but the second car of the train, the smoker, was struck squarely in the middle and turned over, being thrown down the steep embankment, landing on its side in some soft, thick mud. The third car of the train, a passenger coach, was dragged over by the force of the compact and likewise landed on its side in the ditch. The last car on the train stayed on the track. The collision came with such suddenness that the passengers in the three cars were thrown with great force from their seats. As the cars were instantly thrown upon their sides, many passengers fell upon each other, and those underneath were forced through the windows into the mud beneath. The broken seats and the heavy pieces of timber pinned them down. Many were forced through the windows by the shock. The cylinder on the freight engine was torn off and escaping steam added to the horror. The noise caused by the accident attracted a crowd immediately, and it was only a short time before hundreds were assisting in the work of rescue.

All those who were killed outright seemed to be in the third car, while those injured were in the car which was struck by the engine.

Willing to Oblige.

The young man was from town and was spending a Sunday in the suburbs. He knew far more about horses and carriages than the local livery salesman, and so his interview with the latter when he sought to hire a "rig" for the afternoon was tinged with a gentle air of patronage on his part. "Oh, have you a trap you can let me have?"

"Yes; certainly."

"One that will hold two?"

"Yes, or 20," from the obliging countryman.

"Oh, really! Have you a stylish road wagon?"

"Yes."

"Perhaps you have a spider or a Brewster buggy, or on second thought I might prefer a rubber tired hansom. You can accommodate me?"

"Yes; all kinds cheerfully furnished."

"Can you give me a lash-whip?"

"Yes; with a fancy tassel."

"Oh, well, what kind of a horse can you turn out—a short tailed one?"

"I think so," came gently from the wearied proprietor; then in stentorian tones to his man: "Jake, can you give this gentleman a short tailed horse? If not, cut one at once."—Short Stories.

A Difficulty Removed.

"Dickie, when you divided those five caramels with little sister, did you give her three?"

"No, ma. I guessed they wouldn't come out even. I e't one 'fore I begun to divide."—Puck.

A Night of Terror.

"Awful anxiety was felt for the widow of the brave General Burnham of Machias, Me., when the doctors said she would die from Pneumonia before morning" writes Mrs. S. H. Lincoln, who attended her that awful night, but she begged for Dr. King's New Discovery, which had more than once saved her life and cured her of consumption. After taking, she slept all night. Further use entirely cured her." This marvellous medicine is guaranteed to cure all throat, chest and lung diseases. Only 50 cents and $1.00. Trial bottles free at C. A. Wright's drug store.

Ten Years' Trial

The Story of a Soldier's Struggle

By Brigadier General
Charles King

Copyright, 1901, by Charles King

CHAPTER XIX.

The guns were stilled at Battery knoll, and the gunners, officers and men, clustered upon every little mound and salient, gazing eagerly out over the smoke shrouded field before them. Off to the right front, fire spitting still, grim blockhouse 12 seemed the center of an incipient conflagration. Over at the left front on the Santa Ana road its twin, No. 11, appeared as though afloat in slowly drifting clouds of bluish gray. Across the dike ribbed flats of the ricefields that stretched away eastward and toward the Pasig to the left long lines of cheering soldiery were sweeping to and beyond the gray walls, where the Tagals were still desperately battling to save their batteries. Two battalions of the Columbias, their colonel in their midst, were dashing straight at the insurgent works along the Guadeloupe road. The right wing of the Evergreens, with ringing cheer, had enveloped the native section of the pretty suburban town and were crashing through bamboo and nipa, fighting their heroic way straight for the Plaza and the river bank beyond, rolling up the yelling bands of brown men, well nigh panic stricken at the dash and vigor of the American advance. Across the Concordia, at the heels of the brigade commander, the Washoes had carried their colors, all book rules on the subject thrown with the silken folds to the winds of the morning, and then in magnificent, irresistible charge bore down with the bayonet on the redoubts and earthworks toward the river and, side by side with the Evergreen left and two of the reserve companies of the Columbias, had swept the field like a cyclone, whirling the yelling rebels into the stream, tumbling over guns, gunners and crouching foes until in a mad chorus of exultant cheers they lined up at the bank over which in terror scores of their tormentors of the early hours had plunged in hopes of reaching the opposite shore. Along the parapets, among the bamboo thickets, under the walls of the old gray convent and everywhere across the open field the dead and wounded lay in little pools of brownish red, brave lads in blue and tumbled heaps of stricken foemen, their loose, light uniforms all stained and soaked with gore.

Not until after five long hours of patient endurance had the brigade received the longed for, prayed for word to advance, and the pent up rage for battle burst like a torrent on an astonished foe swept helplessly before it. Foremost in the magnificent charge of his cheering men Langdon, sword in hand, had leaped among the guns at the river redoubt, his cheek seamed by the stinging lash of a bullet, his hat brim torn by the desperate lunge of a bolo, the last thrust of a cursing little Tagal officer fighting like a rat in a corner, for the bayonet of a lusty sergeant had transfixed him on the spot. Close under the outer works a little sad eyed squad had gathered about the stricken form of the gallant old major, dying, sword in hand and with almost a smile on his lips as Langdon knelt and raised the grizzled head and stanched the blood that welled from a mortal wound. Victory brilliant, complete, decisive, had rewarded their determined assault, the warm handclasp, the enthusiastic praise of the brigade commander, his "Gloriously done, Langdon!" bringing cheer after cheer from the exultant battalions, but the heart of the colonel was sore. It was hard to lose such lives as these that were ebbing away there in all the radiance of the morning sunshine. It was sad to part with this trusted and loyal subordinate. It was bitter to think that that other and older friend who had never swerved in sorrow and adversity now lay deaf to the tidings of this most soldierly achievement—that Melville might never know how thorough had been Langdon's vindication of the faith and trust reposed in him. Silently, sadly, the Washoes bore the dying major back to the walls of the old convent within the lines. Reverently they began the gathering up of the dead, and tenderly, these stout hearted fellows, they strove to minister to the wounded, friend and foe alike, while cowed, scowling, sullen, the luckless prisoners were swept up from the curving shores, from under the floors of native huts, from the ditches and drains along the village walls. Away out to the right front, up the river road toward Guadeloupe, the pursuing Columbias were still volleying at Ricarti's rear guard, what there was left of it, but Santa Ana, with all its stores of ammunition and supplies, was the prize of the brigade, and the veteran general of division, riding out to survey the scene and congratulate the victors, stopped to shake hands with Langdon and add his word of praise and compliment and to inquire as to his wound. "Only a pin scratch, general, that wouldn't hurt at all if I could know there was no truth in the story that General Melville is killed."

"Oh, I won't believe it!" said the chief. "Your only authority and mine is Colonel Nathan, and Nathan's only authority is that batch of correspondents he's been housing for the past week. They had it that you were mortally hit and half your regiment killed. Where is Colonel Nathan, anyhow?"

"I don't know, sir," answered Langdon guardedly. "I haven't seen him since daybreak."

The major general turned in saddle and looked back across the bloody field toward the roofs of Paco glinting between him and the white towers of Manila, another mile beyond. The pale blue clouds had drifted away. In their place dense volumes of black smoke were beginning to roll skyward from three or four points in the thronging suburb, and the crackle of burning bamboo sounded like a distant fusillade.

"They've been firing on our wounded and ambulances from the church and native houses," said the general briefly. He was thinking—he couldn't help it—of the words of two battery officers he had overheard as he stood at the knoll watching the triumphant advance of his division. Rodney May was the first speaker, and the battery commander had heard without either reproof or dissent:

"It's just what Eric said at Pawnee ten years ago. He has come steadily up and Nathan gone steadily down in the good opinion of every square man in the regiment. Yesterday they were on a level as far as rank goes; today I'm betting Langdon's name goes in for brevet and Nathan's won't be heard of."

"Where on earth is Colonel Nathan?" asked the brigade commander as he reined in on the Plaza under the walls of the great church where two companies of the Columbias were fanning their hot faces with their broad brimmed hats, and the men looked at each other and grinned.

"Where on earth is Colonel Nathan?" again demanded the division chief as he and the brigadier rode through the smoke of blazing nipa huts from whose walls the lurking Tagal rifles had shot down but a few moments before attendants of the wounded, friend and foe alike. A surgeon, looking up from the stretcher over which he was bending, ducked his head toward distant Paco.

"Away back yonder, colonel. You won't find him this side of the Concordia." And the two seniors exchanged glances. Not until out of range of listening ears was another word spoken. Then the division commander began to free himself of his impressions.

"When the story of this day's work is told, your Washoes and westerners, especially Langdon, will be glorified," said he, "but what shall be said of Nathan?"

Meanwhile Eric Langdon burned with pain and fever under the roof where lay, convalescing of the wounds received early in the first day's fight, his gallant and devoted friend Melville. Langdon pulled through, thanks to native strength and constitution and the tireless devotion and professional skill of the surgeon who received him, unconscious and sore spent, from the hands of the hospital corps. "Doing as well, general, as we can expect after so severe a wound," was Dr. Armistead's almost daily report for a week. "But what will the waking be?"

"If you will permit me, Dr. Armistead, that is a matter with which I shall charge myself. It's time Langdon knew the truth."

And so one day when the soft sea breeze was blowing in from the bay, now studded with transports bringing the long delayed re-enforcements, as Langdon lay, weak, but once again clear headed and craving news of his men, Melville hobbled to his bedside and signaled to the attendant to slip away. "Langdon, old fellow," he asked as they were left alone, "feel as though you could bear a shock today? Your old division commander came in to say goodby while you were asleep. You are named for the medal of honor and the brevet of brigadier general. I wrote the news home by last post."

The pale, thin face on the pillow lighted with a faint flush of pleasure. The long, slender fingers feebly clasped the warm hand extended in greeting.

"How long before I can be in saddle again?" was the question framed by his pallid lips, and the voice was but the ghost of that that rang like a clarion over the field at Santa Ana and swung the Washoes into their magnificent charge.

"Two months or three, perhaps, and not that possibly without a sea voyage to Japan or a run to Australia. You had a fearful wound, Eric, and under God's providence nothing but the best of surgeons and constitutions saved you. Dr. Meade is looking after you now that all is going so well, but for two weeks, lad, it was nip and tuck, and have you any idea who—who pulled you through?"

The Act of Dying.

The popular idea that the act of dying is a painful process often causes a fear of death. But death from even the most painful mortal diseases is usually preceded by a period of cessation from suffering and partial or complete insensibility resembling falling asleep or the pleasant gradual unconsciousness caused by an anæsthetic.

The common phrase "death agony" is not warranted by what occurs in natural death, which is a complete relief from all pain. When death is owing to heart failure or syncope, it is sudden and painless—perhaps pleasant. Death by hanging, there is reason to believe, is attended by a voluptuous spasm. Death by decapitation or electricity is only a momentary shock, hardly felt.

Death by poisoning varies in painfulness according to the poison employed. Opium and other narcotics probably give a painless, perhaps a pleasant, dreamful death. Hemlock, as we know from the account of the death of Socrates, causes gradual insensibility from below upward. On the other hand, arsenic, strychnine, carbolic and mineral acids, corrosive sublimate, tartar emetic and other metallic poisons inflict slow and torturing death. Prussic acid and cyanide of potassium cause quick and painful death.—Humanitarian

A Double Runaway.

"They have a new coachman at the Rippenbangers."

"What's the matter with the old one?"

"He let the horses run away."

"Did they run far?"

"Clear out into the suburbs."

"Anybody with him?"

"Yes, Mamie Rippenbanger. She and the coachman haven't got back yet."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

COOL AND CONVENIENT.

Statler's at Buffalo Saves Visitors the Long Journey Between Town and the Pan-American.

One of the hardest parts of visiting an exposition are the tiresome trips between one's lodging place or hotel, and the grounds. This is especially felt by ladies after a hot, tiring pay, who feel that they must get "home" for a rest, yet would like to return in the evening if it were not so far away.

All this inconvenience may be obviated by staying at Statler's Hotel, which adjoins the Exposition grounds, and which, is in itself, one of the wonders of Expostion. It is the largest hostelry in the world—contains over 2100 rooms, can comfortably accommodate over 5000 people, and has a dining room in which 1200 can sit down to a meal without crowding and with a service as prompt and efficient as the most exacting could desire.

For $2.00 and $2.50 a day, you can get a clean, comfortable room with breakfast and evening dinner included, while those who prefer not to board at the hotel, good rooms can be obtained at $1.00 and $1.50 per day.

Intending visitors to the Pan-American, therefore, can rest assured that by going direct to Statler's they can get good accommodations, and be assured of fair and honest treatment and a very cordial welcome.

PARTRIDGE EGGS.

Said to Be More Nutritious Than the Birds Themselves.

"Few persons are aware of the fact," said a well known physician, "but it is true, nevertheless, that the egg of the partridge is one of the most nutritious things in the world. They are not used for eating purposes except in very rare cases, and then it generally happens in remote rural districts. I have known negro families in the state of Louisiana during the laying season to live on the eggs of partridges. And they would flourish handsomely and grow fat on account of the rich properties of the eggs.

"These eggs, of course, never find their way into the market because they are never taken from their nest except by such persons as I have mentioned, and they rob the nests, I suppose, because their principal food supply comes from this source. Quail meat comes pretty high in the market at all times, and the average man will find it more profitable to spare the eggs and wait for the birds when the hunting season rolls around. These men would pass 100 nests in one day without disturbing an egg. The sport of hunting the bird is an additional incentive.

"The average negro does not care so much about this aspect of the case. He figures that the white man, having the best gun and the best dog, will beat him to the bird. So he goes after the egg. One partridge will lay anywhere from 12 to 20 eggs, and a nest is a good find. I know of many families in rural sections who feast on these eggs in the laying season. I have tried the egg myself as an experiment. I found it peculiarly rich. It has a good flavor, is very palatable and in fact is altogether a very fine thing to eat. Really I believe that the egg has more nutrition in it than the fully developed bird, but of course, as one of the men fond of the game in the field, I would like to discourage the robbery of the nests."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

"Oh, mamma," exclaimed four-year-old Bessie, looking up at the starry skies one evening, "what a pretty place heaven must be when it is so beautiful wrong side out!"

THE BIRTH OF THE MOON.

When the Earth Was a Sphere of Lava, Molten and Flattened.

The earth revolves on its axis once in 24 hours. Millions of years ago the day was 22 hours; millions of years before it was 21 hours. As we look backward into time we find the earth revolving faster and faster. There was a time, ages ago, long before geology begins, when the earth was rotating in a day of five or six hours in length. In the remotest past the earth revolved in a day of about five hours. It could revolve no faster than this and remain a single unbroken mass.

It was at this time that the moon was born—separated, broken off from the parent mass of the earth. The earth was then a molten, flattened sphere of lava. Its whole body was fluid. The tides, which now are small, superficial and, so to say, local, were then universal and immense. They occurred at short intervals. The whole surface of our globe was affected. And the corresponding lunar tides in the fluid, molten moon were indefinitely greater still.

Our day is now 24 hours; the distance of the moon is now 240,000 miles. When our day was about five hours long, the moon was in contact with the earth's surface. It had just broken away from its parent mass. As the length of the terrestrial day increased, so did the distance of the moon. The two quantities are connected by inexorable equations. If one varies, so must the other. Whenever the rotation time of a planet is shorter than the period of revolution of its satellite, the effect of their mutual action is to accelerate the motion of the satellite and to force it to move in a larger orbit—to increase its distance, therefore.

The day of the earth is now shorter than the month—the period of revolution—of the moon. The moon is therefore slowly receding from us, and it has been receding for thousands of centuries. But the day of the earth is, as we have seen, slowly growing longer. The finger of the tides is always pressing upon the rim of our huge flywheel and slowly but surely lessening the speed of its rotation. So long as the terrestrial day is shorter than the lunar month, the moon will continue to recede from us.—Professor E. S. Holden in Harper's Magazine.

DARING ROBBERS

MONDAY NIGHT

Stealing a Gold Watch and Chain, K. of P. Charm and about $17 in Cash.

Last Monday night D. H. C. Bowen and family were attending a party at the home of the former's parents west of town and left Mrs. Wiggins to care for the house.

About 10 o'clock Mrs. Wiggins heard an awful crash and became frightened and ran to a neighbors house. Mr. Green then went and investigated and fonnd only a window pane had been broken, and looking further found nothing had been disturbed and returned to his home.

During the night someone entered the house, and discovered Don's vest, which he had left hanging on the hall rack with his gold watch and chain and K. of P. charm and about $17 in, and walked away with all. The next morning the vest was found lying ln the front yard.

Earle Goodwin Slayton.

Earle Goodwin Slayton was born in Tecumseh, May 19 1878 and was the only son of C. M. and the late A. W. Slayton, died in Colorado Springs, Col., Sept. 11 1901 of appendicitis, after an illness of ten days.

Earle's school life and boyhood were spent in Tecumseh. In 1896 he began working for the railroad company here and remained in their employ about one year. In October '97 he went to Colorado, worked in a mining office about nine months and then went into business for himself. For one of 23 years, he has done remarkably well in business. Always successful he had the foundation started for a large business when his sudden death stopped all.

In Tecumseh, Earle was a welcome and popular boy. In Colorado Springs, he was a popular and well liked young man. The following from the Colorado Springs Mail speaks very kindly of him:

"At 9:55 this morning death closed the life chapter of Earl G. Slayton, one of Colorado Springs most popular and highly respected young men.

Mr. Slayton's life has been hanging in the balance at St. Francis hospital for the past three days, appendicitis which baffled surgical skill causing the collapse. Last night the end was expected at any moment, but life lasted until this forenoon.

Death came peacefully to Mr. Slayton and a number of his most intimate friends were at his bedside to the end. The only near relatives of the young man, his mother and a sister, will arrive in Colorado Springs at 4:30 this afternoon.

He came to Colorado Springs six years ago and interested himself to quite an extent in mining in this state, being quite active, particularly in the San Juan district. At the time of his death he was president of the Consolidated Gold and Silver Mines and Smelting company, and also secretary-treasurer of the Shenandoah Mining company.

Earle, since the death of his father, has relieved his mother from all business cares and responsibilities, and she is completely crushed, and the heartfelt sorrow of the community is given to the mother and sister."

Among those from out of town who attended the funeral, which was held Wednesday afternoon, were Mr. and Mrs. H. Bassett, of Saline, Mrs. H. Fessenden, Miss Ida Pronnett and Mrs. Geo. Mead, of Adrian, Mrs. Welkin, Mrs. Reitzell and daughter Isabelle, of Erie, Penn.

Memorial Exercises At High School

On the morning of Sept. 20 the High School pupils were gathered in the A room for the purpose of holding a short memorial exercise as an expression of our respect and grief for our dead President.

Mr. Kellogg gave a few remarks as introductory, after which Donald Wright read the proclamation issued by Gov. Bliss and also that issued by the president of our village. Rev. Bower then led responsive reading from the 15th chapter of First Cor., followed by prayer.

Then the school joined in singing "Lead Kindly Light." Dr. Howell, Dr. North and Rev. Jones each gave us very interesting talks on the characteristics and sterling qualities shown in the life of Wm. McKinley and brought up many points which were presented in such a way that will be long remembered by all present. The exercises then closed with the singing of "Nearer My God to Thee."

MEMORIAL SERVICE

Held at the Methodist Church Thursday

SPEECHES BY ALL

The Church Pastors.

Places of business were closed all the afternoon, saloons all day. In fact it was a day of deep and heartfelt mourning in Tecumseh. The services at the church were as follows:

In response to the proclamation of the President of the United States and the and the Governor of Michigan, the people of Tecumseh assembled in the Methodist church Thursday afternoon to show their respect for the late President McKinley. It was a representative gathering. The business man closed his place of business, the tradesman closed his shop, the laborer layed down his tools, wives and daughters and servants left the drawing room and kitchen, that they might take part in the memorial services to do honor to the nation's dead. One could see on the faces of the people an expression of sorrow, and of deep sympathy for those whose loss and sorrow is much greater than ours, by reason of those domestic ties so sacred to us all.

The services were very solemn and impressive. A number of addresses were made, which were of a very high order. The music furnished by the male choir of the Methodist church was very fitting and impressive. After a few moments of silent prayer, Rev. Leslie Bower voiced the prayer of the congregation. It was a solemn moment.

Dr. Howell made the first address, in which he spoke of the pre-eminence of President McKinley. It was one man rising above his fellow men, because he was qualified by nature and by training to be a leader of the people. He was an honest man. During all his public life, as prosecuting attorney, as congressman, as governor, as president, no man can point to a single instance in which Mr. McKinley took one dollar dishonestly He reached up to the Divine with a firm faith in Him who is the God of nations as of individuals.

Mr. Wightman, our honored postmaster, represented the G. A. R. He spoke of Mr. McKinley as a comrade and paid a fiting tribute to the memory of him who because of his bravery and heroism rose from the ranks of a private to that of major. There is a difference said the speaker between a man and a conscientious man. Mr. McKinley was a conscientious man; he did what he believed to be right, and was unswerving in his convictions. The shooting of President McKinley was not prompted by animosity toward the man, who occupied this high position, for no one could but love a man so kind and gentle as he but it was prompted by a spirit of hatred to all government. The speaker expressed a desire that the country rid itself of anarchy, and that an attempt on the life of the President be treated as treason.

Miss Haight read a well written and very carefully prepared paper in which she eulogized Mr. McKinley as a model husband, citizen and statesman and urged upon all to emulate those traits of character that made President McKinley the man so universally loved and whose death is so universally mourned.

Rev. Jones spoke of Mr. McKinley as a man of Destiny. I do not use the word destiny as commonly applied to man, said the speaker, but as it applies to one who in the course of events has been a leader of the people. Washington was the founder of the nation, Lincoln the liberator and McKinley the unifier. At no time has the country been so thoroughly united as now.

Rev. Bower spoke of the future. While I am not a prophet, nor the son of a prophet, said Mr. Bower, if the American people believe what they profess to believe, I have no fears as to the future. We profess to believe in God, we say, "In God we trust," if that be true we need not fear. God is not dead. It was no mere chance that George Washington was found among the people in 1766. It was no mere chance that Abraham Lincoln was found among the people in 1860. It was no mere chance that Theodore Roosevelt was nominated and elected vice president of the United States. I believe that Mr. Roosevelt's nomination was providential. We need a man of strong convictions, fearless, but not reckless, resolute, determined. Such a man is Theodore Roosevelt and if Mr Roosevelt should not meet our expectations, I am sure God has his hand on the man who will lead this nation to greater achievements than we have won in the past. So long as we trust in God we need not fear.

Rev. Seeley was the last speaker. He took for his theme some lessons from the life and death of President McKinley. Mr. Seeley paid an eloquent and glowing tribute to Mr McKinley and urged upon all to be loyal and sympathetic. We ought to make it easy for those in authority to govern. We are not perfect by any means said Mr. Seeley, far from it, but we are the best nation the sun ever shown upon. Our late president was not perfect by any means but he was one of the best presidents with which we have ever been blessed. A man pre-eminently fitted by nature, by training and by grace to fill with honor the highest place in the gift of the American people.

The congregation joined in singing that hymn which will hereafter be sweeter to the American people than ever before, Nearer my God to Thee," and Rev. Jones pronounced the benediction. Without donbt this will pass into history as the most memorable service in the history of Tecumseh.

A Serious Accident.

Mrs. E. T. Smith received a letter Wednesday from Louisville, Ky., stating that her husband, who is an employe of the Ohio Southern, had been severely injured about four weeks ago at Crandall.

He stepped into the gangway to get a drink of water and was thrown from the engine, which was going at a speed of about 40 miles an hour. He sustained severe injuries, having his left arm sprained, left jaw bone broken in two places, left cheek bone broken and several large gashes about his head and face.

Mr. Smith was formerly an engineer on the Lima Northern and is well known here. His many friends are grieved to hear of his painful accident. The family are residence of this place and the news was kept from them on account of Mrs. Smith's sickness.

SUICIDE

Miss Ina Sutfin Destroyed Herself Tuesday Afternoon. Ill Health Cause Of Act.

The inhabitants of this village were terribly shocked by the death of Miss Ina, the 22-years-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter B. Sutfin, about 4:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

Miss Sutfin resided with her parents on a farm two miles southeast of Clinton. She went upstairs, locked the door, took a sheet and went into a closet. She threw one end of the sheet over the closet press door, drew it back through the back of the door, and fastened it to a hinge. She then stood upon a chair, tied the other end of the sheet around her neck and kicked the chair from under her. She could easily have touched the floor with her feet, had she wished to. Instead she had to draw them up in order to accomplish the deed.

Mrs. Sutfin went upstairs to see her, and finding the door locked became alarmed. She then went to a field, where Mr. Sutfin was at work. He went to the house, burst open the door, and discovered his daughter.

Miss Sutfin has been in feeble health for some time, and it is thought her mind was affected. She was getting along better of late, and her physician, Dr. Conkin, of Manchester, had ceased calling for the time being. He had, however, warned the parents to be watchful of her.

"Blue" Sutfin, the father, is well known in Tecumseh and all sympathize with him in his affliction.

A Farewell Reception.

A very pleasant reception was given to Rev. and Mrs. Yokom and family at the residence of Chas. Foote, in Ridgeway. There was one hundred or more guests present to enjoy the occasion.

After a general handshaking and social time, all were seated around the spacious parlors and refreshments served. At the conclusion of this part of the program Dr. Loree stepped to the side of Mr. Yokom and addressed him as follows:

"It affords me very gaeat pleasure to represent your friends, the young people of Ridgeway and vicinity, and on their behalf to present you with this chair, as a slight appreciation of your earnest efforts to promote the Master's cause in our little village. We hope that as often as either of you sit in this chair, it may bring to your minds pleasant memories of the four years you have spent in our midst, that you will ever think of us as your friends. May you continue long in the Master's service. With this chair let me, on the part of those whom I represent, wish you and yours, health, happiness and prosperity." Rev. Yokhm made a happy response. After this, another handshaking and farewells, the company dispersed.

Cure all kidney ills.

W. S. Kilmer, passenger engineer on the M. C. Ry., residing at No. 214 Orange St., Jackson, Mich., says: "In 1895 I had considerable trouble with my kidneys from the result of a severe cold which settled there and though I tried every means at hand and treated with doctors the pains through the small of my back became more persistent and severe. To add to my troubles the kidney secretions were unnatural and irregular. At last I was obliged to lay off work. When at home getting no better under the treatment I was then taking, some one advised me to use Doan's Kidney Pills and I procured a box more out of curiosity than from any expectation that they might help me. Now I want this thoroughly understood, when I finished the box I went back to work without a pain or an ache. But to make matters doubly certain I took a second box. Since that time and that is three years ago, I have neither had an ache nor a pain. Is it any wonder that at this date, 1898, I recommend Doan's Kidney Pills."

Every woman in the country ought to know about

Mother's Friend

Those who do know about it wonder how they ever got along without it. It has robbed childbirth of its terrors for many a young wife. It has preserved her girlish figure and saved her much suffering. It is an external liniment and carries with it therefore, absolutely no danger of upsetting the system as drugs taken internally are apt to do. It is to be rubbed into the abdomen to soften and strengthen the muscles which are to bear the strain. This means much less pain. It also prevents morning sickness and all of the other discomforts of pregnancy.

A druggist of Macon, Ga., says: "I have sold a large quantity of Mother's Friend and have never known an instance where it has failed to produce the good results claimed for it."

A prominent lady of Lamberton, Ark., writes: "With my first six children I was in labor from 24 to 30 hours. After using Mother's Friend, my seventh was born in 4 hours."

Insects Become Intoxicated.

Intoxication from the nectar and pollen of plants has been a subject of investigation by Dr. J. M. Weir, Jr. This affects insects, and it appears that the cosmos flower is specially potent as a source of drunkenness in bees and other nectar loving creatures. A bee so drunk that it could scarcely get upon its legs was taken to the laboratory and placed about two inches from a cosmos blossom. It immediately staggered to the flower and began to suck the nectar and in a few moments tumbled over, a senseless and almost inert victim of appetite. Drunken beetles found under the blossoms prove that the pollen must have the same effect as the nectaries.

The experimenter swallowed a half teaspoonful of the pollen and in about 15 minutes experienced a feeling of exhilaration, with acceleration of the pulse and warmth. An injection into the arm of half a dram of liquid distilled from an infusion of the nectaries caused exhilaration for half an hour, followed by nausea.

WHEREAS God in his wisdom has permitted the removal from our midst by the hand of death our brother, David Coryell, and our hearts have been deeply moved thereby. Therefore

RESOLVED that from the manner of his life among us and from the positive character of his Christian experience and testimony, we are fully persuaded that our loss is his eternal gain.

When Everything Sticks.

"In muggy weather," said the retired burglar, "I always used to stop work not because work was unpleasant then, but on account of everything sticking so.

"You couldn't tell what might happen. Anything and everything was liable to stick and make more or less noise when you finally got it open. A window might stick at first and then go up with a bang. I've had a door open on me that way—fly open all of a sudden after I'd been pushing on it a long time and let me through the doorway on to the floor. There's always danger, for instance, in pulling out a drawer that sticks of pulling it clean out and letting it drop.

"There's constant danger of something of this sort happening, and it doesn't pay to take the chances. And it's easy enough to know when to stay home. My rule was never to try to do any work in weather that would rust a jimmy."—New York Sun.

NERVE OF ENGINEERS

IT DOES NOT, AS A RULE, DESERT THEM AFTER AN ACCIDENT.

Desperate Chances the Man at the Throttle Will at Times Take Without Being Able to Give a Satisfactory Reason For His Action.

"I have been often asked why railway engineers disregard their instructions and the warning signals along the line of their road," said the general superintendent of a railroad to a man, "and I have summed it up that it is human nature for men to take chances in their business and that engineers are no exception to the general run.

"Sometimes they cannot give a satisfactory reason why they do so. I will give you an authentic instance of this habit which made me live 10 years in 30 minutes.

"On a road I was at the time connected with was a long trestle over a bay several miles in length, with a drawbridge in the center. The draw had been opened, and as a tugboat was passing through the bridge men heard the rumble of a fast, heavily laden passenger train as it struck the bridge a mile away. Knowing that the red danger signals were set with the opening of the draw, they supposed that the engineer would slow up or stop, as might be necessary. Instead, to their consternation, the train came along at regular speed, and a frightful accident appeared inevitable. They yelled to the captain of the tugboat to go at full speed, and as the boat glided through the draw in the darkness they exerted themselves to swing the draw into the locking bolts before the train could get to the point where the rails separated.

"The engineer, however, disregarded the last danger signal, a few hundred yards from the draw, and came on. By a remarkable coincidence of time and position the draw, which was of course in motion, swung so that the rails of the east bound track were in juxtaposition with the west bound track, upon which the train was running, and the heavy engine and one of the passenger coaches, striking the east bound rails, glided upon the draw and stuck there, the remaining portion of the train being on the west bound track, making almost a figure S of the coaches.

"If the draw had moved the thirtieth part of a second faster or slower, the east bound rails would not have been opposite the west bound rails at the very instant that the great engine struck them, and a frightful disaster would have resulted. When I got out on the bridge a few minutes later, I fully expected to find the train in the bottom of the bay and the draw smashed into splinters. I discharged the engineer on the spot and asked him why he had not observed the signals. He admitted that he saw them, but could not give a satisfactory reason for failing to observe them. He evidently took his chances of finding the draw closed when he reached it.

"The engineer of today is a sober, steady, nervy man, especially on the fast express trains on the big roads. It is nerve that makes one man carry a limited express train through the darkness of the night, fog, sleet and blinding snow at 60 miles an hour. The stories we read about of an engineer losing his nerve after an accident are largely fiction. In 27 years of active railroad life I have had but one or two men apply to me for a transfer upon the ground that their nerves had gone back on them for running the fast trains.

"I have had men who have been flung 50 feet over their tenders in a head on collision and had a dozen bones broken come to me after they had been discharged from the hospital and ask to be put back on their old run. You see, they begin firing when they are about 18 or 20, and the cab of an engine is their home. If they run into a person or a wagon load of people on the track, if it is not their fault, they take a practical view of it; they have to. If it is their fault, we discharge them, and they can take any view of it they please then, for we do not wish in our employ careless men. This is true with all of the big roads, and as a result American engineers of today are about as model a set of men in their employment as can be found."—Washington Star.

Things Not Wanted.

Dogs, pianos and typewriters are the possessions most frequently advertised for sale at second hand, according to an advertising man. Cameras run these three hard in the sale of things desirable to get rid of, and bicycles come next.

Bicycles and cameras would probably head the list, so many people seem to wish to be rid of them, but their tenure of advertising popularity is usually brief. Household furniture, horses and carriages come next in the list. Then jewelry, watches, sewing machines and musical instruments.

Books are far down, almost the last in the list. Folks who have them usually seem to wish to keep them.—New York Sun.

The Charge Not Sustained.

"You say," pursued the chairman of the investigating committee, "that he resorted to no bribery whatever during the election so far as you know?"

"Yes, sir," replied the witness; "that's what I said."

"Did he not circulate several boxes of cigars?"

"Yes, sir, but them cigars wasn't bribes. Here's one of them. You try it."—Detroit Free Press.

Tempting Fate.

"No, thanks," said the sad faced man when he was asked to join a convival party. "The fact is, I don't drink. Found I couldn't afford it, so I swore off. A number of years ago I lived in the west. I was doing well, and I had a bank account that I was proud of. Seeing a chance to double my money, I decided to draw it out. The day was a warm one, and, becoming thirsty, I stopped to take a glass of something cool. I didn't waste more than five minutes and was soon in line at the paying teller's window. The party ahead of me received his money, and I was shoving my check through the window when the teller pulled it down and announced that the bank has suspended payment. I believe that the receiver declared a dividend a year or so later, but the amount was so small that I never bothered to collect mine. It was a pretty expensive drink for me."

"Do I understand, sah," said a Kentuckian who was present, "that you took that drink alone?"

"Certainly."

"It was the judgment of heaven, sah," remarked the Kentuckian solemnly.—Detroit Free Press.

Ingenious.

"I can't help admiring the ingenuity of the landlady at our house."

"In what way?"

"At breakfast time she burns a grain or two of coffee on the kitchen stove, so as to fill the dining room with the odor, and then gives us chicory to drink."

Her Long Service.

At the Salpetriere in Paris there is a woman surveillant of wards who is soon to retire from service that has covered a period of 62 years. She is Mlle. Bottard, and on entering the hospital was given an unimportant post, which she filled for 25 years without promotion. Since her entrance she has had but two vacations of one day each, and these she celebrated by losing her way in the Paris streets. She was presented with the cross of the Legion of Honor by the late Felix Faure as a reward for her faithful service, and she will receive a pension at the close of her hospital service.

A Fish That Gives Paint.

The well known brown pigment called sepia is obtained from a ten armed octopus found principally in the Mediterranean and more especially at the head of the Adriatic sea, where it is caught by the natives for food.

The sepia is contained in a bag and is really the black fluid of which we have all read as being discharged by the creature to cover its escape. Some naturalists say that the fluid is brownish, which becomes more credible when we know that this is the source of sepia.

The pigment is really a powder which dissolves in water; its strength may be estimated by the fact that it will color 1,000 times its own bulk. When the octopus has been killed, the sack or bag is removed and dried to prevent putrefaction. The sepia is treated with ammonia or caustic soda, washed and dried. It is one of the most durable of paints, except when fully exposed to the fierce rays of the sun, and an even surface can be obtained with it more easily than with most paints. Sepia has been obtained from a fossil cuttlefish thousands of years old and found to be quite good for paint.

The Power of Superstition.

"I wish I wasn't superstitious," said a well known young man. "I'd have it taken off."

"Have what taken off?"

"Why, this great big mole on my nose."

"What are you afraid of about it—bleeding to death?"

"No, no; it's just bad luck to have a mole taken off. It's worse than having a black cat across your path or even to have a hooting owl light on the roof."

"I don't know why it is bad luck, but my black mammy used to say, 'Chile, don't yo' nebber let 'em try to take dat mole off'n your nose.'

"'What'll happen, Aunt Sarah, if I do?' I used to ask her.

"'I dunno, chile. Some folks say as the place won't nebber get well, and some say as two mo'll come back. Don't nebber pester what the Lord has gin yo', or he mought make it wo'se.'

"The old negro woman's doctrine was too deeply embedded in my early education for me to outgrow it, even after 20 years."—Memphis Scimitar.

Unknown Canada.

One-third of the area of Canada is practically unknown. There are more than 1,250,000 square miles of unexplored lands in Canada. The entire area of the Dominion is computed at 3,450,257 square miles; consequently one-third of this country has yet been untraveled by the explorer. Exclusive of the inhospitable detached arctic portions, 954,000 square miles are for all practical purposes entirely unknown.

Most of this unknown area is distributed in the western half of the Dominion in impenetrated blocks of from 25,000 to 100,000 square miles—that is, areas as large as the states of Ohio, Kansas or New England are yet a secret to white man.—National Geographic Magazine.

St. Christopher.

The belief was that any one who looked at a representation of St. Christopher was safe for that day from an evil death. The saint was always portrayed of colossal size and is so painted at the entrance of most Spanish cathedrals that all may see him. None of the many carved figures of this saint approaches in size one which was removed from Notre Dame at Paris in 1785.

It was said that St. Christopher's original occupation was to carry people across a stream, and the legend is that once a child presented himself to be conveyed over. At first his weight was what might be expected from his infant years, but presently it began to increase and so went on till the ferryman was like to sink under his burden. The child then said: "Wonder not, my friend. I am Jesus, and you have the weight of the sins of the whole world on your back." Hence St. Christopher is represented carrying the infant Saviour across a river with the globe in his hand.

St. Christopher has an interesting place in the history of typography in consequence of a wood engraving of his figure, supposed to be of date about 1423, being the earliest known example of that art.

Don't Wait.

The greatest danger from heart disease is in neglect. Palpitation or fluttering, pain in the left side, shortness of breath, smothering, fainting or sinking spells, are unerring signs of a weak heart—a heart that demands attention. Don't wait until it is too late. Don't neglect your heart until fatal disease has fastened itself upon you. Begin now to get relief.

CZOLGOSZ' TRIAL

Commenced Promptly at 10 A. M. Today.

NO POISON ON THE BULLETS

Prominent Alienists of America Gathered in Consultation—The Police Will Take Every Precaution to Avoid Trouble.

Buffalo, Sept. 23.—The most important development in the Czolgosz case is the announcement that no poison had been found on the bullets or the revolver with which the anarchist assassinated President McKinley. Chemical and bacteriological examinations were made and both revealed the fact that no poison was used by the murderer. Another examination to determine the exact mental condition of the prisoner was made in the Erie county jail Sunday afternoon by Dr. Carlos F. McDonald of New York, the alienist, who was brought here for the defense by the Erie county Bar association, and Dr. Arthur W. Hurd, superintendent of the Buffalo State hospital. The alienists were with the assassin for one hour and a half, and when they left both declined to discuss the case. District Attorney Penney and his entire staff spent all of Sunday at the city hall preparing for the trial of Czolgosz, which will begin before Justice White in part three of the supreme court today. Mr. Penney had conferences with the alienists and with City Chemist Herbert M. Hill, who submitted his report upon an examination of the bullets and revolver.

No Poison in Bullets.

Immediately after the death of the president one of the staff of physicians in attendance on the president expressed the opinion that the bullets may have been poisoned. District Attorney Penney, who had possession of the assassin's revolver, ordered careful and thorough examinations made. Dr. Hill was directed to make a chemical examination of the bullets and the chambers and barrel of the revolver, and Dr. Herman G. Matzinger, one of the surgeons who performed the autopsy upon the president's body, was ordered to make a bacteriological examination. Dr. Hill reported to the district attorney that his work showed that no poison had been used.

He also presented a written report, but it will not be used on the trial, as that question is now eliminated from the case. Dr. Matzinger has finished his bacteriological examination and his work also revealed the absence of any poison. The district attorney has been informed to that effect, although the formal report has not been submitted. Authorities on this question state that the two examinations form a complete test and that the slightest trace of poison would have been revealed.

Prominent Alienists Consult.

Dr. McDonald and Dr. Hurd, alienists for the defense, called upon District Attorney Penney shortly before 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon and remained with him until 3:35, when they were escorted to the jail by Detective Solomon. The experts went into Czolgosz' cell in "Murderers' Row" and were closed in the cell until 4:45 with him, when they returned to the city hall and held another conference with the district attorney. Fifteen minutes later Dr. James W. Putnam, a local alienist, appeared and joined the conference.

Although great secrecy was maintained at the district attorney's office, it was learned that Dr. Allen McLane Hamilton, one of the most noted alienists in the United States and who was an expert witness at the trial of Guiteau, is in Buffalo. Not a doubt as to Czolgosz' sanity exists in the mind of District Attorney Penney, so that it is presumed that Dr. Hamilton is here merely to meet the question of insanity should the defense determine to make a fight on that ground. Although the defense declines to make any definite statement on the subject pending the final opinion of Dr. McDonald, it is the concensus of opinion among those interested in the case that no insanity plea would be interposed by Judges Lewis and Titus. The district attorney is already fortified with the opinion of Dr. Joseph Fowler, Dr. James W. Putnam and Dr. Floyd S. Crego, Buffalo alienists of some note, that Czolgosz is perfectly sane.

The conference between the doctors, District Attorney Penney and Assistant District Attorney Frederick Haller, who will assist in the prosecution, last until 6:30 o'clock last evening. At its close Dr. McDonald said to an Associated Press representative: "I cannot say a word upon this subject until I have reported my definite conclusions to the counsel for the defense. Judge Lewis is out of town over night, so I shall do nothing until morning. I cannot tell whether or not I will be a witness."

Trial Will Commence Promptly.

Czolgosz' trial will begin promptly at 10 o'clock today and the court has requested that all who expect to attend the trial be in their seats at 9:30 o'clock so as not to delay the commencement even for a moment. Preparations have been made to accommodate over 50 newspaper men, and the court room is so small that it is feared that not more than 100 spectators can secure admission. Those who appear first will be admitted, after which the doors will be closed and the city hall cleared of all except those having business with the city or county departments. Police lines will then be established on the streets at both ends of the city hall and they can be passed only upon the presentation of passes to the court room or good business excuses. The Delaware avenue entrance, which faces the jail, will be locked throughout the trial. These precautions are to be taken owing to the fact that when Czolgosz was being taken back to the jail upon the occasion of his arraignment, the crowds in the corridors surged about the prisoner and hissed him.

Ingenious.

"In what way?"

"At breakfast time she burns a grain or two of coffee on the kitchen stove, so as to fill the dining room with the odor, and then gives us chicory to drink."

SPREADING THE TAX.

Work Has Commenced and Is a Stupendous Task.

Lansing, Mich., Sept. 23.—The work of spreading the tax for this year was commenced by State Accountant Humphrey and several assistants within a few hours after the state board of equalization had agreed upon the basis of distribution, and is being rushed as fast as work requiring absolute accuracy can possibly be done. Even at the best it will be impossible to complete the task before the latter part of next week.

This year 61 separate objects are to be provided for as against 47 last year. The portion of each county's distribution for each object for which a tax is levied must appear in the computation. This, it will be seen, requires 61 different computations for each of the 83 counties, and the combined result must balance with the aggregate state tax levied. The task is a stupendous one.

Black Charge Against the Buell.

Alpena, Mich., Sept. 23.—Capt. Hansen of the lost barge Jupiter, with his wife and child, and a sailor of the name of Olson, arrived yesterday on the tug John Owen. Capt. Hansen declared himself indignant at the conduct of the master of the steamer F. R. Buell, who, he said, left the crew of the Jupiter while they were making preparations to abandon their waterlogged boat.

The master of the Buell reported at Port Huron that the crew of the Jupiter refused to leave their ship. Capt. Hansen said the Buell came within 150 feet of the barge, and her crew asked for assistance, and to be taken off the boat. While they were getting ready to pass the line, Capt. Hansen says the Buell proceeded on her course without apparent reason.

Soon afterward the four persons took to the yawl, leaving Ragan, the owner, and two sailors of the names of Madigan and Smith, behind on the wreck. The latter refused to take any chances in the yawl, it is said, and declared their intention of making a raft of the lumber. They were drowned. Madigan and Smith lived in Alpena.

Board of Health and Smallpox.

Saginaw, Mich., Sept. 23.—The board of health is taking action to provide for a possible smallpox outbreak here this winter. The hospital of detention will be improved and put in shape to receive patients and protect them against severe weather, as it has been heretofore unfit. There is no especial fear of an epidemic.

The Hash House Trust.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Sept. 23.—H. C. Prettyman of the "Campus club," the biggest of all the U. of M. eating houses, has refused to go into the "hash-house trust." This decision will probably lead to the collapse of the whole scheme, for with Prettyman on the outside ready to serve all comers there would be little show for the other boarding houses.

Bit the Conductor's Ear.

Battle Creek, Mich., Sept. 23.—An interurban conductor is minus most of his ear as the result of a row with Burt Fenton, Isaac Wellman and Hiram Schuyler. A disagreement over change caused the encounter. One of the men took a bite from the conductor's ear and but little of that member is left. The men were arrested.

A GENERAL ALARM

Miss Helen Bloodgood Missing From Her Home.

NOT SEEN SINCE SEPTEMBER 19

Is a Wealthy New York Girl—Was Richly Dressed When She Left Home—Police Are Looking for Her —Photographs Sent Out.

New York, Sept. 23.—The police of this city have sent out a general alarm for Miss Helen A. Bloodgood, 18 years of age, daughter of Wm. Bloodgood, treasurer of the American Felt Co. They have also sent photographs of the girl to the chiefs of police of all the principal cities of the country. Miss Bloodgood has been missing since the morning of Sept. 19. The family is well-to-do and the father declares there is absolutely no reason for his daughter leaving home voluntarily. When she disappeared she was extremely well dressed and wore expensive jewelry.

CITIZENS WANT TO FIGHT.

Sent Word That They Would Exterminate the Reds.

Spring Valley, Ill., Sept. 23.—Twenty anarchists, armed with double-barreled shotguns and 1,000 rounds of ammunition, are standing guard over the office of L'Aurore, the notorious anarchist publication which expressed joy at the murder of President McKinley and satisfaction over the announcement of Assassin Czolgosz that he was an anarchist.

Meanwhile fully 2,000 citizens of adjoining towns have sent word to the authorities here that they are ready and extremely anxious to start at a moment's notice for this place to assist in exterminating the reds. The temper shown here is at the boiling point, the defiant attitude of the anarchist colony serving to increase the general anger.

John Cabilli, editor of L'Aurore, has been in hiding ever since a recent mass meeting gave evidence of a deside to demolish his publication and adorn him with a coat of tar and feathers.

Today a committee will wait upon General Manager Dalzell of the Spring Valley Coal Co., who resides in Chicago, and insist that he discharge every known anarchist in his employ.

The anarchists and their sympathizers number fully 500, and if this step is taken it will mean that one or two of the mines will have to close down until other men can be brought in. The anarchists threaten to hold a mass meeting this evening. If they persist in this plan a riot is almost certain to ensue, and there can be but one ending, for the patriotic citizens here will be heavily reinforced by outsiders, who will come prepared for business.

CASHIER CAPTURED.

Absconded With Large Sum of Money From Dawson.

Vancouver, Sept. 23.—The steamer Hai Ting arrived from Skagway bringing a report of the alleged absconding of Edward Daniel, cashier for Barsh & Co., merchants of Dawson, with a sum of money variously estimated at from $35,000 to $50,000. Daniel is said to have been taken in charge since on the American side near Eagle City, Alaska, and he probably will return to Dawson to stand trial.

The mystery regarding the death of Porter Wyborg, who recently disappeared from Dawson, has been cleared by the finding of the body in the river below Dawson. The man had fallen off the wharf and drowned.

The Hai Ting brought over 100 passengers and several hundred thousand dollars' worth of gold dust. The trip was a rough one coming down and the weather was very foggy.

Aguinaldo Fears Assassination.

Manila, Sept. 23.—Aguinaldo's body guard, Major Alhambra, two captains, two lieutenants and 29 men with 28 rifles, surrendered about 40 miles north of Baler, island of Luzon, to Capt. George A. Detachemendy of the Twenty-second United States infantry, took the oath of allegiance and were released. After Alhambra kidnaped the presidente of Casiguran, Sept. 12, Capt. Detachemendy requisitioned a steamer and pursued him closely. He would have been captured within an hour if he had not surrendered.

Since Aguinaldo left Gen. MacArthur's house for his present place of confinement he has never left the premises, although he is at liberty to do so if accompanied by an officer. The reason assigned is that he fears assassination at the hands of the [illegible] of the late Gen. [illegible]

Verdict of Manslaughter.

Gunnison, Colo., Sept. 23.—The jury in the case of Game Warden Frank Mahoney, on trial for the killing of W. A. Womock at Grand Mesa lakes in July last, have returned a verdict of manslaughter. Sentence will be imposed later.

Womock was killed while fishing in the lakes without permission of Wm. Radcliffe, who claimed ownership of them. Later all the buildings on the lakes were burned by mobs and Radcliffe asked protection of the state, and subsequently called upon the British ambassador at Washington for protection for his property, claiming to be a British subject.

Anarchist Most Arrested Again.
